According to figures compiled by Auditor General Fuller, $2,451,827.75 has been paid to the counties throughout the state by the liquor interests. This is the largest heading the list with $912,000. Last year the amount was $1,625,211. And in view of the fact that 30 out of the 83 counties in the state are "dry" this year's amount is considered large. Thus far non-resident liquor dealers have paid about $15,000 to the state in licenses.

Underfoed Whitefish Seized.

Game Warden Pierce has received notice that he has taken 2,000 pounds of undersized whitefish from a man on Pine Island in Lake Superior. No arrests have been made as the wardens have been unable to locate the violators.

Ask for Incorporation.

Applications are being received by the secretary of state from private institutions about the state commonly called "private hospitals," for incorporation.

Some time ago Secretary Marl Murray of the state board of corporations and charities began a crusade against these institutions, which under the state law, are required to be incorporated, and he found that many of them were not amenable to the law. Since then investigating and his efforts are already bearing results.

Delinquent Taxes Low.

Auditor General Fuller says that less than four per cent of the total state tax is delinquent, while the amount outstanding is less than $221,000.

Nobcomon county is credited with the largest delinquent tax, but 95 per cent. having been paid into the state treasury. Oscoda county is still slow 18 per cent. of its total tax, while 23 counties owe less than one per cent. Wayne county is delinquent to the extent of $70,000 or about six per cent.

Wayne County Has Best Roads.

Wayne county expended more money in the building of state road rewards roads for the past fiscal year than any other county in the state of Michigan, according to L. C. Lapham, assistant state engineer of highways.

The records show that Wayne county, while not building as many miles of road as some other counties (Saginaw leading the list in this respect) is building a far better class of roads than most counties. In the state road way department says the county is making an effort to build the roads leading out of Detroit nearly as good as the pavements, and while not so many miles can be built in a year, yet the money paid out exceeds that of other counties.

The total amount paid out by the state for reward road during the year ending July 1, is $133,349, and in addition to this amount $12,000 has been paid out this year on roads that were accepted in 1909.

The state's other northern counties it is a noticeable fact that far better progress is being made in the way of good roads than ever before. Only a few days ago the township in which the small town of St. Helen is located in Roscommon county voted to bond for $15,000 to build good roads and claim a share of the state reward.

In a number of cases township and county officials call on the state department to send an expert engineer into their section to work with and advise them as to the best kind of roads to be built.

Foreign Liquor Firms Must Pay.

Through a decision rendered in the supreme court the state treasury will be enriched several thousand dollars, the law which requires foreign liquor dealers conducting wholesale houses in Michigan to pay a yearly license of $500, has been upheld and declared constitutional.

The case reached the supreme court when Theodore Swensson of Houghton, agent for the William Bergalthal Distilling company of Milwaukee, Wis., was arrested for violation of the refusal of his company to comply with the state law and Circuit Judge Flannigan discharged the defendant. The state appealed and affirmed the decision of the circuit court in the lower court.

Auditor General Fuller has expressed considerable difficulty in collecting the $500 license and he says that he has been approached by foreign liquor firms transacting business in Michigan at the present time, who have not complied with the law. The representatives of the Scotch whisky houses have emphatically declared that the law was unconstitutional and unreasonable. He said until it had been tested in the supreme court, it is required that Auditor General Fuller will institute proceedings against the offending firms at once.

"Sam" Scandal is Killed.

The investigation was conducted under the examination of the work, declare that the plans and specifications have been adhered to in every way.

Michigan university may take to participating in an active and official manner before the year closes. The board of regents has received an invitation to join the Intercollegiate Aviation Association. The matter in charge of Prof. Herbert Sadler, head of the department of mathematics, engineering and marine architecture, and he says that he is very interested in aviation. Prof. Sadler has entered into correspondence on the subject and has power to act.

Jurisdiction of Railroad Commission.

Whether the state railroad commission has any jurisdiction in determining the fitness of the men employed by the Grand Trunk as stokers, firemen and what have you, is a matter Attorney General Kuhn will be called upon to decide.

Owing to the fact that the Grand Trunk is an interstate line, Chairman Stone of the railroad commission "doubts if the commission doubts its authority" to proceed in the matter. The strikers claim that the Grand Trunk is employing incompetent men as strike-breakers to operate the trains

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Saginaw—A movement has been started in Saginaw among the union barbers to increase the cost of a shave to 15 cents. Heretofore it has been but ten.

Mason—Twenty years ago Loren Wilcox sustained the loss of his mother of the house. The injury gave him much trouble and about a month ago he underwent an operation, four loose pieces of bone being removed. Blood poisoning set in and he died his death bed.

Saginaw.—Charles Hodgeman, an infant, through his next friend, Frank Hodgeman commenced suit against the Saginaw & Flint Street Car company for $10,000 damages alleged to have been received the night of the reported collision between two interurbans, April 16. In the declaration particular stress is laid on the fact that the plaintiff lost a tooth.

Monroe—E. H. Reynolds, oldest interurban in the state and pioneer of Monroe, died at the age of ninety-one years. He was born in Dobbs, N. Y., and came to Michigan in 1840. He survived a shipwreck while crossing Lake Ontario in his prime. Now and then the whistle would stop and a voice would give a cheery greeting to Virginia.

Virginia always had back limit answers. Miss Cornelia had no use for the neighbors on the other side of the fence. She could hear them fighting and refused to recognize that the son of the family was different from the others. She would not admit that his industry was redeeming the run-down farm that his father had let run to waste. Indeed, Mark Graham's garden promised to be superior to Virginia's. Virginia had spoken of it that morning in a shy conversation over the fence.

"I don't see how you make your lettuce and radishes grow so fast. I've had mourning dove in my garden ploughing in show above the ground, and years will be ready to eat long before many days."

"Well, a man knows more about such things," Mark had said, with a glance at the well-ploughed land. "Why don't you let me plough it, Virginia? I'm not a bad hand at ploughing in show above the ground, and years will be ready to eat long before many days."

"Oh, I'd die if I didn't. Aunt Cornelia would keep me working in the house, and I love to be out of doors."

"It's a shame," Mark muttered, "that you should be shut up in the house."

Virginia knew what he wanted to say to her. She knew that he loved her, and she loved him. But she would never tell her as long as he was a poor and struggling farmer. She knew that her Aunt Cornelia was Miss Cornelia would never consent to their marriage.

She sighed and he saw her shadow pass.

"I wish I could tell you all that is in my heart, Virginia," Mark said.

Virginia smiled bravely and said, "But you mustn't, Mark," and then she had run away from the back of the house.

Miss Cornelia had seen the two by the window. She had refused to keep Virginia, if possible, out of the garden. Miss Cornelia had her own ideas about matrimony for her niece. The young doctor in the village had been at her, and then, and whose admiration of Virginia was obvious, had money, position and a good practice. Therefore, Miss Cornelia argued, if Virginia married, why not marry the doctor?

Virginia liked the doctor, but when she was rude with him or walked with him or talked with him on the while front porch there came to her on such moments of ecstasy as she felt in these brief meetings with Mark at the division line of the two gardens. Somehow in her mind Mark seemed associated with the woods, the blue sky and the sunshine. She knew if she married the doctor she would have to live in town, shut up in the big house that had come to him from his grandfather. On the other hand, however, if she married the doctor he would give her the pretty things her soul craved, for even as Virginia loved the pink and white of the orchard and the blue of the sky, so she loved the daintiness of silken gowns and the sparkle of jewels.

Therefore that night when the doctor asked her to marry him, Virginia put him off with a timid half promise.

"I must think about it," she said, "and want to talk to my aunt and wonder if she could live the rest of her life in the dim old house in town, with a man she did not love.

In the morning she went out early to work in the garden. She could hear Mark's whistle, but even when he called "Good morning" she did not go to the fence. Her head had bid her marriage dreams and her hands trembled as she dug around her radishes. Presently Mark came closer and called, "Come here, Virginia."

There was a masterful note in the voice that made the girl tremble as she rose. She rose and went to him.

"Virginia," he said, abruptly, "I can't stay in the village that you are going to marry the doctor."

Virginia flushed. She trained, "But I am not," she cried, and in a moment she was in Mark's arms and he was kissing her as he never had kissed her before. Then he said, "Get your things together, Virginia, I'm going to have the spring go and summer come without these moments of happy meeting.

"I am not, Mark," she said again.

"Then tell me that you love me away. She could not tell him what she thought of him. That would be too much. She bobbed down at her. "I know what you want to say, Virginia," he scolded her, gently. "And I wish you would say it. It seems as if I had no right to ask you to love me and to marry me. But you won't be happy with the doctor, you won't be happy with anybody but me, Virginia."

It was the serene assertion of the man who knew that he had met his mate. Virginia knew, and there was not nothing of conceit, nothing to offend, in its sense of security. She was his, as he was hers, and she knew she should separate them.

Miss Cornelia, unconscious of the awakening of the young people, came down the path and across the garden to play the part of cruel fate. She had ruled Virginia in everything for years and she would rule her still.

"Virginia, go back to the house. I don't want you lifting in this vegetable garden," she said.

"Aunt Cornelia, I am going to marry Mark," Virginia returned, calmly.

It was useless after that for Miss Cornelia to protest, to threaten, to plead; Virginia had made up her mind. Mark came to the door and she followed Mark. She said it over and over to herself as she sat in the garden. Aunt Cornelia," was all the answer she would make to the girl's pleadings and threats. Mark and were in the house once more.

MADE $4,000,000 FARMING

David Rankin, the "Rockefeller of Missouri," Started Work Without a Cent.

Columbia, Mo.—Sixty years ago, in Indiana, a country boy was married. When the clergyman had finished, the young man turned his pockets wrong side out. "I have just five dollars to my name," he said; "take it all."

Then he explained to his bride as they walked away, "Now I shall have an even start."

The boy became a farmer—but a farmer who worked harder and believed that a penny saved was a penny and a quarter earned. The farmer's wife helped in the management of his farm, scratched his gray head a sum more and said, "Doing pretty well, after all." The figures totaled up $4,000.

David Rankin—for, as the detective stories say, it was none other than he who "started to be the world's richest farmer." That is what he claims to be—and—not a stock raiser nor a agriculturist. The first agricultural journal he ever owned he went in debt for. Now if he doesn't raise a million bushels of corn in a season he considers that he has had a crop failure.

He has 25,640 acres of land that are actually producing. There are men who own more land—but David Rankin is a farmer. If the number of his fattening hogs falls below 12,000 he loses interest.

The business secret of Rankin's life has been: Specialize, stick to it, and early to bed. He has made only one trip abroad. "I couldn't sleep over there," he explained.

David Rankin is eighty-four years old, but he never spends an idle hour. He is the Rockefeller of Missouri. He has given at different times $700,000 to Tarkio college, and considers it his best investment.

His motto is: "A farmer is a business man who lives in the open."

BEAUTY BECOMES PRINCESS

Liane de Pougy, One of Paris' Handsome Women, Weds Man Who Fought for Her.

Paris—Known as the "Eternal Beauty" and acknowledging to her forty-seven years, Liane de Pougy of Paris only a few days ago threw marriage with a youthful scion of the royal house of Roumania became a princess. Her boyish husband is Prince George Ghika, cousin of Prince John Ghika, who married Hazel Singer of New York.

Liane, in spite of her mature years, is still one of the handsomest women of the French capital, and for many, many years was a racing beauty over whom kings and the members of the nobility went wild. She owns a mansion in the Rue de la Nova and on the masterpiece of her room are jewel kinkacks worth over a million, presents to her from royal and other distinguished admirers. She is said to be the richest woman of her class in Paris. A quarter of a century ago Liane was the wife of Lieutenant Pourcher. Before securing a divorce from her he shot her in the leg with a revolver.

Since then before the professional beauty had attracted international attention by attempting suicide for love of a scientist whose fame is world-wide.

The youthful prince whom she has married, seemed very much beat by fate. Liane is a woman who had laughed at her big bill, later having to pay a fine for check kiting.

Now that she has both fortune and a title it is said that the famous beauty will exercise all her powers to shine in society and to cut a dashing a feat which, however, may prove somewhat difficult.

Tip the Assistant.

A word to those who may be planning for the first time to go to some famous Paris house for their gowns. The assistant must be tipped. Otherwise one might sit unnoticed for a long time, while every one seemingly too busy to heed. An assistant must be solicit as she passes her embraced, after which miracles will occur. A crisp one-dollar note will even, at its end, give one or two frocks have been purchased, bring forth from some reticent reserve a "bargain," and it will go one in verity.

For Needs of Humanity

By B. L. Palmer, Layman Houston, Texas

No movement of any character has ever attained great proportions or had an important place in the history of human activities unless it was founded upon the needs of humanity and had for its objective the improvement of conditions under which mankind lives.

Some of these movements have been along the lines of scientific research, and had for their purpose the gaining of greater knowledge, by which the human race should be benefited. Some have been political movements to give to mankind a more perfect system of government. From the days of Martin Luther down to the present time there have been various movements of a religious nature which have had for their purpose the correction of improper conditions and the raising of mankind to a higher plane of spiritual life. But whatever has been the character of the movement, each one which has attained success has been founded upon some human need, and has been successful only in the measure in which it satisfied that need. The laymen's missionary movement is destined to be successful and to occupy a prominent place in the history of the church because its only purpose is to supply a human need, and because it has adopted proper methods for accomplishing its purpose.

The work of the layman's movement is not revolutionary in its nature.

We do not propose to do a new work, but to take a new hold upon the old task and do it right.

Perhaps you think the work of the church has been well done all the time, but if you think thus, it is because you are unfamiliar with the first work which the laymen's movement purposes to do is to inform you.

We are at present engaged in a great campaign of education throughout the whole land.

It is our purpose to give to every man in the church a thorough knowledge of conditions.

We confidently believe that information is the only thing wherein the church is lacking.

We believe that churchmen have the love of Christ in their hearts, and the desire, the intelligence, the energy and the means to do the work which Christ began.

For he only began the work—no more—and then as a sublime evidence of his faith in his followers, He intrusted the completion of the task for which he gave his life to frail human clay.

When Christ's work ended man's work began.

The time for lapmeerial, mission work has been left to the preachers and the women.

The men of the church have felt that their duty was done when they had contributed to the support of their local church, and perhaps shared in the administration of its temporal affairs. The laymen's movement exists today for the sole purpose of disillusioning men—of awakening them and arousing them to a sense of their full duty as the sons of God.

We have been too prone to think of our duty to the unevangelized people of the world as a collective duty—the duty of the church as a body. It is true that the evangelization of the present generation, it will be done only after we have come to realize that we have a personal duty and must assume responsibility in connection with the salvation of mankind.

But what can we do? What can individual efforts to the work? You may study, pray, give and serve.

Study that you may know the need, pray that God may bless your efforts. That you may adhere to your duty, give that those who are devoting their lives to the work may have the means to carry it on, and serve in whatever place God may find for you to do a service, no matter how humble and unimportant it may seem.

Yes, you say that you have not given much time to study and to prayer, but you assert that you have given to the support of missions for years. That's a fact. It is the statistics of the church show that we have been giving to missions, but how much have we given? The Presbyterian churches of America have in recent years given on an average the sum of 42 cents per member each year to this cause.

Forty-two cents! If you have given more than that, you have given more than the average.

Forty-two cents to carry salvation to those who dwell in darkness! And then we sing, "Will there be any stars in my crown?"

Brother, do you want a 40-cent star in your crown?

It is really surprising to note how many churchmen there are who do not themselves with great energy or temporal affairs and yet cannot be induced to undertake even a small part of the Lord's work.

Can it be that there is such a thing as a spiritual inertia? If so, there is the men or our churches have in mind.

The unmistakable symptom of the book-worm. It has not the energy for continuous reading."

One Result of Trust.

One of the counsels of Christ that we have not yet, too often forget, is the "pet not"—"do not worry." He tells us why we should not worry. It is because our Heavenly Father knows all our needs. He that feeds the birds and gives to the flowers their beauty will not neglect to care for his children. Worry distracts and dishonors him, as well as deprives our own life of sunshine. It weakens us and impairs the quality of our work. The young lions do lack and suffer but never! say they seek the Lord shall not want any good thing. We are heirs of God and joint heirs of Christ. All things are ours. "Because thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice. We are made for trust and for happiness. Trust is the key that opens the great treasure chest of the universe.

HIS WELCOME FOR PRODIGAL

Cowboy Would Have Reversed Proceedings as Recorded in the Scriptures.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey of the famous juvenile court in Denver, in one of his courses of a recent address in charity:

"Too many of us are inclined to think that, one mistep made, the boy is gone for good. Too many of us are like the cowboy.

"An itinerant preacher preached to a cowboy audience on the 'Prodigal Son.' He described the foolish youth's extravagance and dissipation; he described his penury and his husks feeding with the swine; he described his return, his father's loving welcome, the rejoicing, and the preparation of the fatted calf.

"The preacher in his discourse noticed a cowboy staring at him very hard. He thought he had made a convert, and addressing the cowboy personally, he said from the pulpit:

"'My dear friend, what would you have done if you had had a prodigal son returning home like that?'

"'Me!' said the cowboy, promptly and fervently, 'I'd have shot the boy and raised the calf.'—Detroit Free Press.

Silenced the Critic.

Charles Sumner, when in London, gave a ready reply. At a dinner given in his honor, he spoke of "the ashes" of some dead hero. "Ashes! What American English!" rudely broke in an Englishman; "dust, you mean, Mr. Sumner. We don't burn our dead in this country." Very politely replied Mr. Sumner, with a courteous smile, "your poet Gray tells us that 'Even in our ashes live their wonted fires.' The American was not criticized again that evening.

A Dreamer.

"You say your boy Josh is a dreamer" said the literary lady. "Does he write poetry or romances?"

"Oh," replied Farmer Corntassel, "he don't write anything. But he jes' natchely refuses to get up till 9 o'clock."

Petoskey News: After having been practically closed for several months, the old reliable Clifton House has reopened greatly improved in many ways. It had been the intention of the management not to reopen the house as it had formerly been, but there has been such an insistent demand that Mrs. Howes has yielded to it, and after the expenditure of several hundred dollars in refitting and repairing the building and dining room, it has been decided to reopen it on the American plan as formerly conducted.

Traverse City Eagle: The per capita payment for funds for the Ottawa and Chippewa Indians was exhausted to-day, making a delay of several days necessary before Agent Dickson can continue his work in this city of paying off the Indians. Mr. Dickson notified the department at Washington Saturday that the funds were about exhausted, but there is considerable red tape about the matter, and it will probably be four or five days before further funds will be placed to his credit in the United States sub-treasury at Chicago. When Mr. Dickson started out on the work, he was bonded for $10,000. The department then deposited $10,000 with the assistant treasurer of the United States at Chicago, and Agent Dickson has drawn upon this amount until it is exhausted. He will therefore have to wait until another $10,000 is placed in the sub treasury at Chicago, before any more payments can be made. So far Agent Dickson has issued about 500 checks. These are for families and also for single persons. Where families are concerned, the head of the family draws one check for the entire family —It appears to be true that the leading Grangers of the state, three most prominent in the direction of the order's affair have decided that Chase S. Osborn is just as desirable for the interests of that organization as in other respects for Michigan's good, as the next governor. In Muskegon county Mr. Osborn was introduced to several large gatherings by the members of the State Grange, who prepared and presented the resolutions which appear here. He is an earnest supporter of Mr. Osborn. It is time of course that the interests of any great body of Michigan people in a movement and direction of state affairs are indentical with general interests. I have Osborn's candidacy in favored in all sections of the state by those best informed as to the present needs of Michigan.

MANIAC KILLS THREE

TURNS IN FALSE ALARM AND FIRES VOLLEY AT FORMER COMPANIONS.

THEN SLAYS WIFE AND BABE

Dismissal From Service Inspires Tragic Revenge in Insane Slayer Makes Escape and Police Start Systematic Man Hunt.

San Diego, Cal.—Bert S. Durham, a discharged member of the local fire department, ended a mean hunt Monday by fatally shooting himself through the head after killing three persons, including his wife and child, mortally wounding a fourth and severely injuring a fifth.

Durham, in a desire for revenge, turned in a false alarm and when his former fellow workmen responded he fired a volley of shots at them, killing one and probably fatally injuring two others.

Durham then ran to his home and with a piece of steel wrapped in a handkerchief beat his wife and baby about their heads as they lay asleep, killing both.

Durham, who had been hunted relentlessly for hours, dodged his pursuers, leaving them without a clue, boarded a car in the residence section and rode quickly to the plaza in the center of the business district, where he put a bullet into his brain. He recovered consciousness later, but the coroner says he will die.

Durham's victims were:

Lieut. F. Grant, engine company No. 3, San Diego fire department.

Mrs. Bert S. Durham and child.

Peter Sampsell, captain hose company, dying.

Guy Elliott, driver hose company, may recover.

At the first shot Grant fell from his ladder through the ground dead, with a bullet in his head. At the second shot Elliott pitched to the ground with a bullet through the stomach. Durham then leveled his revolver at Captain Sampsell and fired twice, both bullets piercing Sampsell's lungs.

Two more shots, fired at other members of the crew, went wild, after which Durham drew another revolver and with it covered his retreat as he started to run from Assistant Chief Sandoe, who had driven up in answer to the alarm. As he disappeared in the direction Durham shouted back to the assistant chief: "Tell my wife I am going to kill myself."

Providence, R. I.—For the first time since he has been under bombardment by Bristow of Kansas and other insurgent senators, Nelson W. Aldrich hit back.

"That man Bristow is telling a pack of lies on me," he said. "He has told so many lies—he manufactured them so rapidly—that he couldn't know where to begin should I take notice of him and enter denials.

"If the charges had been made upon the floor of the senate I might act differently," was suggested.

With a sardonic smile that ran into a chuckle the Rhode Island senator responded:

"Yes—yes, you notice they don't talk about me that way on the floor of the senate."

ROYAL COUPLE FLEE SPAIN

King Alfonso and Queen Victoria Start for England Because of Enmity of Clericals.

The royal couple will stop in Paris on their way to England and have a conference with President Fallieres. Much significance is attached to this as France has done to the church what Spain, in a lesser degree, now is attempting. When he has established Victoria safely at the court of Britain, however, the king will return to Spain. It is said, going direct to Madrid. There he will take full charge of the tangled situation growing out of the government's defiance of the church.

HINT SUICIDE IN RAWN CASE

VERDICT, DECLARES RAILWAY MAN WAS SELF-SLAIN.

Jury's Open Finding May Make It Necessary for Heirs to Bring Suits to Obtain Accident and Life Insurance.

Chicago—Ira G. Rawn killed himself, according to the verdict returned by the coroner's jury Friday. The Roman president was shot with his own revolver, held in his own hand, the verdict reads, but whether accidentally or with suicidal intent is not specified. The jury said the former explanation was the less probable. The finding of the jurors is described as "an open suicide verdict."

The verdict was reached after a three hours' session and after much lively debate in the jury room.

Although none of the jurors would talk about their action, it was said that three held out for a verdict of suicide and the others for one of accidental shooting, and that the open verdict returned was a compromise, to break the deadlock.

Three life insurance companies will refuse to pay the policies in suit until contest the payment of policies is settled in the courts, it is declared that relatives of the slain railroad president will further contest suicide to collect the insurance.

No representative of the Rawn firm by was present when the jury's find ings were made public.

The prevailing consensus of opinion among those present at the inquest was that Rawn killed himself.

CRIPPEN WILL NOT FIGHT

Doctor Is Formally Arraigned and Informs He Will Not Contest Extradition.

Crippen, on the verge of a collapse, with his voice so weak it scarcely could be heard by Magistrate Ames, announced in court Monday that he would not make a fight against extradition to London.

This statement followed his formal arraignment in the provincial court on the charge of staying "an unknown woman" the police believe to be his missing wife, Belle Elmore, the Aiver less actress.

Crippen's bowing at the suggestion of Inspector Dew, was continued 18 days, and, at the expiration of that time, unless he decides to fight extradition, he will be sent back to London in the same boat which bought the prisoner and his companion, Miss Leane actress.

Eighteen Blacks and Three Whites Are Killed in Pitched Battle Near Slocum.

Palestine, Tex.—Following a pitched battle between the negro population of this section in which at least 30 blacks took part and a posse composed of state rangers from Houston and Galveston and a detachment of Texas rangers from Austin, it is reported and said, that 18 negroes have been killed and at least three white men are dying in an improvised morgue in the Slocum, Texas, undertaker's and of undertakers from Houston.

Beginning Friday afternoon the race riot between the negroes and white vaged continued until Sunday night.

The rioting began near the village of Slocum. Several reasons are assigned as the cause of the racial feeling. First, the refusal of a negro to pay an obligation for which a white farmer stood sponsor.

Later came reports of secret meetings among the negroes and an alleged confession of a negro that the murder of the man in question, James Spurger, and his family was planned. The situation reached a climax, however, when a negro was discovered advancing on Spurger from the rear, armed with a shotgun. He was trailed for some distance and shot by a posse when he refused to surrender.

Zelda Dameron
By
MEREDITH NICHOLSON
Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

He decided to go direct to Dameron and speak to him of the dress in the ball deed, more from curiosity as to what the old man would say than with any idea of helping the situation on his part, considered professionally or personally; but he justified himself on the score of his old relationship between Carr and Dameron. Carr was out of town, Leighton did not yet know his exact address at this time. And there was old Rodney Merriam, his best friend, and there was Zelda.

Dameron sat at his desk with a mass of papers before him as Leighton entered. The old man wore a serious air to which the mass of papers contributed. A puzzled look crossed his face as he raised his eyes and regarded Leighton dreamily. Then suddenly, as though just recalling Leighton, he smiled and rose from his chair.

"My dear Mr. Leighton, this is a rare pleasure. I was just thinking of you."

He had never greeted Leighton so cordially before.

"Pardon me, Mr. Dameron, I have come on an important errand."

"I can't imagine it," said the old man, seriously.

"But I do so on the score of your old friendship with Mr. Carr. He is absent, or I should have referred the subject of my errand to him. You authorized me to have your own counsel—in Mr. Carr's absence."

"Myself! I have enjoyed Mr. Carr's advice though so many years my junior. I feel I have a fair knowledge of the law, but have had no occasion to use Mr. Carr's by a gesture—we have both enjoyed the luxury of being a client and preceptor," and he bowed over his friends. "What is it?"

"I have just happened to learn of a deed given by you to the Pinkie Land & and Improvement Company for a block of lots facing south of town. The Pinkie is a pure oversight, but you neglected to set up an order of exclusion upon the sale. I thought I would mention it to you. It is a sale of very large importance. And now I am sure you will pardon me."

Morris turned toward the door, but the old man rose and extended his hand.

"Ah, he began, with a droll air of eagerness, "we have had the same preceptor. You know it, of course, Mr. Leighton. I quite admire it in you, and I thank you. I am aware of the procedure, you indicate, that I have provided for it. The Pinkie Land and Improvement Company is a name invented by some lawyer, and the gentlemen to whom I have sold the property are quite regular, I assure you. My dear sir, trustees are nearly at an end. Only a few days more of responsibility. I shall make a new deed if necessary—but the purchaser will be satisfied. We are all—all honorable men."

"Very good, sir," said Leighton sent out. Dameron's manner had been odd, he and man had frequently spoken to him at home, but usually with a manner of kindness. He had never before certainly had been with exception made Dameron Morris had never called him by his Christian name, and he was just a little puzzled by the cordiality of the greeting. The poorest lawyer at the Marlena bar would probably have had the old man had deliberately lied to him. Dameron's companion in the Zelda's friend, he knew somewhat, but he was a stranger to Leighton. Morris had never spoken of Zelda's friends, and Leighton had never met a friend of Zelda's. He had seen a number of times, and he had thought Zelda watched him with amusement.

"If you knew how funny you look Uncle Rodney, I'm sure you would laugh too," she said to the gentleman in question, Mr. Leighton. Please, uncle, don't scold me!"

"Yes, Yes, to be sure," said Dameron, absent-mindedly, and Leighton and Zelda exchanged a smile. "Zelda is when you have your property. There are some things connected with many affairs that you must learn."

"But father attends to everything, you're certainly wasting your talents on me. Do let us talk of something cheerful."

"You know that your property, what your mother had and wished to give to you, was left in trust. Your father is the trustee."

"Yes, I know that."

"Your father's powers have been absolute. He is not required to to give an accounting to any one—except, of course, to you, when he turns over the property on your birthday—that is, tomorrow."

"Yes, I believe to-morrow is the first of October. I understand perfectly that mother wished me to know that she trusted father—as she expected me to trust him. Father is so—so absolute!"

"Everything was left to your father," Leighton said, "there were a few minor requirements. In case he should sell property—and he has sold a great deal of the court; and he was to buy other real estate with the proceeds—he—"

"That's probably important, but not interesting. I really dropped in to say what you were going to give me for my birthday—I'm sorry I spoke of it."

"Your father has sold some of the real estate."

"Of course. You exercise a lot of trouble by handling real estate—I mean taxes—taxes and all that. But once more, what's the joke?"

Morris color was doting out of her face and his voice had become metallic. The old man's smile was nothing merely. It had come to him that Zelda was making a direct attack upon her father. She had little time to spend, and she had to make that she should meet it. It angered her that Leighton should witness such unfamiliar. Law and business were unknown subjects to Zelda, but she followed her uncle's recital closely. Her mother had never used before her that he had never used before to talking to her.

"Your father has sold a great deal of your property," Leighton said, "he has invested—he thought he could—he has invested—he forgetfulness. The court's is not secured in at least one case. Of course, this can be corrected."

PLANT THAT QUENCHES THIRST.

"Surfeit of the Desert," the Barrel Cactus, Life-Saver.

Strangers who set foot alone in the desert often die; native animals and native birds find there a little food, water or edge of the lack of it. For the native animals and birds know what the strangers do not—that there is water in all the deserts, and that the recipient of this water grows plants which, by means of their roots, absorb water from the rain that has come and stored it up in reservoirs, for use in time of drought. The method by which this operation is carried on are, in many cases, wonderful. Dignity is the methods by which nature works to make the plants resin water after it has been absorbed. A cactus with the microscope shows how this is done, but it is enough here to say that the interior of a plant that looks like a cactus is filled with water storage cells. The amount of water, moreover, which one cactus holds in its interior is extraordinary. A desert traveler who cut into such a sample of the storage tissue has shown over 95 per cent.

The Strand says the common name of this veritable water bag of the desert is the barrel cactus, or bisnaga (Mex). Its botanical name, echinocactus Emoryii, one specimen of which is shown in the conservatory of the department of agriculture at Washington, reached 170 pounds and measures weighing one ten and measuring nine feet high and three in diameter. It was brought received at Kew, but soon died owing to injuries in transit.

Some years ago, when Frederick V. Coville of the department of agriculture, of Washington, in company with Dr. T. Mac'Dougal of the New York botanical garden, went to Mexico seeking a location for a desert botanical laboratory, Coville, who is now chief of bureau in Washington, he made a special study of the barrel cactus. The investigations took place which, these two men, made, in the Sonora, Mexico, region, near the railway station of Torres, a region in which the bisnaga abounds.

Water is abundant, the railway was at hand, in the neighborhood of Coville and Mac'Dougal, the Yaqui Indians—one who from old-time practice knew how to dig for water in the desert—may be traveler in the desert may quench his thirst. He first picked out a cactus a little over three feet high and twenty inches in diameter. He then acted off the top and exposed the white interior, raising the top from the rest of the plant as if it were a lid on hinges. Inside could be seen a pulpy structure, evidently saturated with water. Although it was noticeable that the water did not exude from the pulp when the cut was made. The Yaqui then cut a stake about three inches in diameter at the lower end, and began to mash the flesh of the cactus into a pulp. By this means he made in the cactus a sort of bowl, and soon had collected a suitable quantity of this pulp. With a gourd dipper he by handfuls he squeezed out the water into the cup. The flavor of the water was slightly salt.

Curing a Cramp.

Is it in the leg? Does it come in the night? It may be easily relieved. Simply take a good sized piece of salt and rub it briskly for a cramp. When it comes wind the cord around the place and rub briskly. Then give each and a sharp pull. That will relieve the cramp, which will not come on again the same night. For a permanent cure of these spasms one should go to a physician.—Philadelphia Record.

Restless Respiry.

"Before their marriage he said she would be treated like a queen."

"Well?" answered Miss Cayenne, "he has kept his word after a fashion. His household is very like one of those little European monarchies."

Know How To Keep Cool?

When Summer's sun and daily toil heat the blood to an uncomfortable degree, there is nothing so comforting and cooling as a glass of Surprising, too, how the food elements relieve fatigue and sustain one.

The flavour is delicious—and Postum is really a food drink.

Merely a Prevaricator.

A doctor relates the following story: "I had a patient who was very ill and who refused to have gone to a warmer climate, so I contrived to try what Nature would do for him. I had a friend who was very ill and confined to his room and by suggestion induced him to think it was the sun which would cure him. The ruse succeeded and he was getting better rapidly when one day on my arrival I found he was out and left word:

"Did it fall, after all, then?" asked one of his friends.

"No," replied the doctor, "he died of sunstroke."

Qualified.

A prominent western attorney tells of a boy who once applied at his office for work.

"This boy was bright looking and I rather took to him.

"'Now, my son,' I said, 'if you come to work for me you will occasionally have to write telegrams and take down telephone messages. Hence a good high degree of schooling is essential. Are you fairly well educated?'

"'I be,' he said, confidently.

"'I be, he said.'—Independent.

A Real Argument.

They were talking about argument, not in the abstract, but as applying to concrete cases. "What do you mean by the most unanswerable argument you ever heard?" one bachelor asked a married man.

"That's very easy," he replied. "When you wife says, 'if they can afford it, we can,' there is no law in that—and never will be."—Youth's Companion.

WELCOME THE ISSUE

REPUBLICANS EAGER FOR BATTLE OF BALLOTS.

Splendid Record of the Party in Power Makes Certain the Verdict That Will Be Returned by the Voters.

Champ Clark brought "glad tidings of great joy" to the Tammany braves July 4, in speaking with typical lamentic fervor of a stump speech on independence day, that victory would be the "perch" on the banners of the Democratic party not only in the congressional election this fall, but in the "main event" two years hence. The orators have chosen for their slogan in these campaigns "The administration's extravagance, the tariff and the trusts." On either or all of these issues the Republicans have by far the better of it and will "out-class, out-fight and outlast" the opposition, if the voters have anything approaching ability to weigh facts and vote accordingly.

The Taft administration has accomplished anything at all it has been responsible for reduction in the operating expenses of the government. This is a commendable thing, and if he continues as he has thus far done, he will stand exceptionally well with the substantial in the close of his official term.

The working of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law is a vindication of the wisdom of President Taft, who signed it not as the best tariff law ideally possible, but as the best which has been enacted so far in the history of the United States.

If the Democratic party could get the tariff off the backs of the jungles of Africa to outdo "Teddy," if possible, there would be some chance to elect a Democratic president in his absence.—Accomac (Va.) News.

The tariff has nothing to do with the high price of foodstuffs; there have been practically the same rates of advance in Canada as in this country.—Steubenville (Ohio) Herald.

Danger in Democratic House.

The president is his party's leader, and his party is on trial. The work of the administration to go forward. It is hatred in mid-term, so to speak, because in the end a Democratic house would halt it. That body would immediately begin the assets for advantage in the presidential race and introduce the matter of logic. Democratic would be helpless.—Washington Star.

Eleven Months of the New Tariff.

The preliminary statement issued by the department of commerce and labor has issued a statement showing the relation between the customs receipts and the average ad valorem rate of duty under the Payne-Aldrich tariff law with those under the Dingley, Wilson and McKinley laws. The showing is highly favorable to the new law.

If there be a Democratic house it will be difficult to find a Democratic statesman without a tariff bill concealed about his person.—Washington Post.

UNFAIR TO AMERICAN WORKER

Democratic Policies Would Mean Subjecting Them to Ruinous Competition.

China is threatening to repeat what has been done in Japan in the way of manufacturing for export. Shanghai has eight large cotton mills in which are employed over 30,000 Chinese at spinning and weaving. In one mill 1,500 persons are employed in day and night shifts, the children earning about four cents a day, and the wages of adults averaging as higher than 20 cents a day. Modern machinery is being imported from foreign countries and Chinese operators are sold to be quite to learn. The Chinese will soon make a good deal of their own cotton goods, so, in fact, they do now. The United States has lost a good deal of its Chinese trade as a result of unfair Japanese competition. England is suffering to a less extent in the same way. The Chinese are sending pig iron to the Pacific coast, and will no doubt be sending cotton and other products in time if not kept out by efficient protection to the industries in this country. America workmen cannot compete in point of wages with either Japanese or Chinese. Japanese workmen produce large quantities of rugs which are now sold in the United States, the work on which costs in Japan only two or three cents a day. This takes bread out of the mouths of American workmen, but that is the kind of competition the Democrats want to subject American workmen to by the reduction or removal of tariff duties.

The Tariff and High Prices.

It continues to be very hard to make the theory fit the facts in the contention that the tariff is responsible for high prices and for increased inability of the people to buy commodities. The income tax law of the United States committee has not gone far, but it has been sufficient to make the rich people in the United States of America who have laid it all to the tariff." Full opportunity has been given to examine such statements, and yet, says a Washington dispatch, in no single instance has a statement been found who merited increased prices, except in certain instances, by charging champagne, to the tariff. And the drift of foreign trade under the new law has been equally confusing to the Democratic argument. The Dutch sent "The Imports for the nine months ending with March show an increase of $225,000,000 over the corresponding period of the preceding year, and yet most of the articles on which the tariff was lowered show a falling off. Tea and coffee, both on the free list, have both fallen off, while sugar, on which the duty was reduced, has fallen off $1,000,000 in nine months. Lemons show an increased duty, show an increase of $200,000. Silk cloth goods, with a decreased duty, show a decrease of $1,000,000, and the importation of chinaware, on which the duty was materially increased, has jumped from the nine months $2,500,000 to $5,000,000." Inescapable truth is a great demolisher of free-trade fustian.

Surplus Instead of Deficit.

The end of the first fiscal year in which Secretary Franklin MacVeagh has been in charge of the United States treasury shows that there is a surplus of $9,402,452 in the year's ordinary receipts and expenditures. It is a record that was absolutely unexpected a year ago, when the deficit in same items ran to $58,734,955.

The average citizen of the treasury statistics as constantly as possible. They have so many strings and cross strings in their bow, that it takes a financial mind to find out what they really mean. This fiscal year's surplus is not an actual surplus, as the expenditures on account of the Panama canal are not included in the figures for the Panama canal. With these payments included there is a real deficit of $25,884,844, but figuring the same way it was $118,792,357 last year. It is legitimate finance to leave the Panama payments out of the current expenditure column, because they are but temporary disbursements for which the money is to be reimbursed by a bond issue.

Whichever way the figures are taken, however, Mr. MacVeagh has made a wonderful record, and it is one more of the president's promises is redeemed.

The Linen Industry.

Mr. Pogue, in an address delivered before the President Taft, who signed it in Philadelphia, called attention to the fact that this country turns $250,000 to 10,000,000 tons of the fiber each year after extracting $60,000,000 of linseed oil and cake. The strange thing is that if manufactured into fiber would be worth $600,000,000. Here is an opening for a great industry in this country. There is no linen industry to amount to much at the present time but in time, if sufficiently protected, such an industry will be created here that will give employment to thousands of American workmen and produce in this country the linen which is now imported.

The Rubber Scandal.

Aldrich blusset admitted in the tariff revision that rubber goods could be manufactured for less in this country than in any other; yet the tariff was increasing the duty on rubber manufactures from thirty to thirty-five per cent, apparently for the direct benefit of himself, his son, the Guggenheim and a few others, who, immediately after the adjournment of congress, proceeded to organize the Guggenheim rubber trust and to advance the prices of all rubber articles an average of more than twenty per cent. It is not probable that Senator Aldrich and Vickersham will proceed against the rubber trust under the Sherman law. At least, he proposed to repeal that law so far as it applies to rail roads. But it is within the power of the people to retire the members of congress who are responsible for the rubber outrage and the other tariff-levying devices of the tariff law.

A high tariff means high wages. A low tariff means low wages. The man who works for wages ought to know what kind of tariff he wants.

ANNUAL LOSS IS ENORMOUS

Two Hundred Million Dollars a Year Might Be Added to Wealth of Country.

Computing that there are in the United States at least 300,000 indigent sufferers who should be cared for in Charitable or semi charitable asylums, the National Tuberculosis Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis estimates that the annual cost to the country for the treatment of these persons would be $50,000,000 at the rate of $1.669 per day per patient. At the lowest possible estimate the country loses $200,000,000 a year from the incapacity of these indigent victims of tuberculosis. This would mean a net saving of $150,000,000 a year to the United States if all victims of consumption who are too poor to afford proper treatment in expensive sanatoria were cared for at the expense of the municipality, county or state. And this amount gain does not include the enormous saving that would accrue from the lessened infection due to the segregation of the dangerous consumptives in institutions.

SCRATCHED SO SHE COULD NOT SLEEP

"I write to tell you how thankful I am for the wonderful Cuticura Remedies. My little sister had eczema for five years and when her mother died I took care of the child. It was all over her face and body, also on her head. She scratched so that she could not sleep nights. I used Cuticura Soap to wash her with and then applied Cuticura Ointment. It did not give quite half the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, together at a cost of less than a dollar, when she could see a change and they cured her nicely. Now she has eleven years and she never has been bothered with eczema since. My friends think it is the best great thing the baby was cured by Cuticura. I send you a picture taken when she was about 18 months old.

"She was taken with the eczema when she was two years old. Her face was covered with big scores and her mother had all the best doctors and tried all the best salves and medicines without effect until we used Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. H. Kiernan, 563 Quincy St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 27, 1909."

OSBORN'S TOUR A TRIUMPH

HIS FEARLESS WORDS HAVE FOUND APPLAUSE AT EVERY POINT.

CONGRESSMAN M'LAUGHLIN ENDORSES GOO MAN FOR GOVERNOR OF MICHIGAN.

Beginning at the Straits of Mackinaw, July 5, Chas S. Osborn, candidate for governor, has motored his way down the west shore of the Peninsula state, until on July 27, he reached the Indiana line. The tour from the straits to the state's southern border has been unique not only in its comprehensiveness but in its political features. No man a candidate for public office, has ever attempted so careful and exhaustive a canvass of Michigan, and no man in the state's entire history ever met with such a reception. The trail of his car traveling southward has been marked by such a growth of sentiment in his favor as to cause wonderment and delight in the minds of those who are actively interested in the success and progress of his campaign.

From Emmet to St. Joseph county, Mr. Osborn has been met by large and attentive audiences. His fearless words have found applause in every hamlet, village and city which he has visited; his positive declarations have caught the popular ear, and his earnest statements touched a responsive chord in the hearts of his hearers. Following the complete tour of the tour through each county, men have declared in the most positive terms that at last a candidate for governor had been found who said what he meant and meant what he said. Who would not shiftly shall and trim his words to fit the place or the audience, but spoke out what was in his heart with courage and conviction.

Mr. Osborn during the past two weeks has repeatedly declared his opposition to the Warner administration and welcomed the opposition to his candidacy. He has not failed on every occasion to say that the state machine was opposing him in every way it could, and he always added that he was glad of it. Upon repeated occasions he described just how the state employes, carrying out the behest of their superiors, were using their political rain in Osborn's success, are employing the time for which the state pays them, using the stationery for which the people's money is spent and traveling about the state on state account, devoting practically all their time to opposition to the Osborn candidacy. Recently Chase Osborn has told his auditors that the report of the state dairy and food department for the month of July shows an increased expenditure of $1,000, practically every dollar of which is public money contributed from the state treasury, to promote the political fortunes of the Warner-Kelley political dynasty. Twenty new inspectors were added to the state payrolls in this department alone last month.

The state labor bureau has also practically abandoned every effort to do the work for which it is created, and from Commissioner "Dick" Fletcher down, the bureau is spending its time and money campaigning for Pat Keller. Hampered by lack of funds in the appropriation for his department, Fletcher has laid off the old employes of the department in order to make new appointments wholly for the political effect. Upon the little town of Charlotte with only three small factories, during a recent week, three factory inspectors descended, and under guise of factory inspection attempted to stem the overwhelming tide of Osborn sentiment in Eaton county.

In the Tenth district a deputy game warden has openly boasted that he proposed to spend all of his time in that district until September, although the necessity for game protection does not exist. He is there, he frankly says, to protect Pat Kelley's fences. These are the tactics which Osborn is fearlessly exposing and denouncing, and the denunciation received responsive echo wherever uttered.

One of the features of the trip down the shore was the open and frank endorsement of Osborn by Congressman James McLaughlin of the Ninth district. This statement from Congressman James McLaughlin made Osborn's success in the Ninth sure beyond the shadow of a doubt. Another feature of the trip was the declaration of support for Osborn from O. H. L. Wernicke of Grand Rapids, one of the leading business men of western Michigan and recently a candidate for the Republican nomination for mayor of Grand Rapids, an honor which he came within forty votes of winning.

Mr. Osborn has now toured Emmet, Charlevoix, Grand Traverse, Leelanau, Benzie, Lake, Kalkaska, Wexford, Oceanic, Mason, Manistee, Newaygo, Muskegon, Allegan, Van Buren, Kalamazoo, Branch, Cass, St. Joseph, Calhoun, Berrien, Barry and Ionia county.

He is now engaged in a tour through the eastern counties and before primary day arrives will have spoken to the people of every county in Michigan.

Both Kelley and Musselman have toured the upper peninsula. Both toured their lines. Careful scrutiny reveals absolutely no break in Osborn line. Kelley and Musselman together will not poll 5,000 votes above the straits.

On Thursday, July 28, Mr. Osborn was the guest of the Taft club at Detroit on the excursion to Tashmoo park. The crowd included some 2,000 people and among them the most active political workers in the state's metropolis. A poll of the crowd showed 75 per cent as favoring Osborn.

An Osborn majority of big proportions now seems assured in the First, Second, Third, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth districts, while if sentiment for Osborn keeps swinging as steadily toward his column during the next two weeks as during the past two weeks in the Fourth and Sixth districts there two will fall in line. This leaves the Fifth alone as debatable ground and even in that district the Osborn leaders are sanguine and enthusiastic. Claims of Osborn carrying Grand Rapids, the home of Aaron Mesnick, are frequently heard.

The movement toward Osborn has assumed all the proportions of a landslide. The people of Michigan are done with Warnerism, and they will not tolerate four years more of it by proxy, with Pat Kelley the puppet and Fred Warner pulling the strings.

SUCCESS IN GOLF.

The Secret Lies in Keeping the Eye Unswervingly Upon the Ball.

"To succeed in keeping the eye unswervingly upon the ball is the one and only real secret success in golf." So says J. H. Taylor, professional, champion and author of a big book on golf.

How culpable an entity the mind is, and how often it disobeys the simplest of injunctions, the following narrative will show. I had a little conversation recently with one of the most scrupulously careful of players, a gentleman who, during his pupilage at all events, read book upon book on golf and ludiciously endeavored to carry out the precepts therein contained; who at every tee spent an inordinate amount of valuable time in planking his feet, measuring his distance, making sure of the grip of each particular digit of each particular hand; in wagging and considering and rubbing thought with himself before actually making his stroke. There really ought to be a time limit for the address. I had a little conversation with the gentleman. He had been hot year somewhat off his game and had learnt a lesson. "And what," said I, "does your professional say is the matter?"

"Well," was the answer, somewhat hesitatingly enunciated, "he says I am taking my eye off the ball."

If these things are done in a green tree, what shall be done in a dry?—Arnold Haultman in Atlantic.

A Hermit's Cave.

Close to the city of Sydney, New South Wales, with a train terminus almost at its door, yet hidden away on the rocky shore of one of the bays of the firtamed harbor, is a cave dwelling. Here for ten years or more a man of retiring and literary disposition has made his home in a cave. In the center is a draped bed with mosquito curtains. Photographs and colored prints adorn the walls and table. Visitors, of whom there are rather too many, since the recent advent of the tourist, to please the hermit, are always attack with the scrupulous cleanliness of everything in the unique dwelling place.—Strand Magazine.

New Kind of Greek Fire.

A new kind of so-called Greek fire has been invented by a German officer. It differs from the old Greek fire in that it is not employed in the incendiary sense by which ships were once upon a time destroyed, but is poured out on the water and directed against hostile vessels. The fluid which occasions this fire, and the composition of which will not be disclosed, is of such a kind that it floats on the water and it is impossible to extinguish the flames.

Sior, Mair and Iorwerth

Of what nation should you guess King Sior, Queen Mair and Prince Iorwerth are the rulers present and in late? No, not Abyssinia, nor Cambodia, nor yet one of the Balkan states. Their chief palaces are Buckingham and Windsor, and in certain parts of their dominions they are known as King George, Queen Mary and Prince Edward. But to their loyal Welsh subjects they are Sior and Mair and Iorwerth.—Youth's Companion.

Falling Robes That Resulted in a Most Graceful Attitude.

Harry Anderson tells a story of Mary Anderson's brilliant season in London. "Her first appearance was as Perdita," he says in the Bound Magazine, "and I thought her the most charming figure I had ever seen on the stage.

"She totally missed her cue after a performance at the Lyceum, and when she asked me the position I would like her to take I mentioned one she had executed in the second act, in which she stood holding the drapery in her hand, which was coming on her like, 'Do you really mean that?' she asked. 'Yes; that attitude struck me as the most artistic of all your graceful movements.' 'Well,' she said, 'as a matter of fact, my robes had come unfastened and were falling off, and I was holding them on, but I shall now purposely make them slip in the same way.' And that pose was repeated nightly during the run of the play.

"On the first night at the Lyceum she was moved in the great scene by the touch, picturesque lover, played on that occasion by Hamilton Jack Burnes. As she rose to her feet it was perceived, to the delight of us all, but to the thermometer of the actors, that Mr. Barnes' wig had caught in the shoulder clasp of Perdita and rose from his head with her and further, more refused to be detached for some time.

"Even this popular actress could not resume the mood of the piece. She was laughing hilarious in Sir W. S. Gilbert's play—and a charming Gilbert she made—when, in the critical scene in which she appeals to Florizel to enable her to forget Hermione and Cynthia together again, she refrained had up her arms and, mistaken-lady looking up at the gallery, cried out: 'The gods will help me!'

"To Miss Anderson's surprise, all the occupants of the gallery, as if by prearrangement, called out with one voice, 'We will!'"

THE BIGGEST SMUGGLERS.

They Are Not the Society People Who Get the Advertising.

"Society people are supposed to be the biggest offenders," said a jeweler's official, "but it is simply that they are more lucky. We had a Brooklyn lady who smuggled in $1,000 worth of jewels and then got tripped by the inspector's attention. He was smart and had the goods back.

"There was, too, he continued reflectively, the lady who had been back and forth every year to Paris and who bought a diamond ring each year. He had his old one and brought the famous Star Jacob in to exchange it for a new one with enormous excuse. Naturally the inspectors guessed it. He must have learned of his visits, and a doctor who went to see it found the story of the purchase and noticed up.

"There was a rich from Omaha who came to Paris for a few fortnightly with jewels, and there are the dyeing rules regarding the importation of clothes, and there are the manufacturer who also sent her goods to Paris to and smuggle the rest.

"There was the lady who came in with his short fancy shirt with jewels, and there was the dyeing who smuggle in laces and handkerchiefs, and there was the manufacturer who declare lost or three quarters in and smuggle the rest.

"There was the lady who had bring their purchases in with faked certificates of value, and there are buyers of cheap jewelry who bring in great cases of plated silver and recorders, etc., with magnificent amphibies, rubies and even diamonds set in with lots of glass and these move estate weeks of work for the jewel experts in the appraiser's storeys.—Washington Times.

CITRUS FRUIT CULTURE IN CUBA

BY I.A. WRIGHT

CHING the first week in February, 1910, the Cuban National Horticultural society, an organization the membership of which is almost exclusively in American hands, held its fourth annual meeting in Havana. In connection, a horticultural show was open; among the exhibits were citrus fruits from every section of the island. The fruits were large, juicy, clean, thin-skinned, heavy, beautifully colored and delicious in flavor. Florida had sent across grape fruit and oranges from famous centracks of the peninsular state, to facilitate invidious comparison, and the comparison, when made, showed that Cuba can produce citrus fruit of first-class quality, and, moreover, that she is doing so.

Citrus fruit culture is the principal interest of American and Canadian settlers throughout Cuba. Cubans and Spaniards are growers of no citrus fruits save pineapples—the grape fruit and orange groves belong to the English-speaking colonists. Orange and grape fruit culture is the business which has been boomed mercilessly by land companies advertising largely and sometimes unscrupulously in the United States and in Canada during the past ten years. Their customers, arriving in Cuba, have insisted upon growing nothing but grape fruit and oranges, even in regions where other crops would assuredly have proven more immediately profitable if not the better investment in the long run.

For instance, there are Americans and Canadians growing citrus fruits in the heart of Vuelta Abajo and in other parts of Pinar del Rio province on lands that might be made to produce tobacco of the qualities which have made western Cuba famous the world around—this one crop, were the owners willing to cooperate with Cubans on the particular system according to which the newcomer furnishes the requisite capital and the native furnishes the skill no less necessary to success in the delicate undertaking. It is a notable fact that few Americans or Canadians who themselves make the actual work in their tobacco fields have found this crop profitable. There are tribes in the trade of which Cubans are masters, especially those persons whose families have for generations cut of land engaged in tobacco culture entirely. They seem to be possessed of no intuition which enables them to handle the seedling, the plant and the leaf, when germinating, when maturing, and especially when curing. In a manner to leave a better outcome than any foreigner is likely to compass. To grow the very best tobacco requires capital. The venture is a gamble, the result of which, however, is known in a single season. If the planter win, he probably takes all his money." If he loses, at least it takes him only months, not years, to find it out.

In the isle of Pines, which was formerly a cattle and hog country, pineapples constitute a staple crop for sale in Cuba proper. American grape fruit growers consume large quantities of canned condensed milk, at high prices, as well as large amounts of canned meats and vegetables, despite the fact that some good pasturage exists, while still more could doubtless be planted, and the fertile fare that the vegetables in question only large variety can be grown along the river banks, or, really, almost anywhere else where irrigation is possible. They also import hay and feed at ridiculous cost. All this into a region where corn at least can be grown and large herds used to "feed" themselves.

In central, but most particularly in eastern Cuba, Americans and Canadians are developing groves in lands admittedly adapted to sugar cane, which is a quick, certain and profitable crop, sold either in the field, or cut and delivered wherever the owner may prefer, ready to buy up the cane. They are growing their trees on sites outlaws would assuredly prefer for coffee and cacao, or, more wisely, for the numerous indigenous crops (manaca, tembladera, etc.) for which there is constant and remunerative demand.

American and Canadian settlers in Cuba, including the isle of Pines, are citrus-fruit mad. In Pinar del Rio, in the Isle of Pines and in central and eastern Cuba there is, nevertheless, in their madness so much method, plus grit and utter inability to realize the odds they are "up against," that it seems to be very probable they will succeed regardless of the time and hardship are to them no object at all.

Pinar del Rio is a province possessed of most fertile lands in certain districts. There are among the foothills and in the "Organos" ranges valleys rich valleys; unfortunately, some of the choicest are as yet almost inaccessible. There is good land always along the streams, and arable areas are to be found, here and there, everywhere. Also here and there and everywhere there are worn-out fields, sun baked through years, which wear, however, to the inexperienced eye, the aspect of virgin, though lightly wooded or savannah lands; there are also other sections—desolate pine barrens—where no man ever yet saw the purchase real estate might amount to a whole block of attempting to grow anything. There are, too, south of the mountain range, on the plain which drops gradually from its skirts to the Caribbean sea, certain sandy, gravelly reaches, inur in plant food. If so than otherwise, for, exactly the opposite of the case in the west, these far eastern lands need to be reduced.

They are almost too rich, and the fruit of trees thus produce, particularly young trees, is not to be compared in size, flavor and pithy. These defects, nevertheless, time remedies, for as groves age they lessen the supply of plant food. Eventually it will become necessary to fertilize the trees, and then greater will be the result their fertilizer, can exert the quality of their fruit.

They have, meanwhile, acquired their grove without the expense for fertilizer the grower in the west has been put to in order to produce his trees, on the other hand, has been to less expense than the man in the east in the matter of clearing, and he has not had to sit up nights weeding lest his grove from disappearing under a tangle of tropical vegetation.

The obvious conclusion is therefore, that six is somewhat dense. Groves in both eastern and western Cuba will produce trees and good fruit, but neither will do so for any owner not willing to pay the price under one head or another in cash and also in hard work.

It is conservatively estimated that no man should undertake even a 5-acre grove anywhere in Cuba unless he has at least $5,000 where he can lay his hands on it. If he is a lively, capable man he will probably not need that amount of money, but no matter what his ability he should be able to command at least that sum before embarking in the citrus fruit business here. He may need it all, and more.

While no complete statistics are available, it is the writer's impression that in western Cuba, including the Isle of Pines, the average grove is larger than that of grape fruit, while in the east it would seem, the average grove is smaller. In the west, the older groves seem, usually, to be orange groves; the younger the grove be there, however, with great fertilization and care, that growers are developing oranges and grape-fruit groves.

There lands will produce the trees, if food to support them is supplied in the shape of fertilizer, and the trees will bear citrus fruit of the very best quality—brilliant color(red, weighty, full of juice, tartness in smack, thin rind. No fair-minded person can longer doubt that they will do so after seeing fruit of the quality which the growers located at Taco Taco exhibited at the latest horticultural show in Havana. These settlers found, however, the money to keep their trees properly nourished. Many others who have failed to succeed as fast are attributing over that failure to the fact that they did not have the money to do as much for their groves.

Some local companies doing business in western Cuba deny overtime or by implication that fertilization is necessary, but no prospective owner of a citrus-fruit grove in western Cuba can afford not to include in his estimate of expenses the cost of fertilizing early and often in amounts properly augmented as years pass. Fertilizer is generally used in the groves of the region mentioned at the rate of a ton per acre, about $45 a ton.

Cuba is the situation in the isle of Pines, as well as in the western and central districts of Cuba. The soils are all poor in plant food compared with the average soils in the United States, and the grapefruit rind is especially soft, states Mr. H. C. Henricksen, secretary of the Cuban National Horticultural society, referring particularly to the isle of Pines, "but I have never seen any fruit so thin-skinned as shearly outlined the effect of good fertilizers so shearly outlined as in these very lands, and from experience in Florida and Porto Rico I would predict an entire success for the isle of Pines, provided the groves are properly treated."

The soil generally in these regions is, then, whether the owner is able to afford proper treatment. He will, save in exceptional cases, where the soil is too "useless" for any use whatever, get his crop provided he has the money to supply enough fertilizer.

For there are richer lands in Cuba than those on wide American and Canadian farms are developing their groves in western Cuba and the Isle of Pines.

Along the Cauto river, to mention but one locality, there are exceedingly fertile lands which will need no fertilizer to produce citrus fruit groves. Such lands must, at the commencement, be cleared, at some expense, of the thick woods that cover them, and guinea, once cleared, must all cuts be kept fairly free of weeds. Secondary crops—corn, for instance—may be grown between rows without detriment to the trees. In fact, it would seem wiser to do

WANTS FARMERS TO RAISE ALFALFA

Gov. Warner Believes It Would Be Money in Their Pockets.

IT YIELDS BOUNTIFULLY

Will Urge State Board of Agriculture to Encourage This Crop—Experiments Would Cost About $2,000 or $3,000.

Lansing.—Governor Warner wants the farmers of Michigan to make the alfalfa fields he believes it would put money in their pockets. "It is my purpose," said the governor while in Marquette to attend a meeting of the joint private boards of the state, "to urge on the state board of agriculture steps to popularize among the farmers alfalfa as a fodder crop. Though the great value and utility of alfalfa have been clearly demonstrated in other states, Michigan has been slow to realize its importance, and the farmers will give up their acreage largely to the less valuable fodder crops.

"Alfalfa is the pre-eminent fodder crop. It yields bountifully consecutive with hay, not to be harm run deep in the ground, it flourishes in periods of drought in which hay is practically burned out. If alfalfa was generally planted in the upper peninsula, for instance, you would not hear appreciation about the shortage of hay experienced every fall and spring as you do now. The experiments I have in mind would cost maybe $2,000 or $3,000, but would be of incalculable value to the state."

The drought, Governor Warner said, has hit the Newberry lumber district hard. The farm there is a large one and the produce obtained from it usually is an important part in the maintenance of the institution. But the crops all to be short this year owing to the unfavorable season, with the result that the Newberry institution was fixed at the meeting of the joint asylum board at Lansing, of clothing, an increase of two cents over the cost for the past year. The Pontiac asylum allowance for maintenance was fixed at 2 cents, the cost at the Kalamazoo and Traverse City asylums being fixed at 10 cents, the same as for the past year.

Marriage, Birth and Divorce Records.

The total in the state are not as the decrease is shown by the statistics for the year just from the secretary of state's office. For the year there were returned a total of 64,[illegible] births, which corresponds to an annual rate of 24.5 per 1,000 estimated population, or a decrease of 5,573 more than was reported for 1908, and according to figures of the census for 1909 that year will show several thousand more than any previous year.

The total number of deaths in the state for 1909 was 52,[illegible], which corresponds to an annual death rate of 13.8 per cent, per 1,000 estimated population, which is the lowest rate ever shown that iron county, with a rate of 9.9 per 1,000 estimated population, had the lowest death rate.

Wayne county had the highest number of marriages for the year 1908, which was 25,750, corresponding to an annual marriage rate of 19.5 per 1,000 estimated population. It should be noted, however, that a large number of these marriages were people from other states, Wayne county, with 1,[illegible] hundreds of marriages from Chicago and other places, coming in for a good share.

There were 3,020 divorces granted in the state during 1908, which the number corresponds to a rate of 2.3 per 1,000 estimated population.

Farm Fires Stopped by Rain.

Every portion of the state with the exception of Dickinson county, which is in the upper peninsula, seems to have been blessed by rain within the last week. Rain fell in the vicinity of Lansing continued and the weather bureau gave predict fair weather for the next week.

State Game Warden Pierce received numerous telegrams from his deputies in the northern portion of the state informing him that hard rains had drowned out the forest fires which have been raging for the last ten days. Delta, Dickinson and Menominee counties have not been heard from, and there is reason to fear that the fires have been no change in the condition of those districts.

Several times within the last two weeks continuous Dickinson county were favorable for a hard rain, but no water fell. In several cases fires are reported considerable damage in that county, the fire fighters being unable to cope with the flames on account of the scarcity of water.

To Expand 'Phone Business.

Desiring to increase business for $250,000, the Lenawee County Telephone company has filed a formal petition with the state attorney general, which is accompanied by a complete inventory of the company's property, with a view to convert to purchase the Adrian Telephone company and to the purchase of the Michigan State Telephone company in Lenawee county. In the petition it is stated that $109,000 in stock has already been paid in. Of the number of shares issued and the actions from 1492 to the present time.

Death Toll Gradually Decreases.

According to the annual report of the Michigan railway commission, being prepared by Commissioner Glasgow, the physical condition of the railroads of the state shows a great improvement over previous years. The installation of safety devices, the protection of street and highway crossings, better conditions of the road beds, use of heavier rails and closer attention by employes to rules and regulations, all contribute to greater safety in handling the public, as the following statistics will show: The number of passengers carried on steam roads in the state during the year ending December 31, 1908, was 19,357,191, while the electric roads reported 37,873,667 passengers carried, making a total of 217,160,878. This amount was greatly increased for the year ending December 31, 1909, as statistics show that the steam roads carried 20,097,683 passengers, while the electric roads increased the number to 39,959,[illegible], making a total for the year of 240,477,267, or an increase of 23,316,389 over 1908 of 23,316,389 passengers.

The report also shows a decided decrease in the number of passengers killed as compared with the previous year. In 1908 52 passengers were killed, or one out of every 4,175,007 carried, and in 1909 only 47 were killed, or one person out of every 14,[illegible],721 passengers carried.

State Expenses $50,000 Higher.

According to the annual report of the state board of auditors, the general fund expenses last year amounted to $[illegible],223.28, while the allowances for the year ending 1909 reached $[illegible],127.15.

The state printing last year cost $50,[illegible]5.30, for 1909 the printing cost $65,[illegible]9.39, the increase last year being caused by the additional work of the legislature. Book binding last year cost the state $[illegible],423.93 and stationery $[illegible],563.56. The total allowances for the year amounted to $[illegible],[illegible]41.

During the year the board passed upon claims and vouchers for the various departments, which included traveling expenses of representatives of each, their postage accounts, etc. In claims of this character the board allowed to the state board of assessors $[illegible],577.89; to the state tax commissioner $[illegible],172.71, which is a mere matter of bookkeeping as the board and commission are the same body. The auditor-general was allowed $[illegible],915.66, the attorney general $24,697.75, the land department $[illegible],657.99, the secretary of state $[illegible],[illegible]5.02 and the executive offices $1,349.64.

Detroit Chosen for Convention.

Detroit was chosen at the meeting of the Epsilonian state central committee at the Morton house in Grand Rapids last evening as the next Epsilonian state convention. The date named for the big meeting is October 5.

It had been decided to name Senator Alfred Alden Smith as temporary chairman of the meeting and to agree on Grosbeck for the permanent chairman of the state convention. The only thing left unfinished was the choosing of the place in which to hold the convention. The honor lay between Detroit and Saginaw, with the latter being finally decided upon. The balance of the program was followed out.

Food Expense of State.

Reports from the various state institutions at the executive office for the June given a fair idea of the amount of food and provisions that have been maintained at the state's expense. Last month the state institutions have been raging for the last ten days of flour, 26,555 pounds of butter, 1,[illegible] bushels of potatoes and 10,[illegible] dozen fresh eggs.

New Michigan Corporations.

The following companies have filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state: Sheldon Street company, Lakeport, $2,500; Land Chemical company, Detroit, $10,000, principal incorporators, W. J. Burdick, Frederic W. Plumer and Fred H. Messrs.

Bogus Michigan License Plates.

Secretary of State Martindale of Michigan has been on vigilant watch for the appearance of counterfeits in this state who carry a license tag on their automobile that is not issued by the state department. It has been ascertained that a number of counterfeit purchasing plates from other sources than the department. In one instance there was a set of two plates, which bear the seal of Michigan, with the legend "Gov. Warner" on the seal, the numbers evidently taking no chances in using it illegally.

State is Out of Debt.

When the report of state treasurer was opened for business the vaults contained $2,110,924.18, of which $1,[illegible] was available for the general fund, and the state is absolutely out of debt.

According to Auditor General Fuller, the cost of maintaining the state government for the year which ended June 30, was only $60,000 more than in 1909, and at the same time $260,000 of the money borrowed when the treasury was empty a year ago, has been refunded.

Fowtberg of Red Jacket, president of the conference, will tender his resignation from his charge. Rev. Forsberg, who is one of the leading Swedish-Lutheran ministers of the northwest, goes to Rock Island, Ill., in September to take charge of the new church being established there by his denomination. He has spent seven years with the Red Jacket congregation. The copper country will lose another of its best known and leading ministers this year. Rev. H. Bodewelt, pastor of the Calumet M. E. church and preacher known throughout the north, is forced to resign because of ill health. He will resign at the session of the Detroit conference, to be held in the city of Detroit in September. Rev. Bodewelt will probably move to southern California.

Port Huron.—Word has just been received in St. Clair to the effect that Ward Huse, who was killed at Billings, Mont., met his death by being shot by an angry debtor. Mr. Gates, a partner of Mr. Huse in the employment business, who was the informant, stated in the brief intelligence that during the dispute over the back debt, Mr. Huse was shot three times while sitting at his desk. Huse was thirty-five years old and was a son of the late Captain Huse of East China township. He leaves a widow and little daughter.

Holland.—Rev. George H. Dubbink, aged forty-three years, professor of didactic and polemic theology at the Western Theological seminary here, died at his summer home in Overisel. Professor Dubbink graduated from Hope college in 1892 and from the Western seminary in 1895. He was pastor of the Third Reformed church for nine years and in 1904 was elected professor of theology, succeeding Prof. Henderson Stone.

Flint.—Joseph Hicks park will be greatly improved this year as the result of a purchase of the property of Dr. F. E. Hicks, widow of Mrs. Helen D. Hicks, who originally gave the park to Flint as a memorial to her husband, for years a banker here. The Woolsey property, which brought the park right on the point of the Flint-shaped ground and cut off a development to the rear of the park. When the residence is moved off the point of the park will be in the central portion of the business district and will continue back to the river bank, which now makes a beautiful waterway boundary. The landscape gardening, which at present embraces walks, beds of plants and shrubs, will be continued. An attractive fountain has also been built in the center of the park and was presented to the public. It has been suggested that the Woolsey residence would make a most desirable building for public library, reading room and reading room, with suitable club rooms for young men on the second floor.

Saginaw.—Rev. Howard R. Chapman, for many years pastor of the Michigan Avenue Baptist church, has left for a pastorate in Lansing, (Neb.) First Baptist church. Saginaw lost John Lehman, a prominent retired Baptist church. Saginaw lost John Lehman, a prominent retired

The news of the gift was made public and the city council officially accepted the donation. Adrian has a number of hospital projects of late, there being no hospital in Adrian, and the latest proposition, but they have all failed to materialize, so the news of Mr. Bixby's philanthropy came as a welcome surprise.

UNIQUE WILL FILED

Impossible Conditions Imposed Upon a 12-Year-Old Boy.

Robert St. George Dyrenforth Must Graduate from High School at Age of Fourteen and Get Harvard Degree at Eighteen.

Washington.—What probably is the strangest will ever filed in court in the District of Columbia is to be contested and in the next few months it is likely that much will be published relating to the legal battle.

It is the will of Col. Robert St. George Dyrenforth, Civil war hero, and expatriate office official who left a fortune of $250,000 to his twelve-year-old grandson providing he carried out what seems to be impossible provisions. In fact two or three of them are impossible and the lad will not make any attempt to abide by them. Colonel Dyrenforth cut off his wife with whom he had not lived for some time and made his grandson, Henry St. George Dyrenforth, second, his sole heir.

According to this strange will the grandson will get the fortune if:

He beware of women.

He graduates from the high school at fourteen.

He studies manual training, dance and music.

He receives his degree from Harvard at eighteen.

He follows this with six-months study at Oxford.

He enters the military academy at West Point; graduates therefrom and becomes a soldier.

He takes up the practise of law.

He spends his vacations traveling through France, Spain, Italy, Prussia, Germany, Denmark, and Russia in the order named.

He becomes a Protestant Episcopalian.

He refuses to associate with certain persons.

He lives until he is twenty-eight.

He does not marry because him.

He does not marry before he is 40 to finish high school at the age of fourteen. He cannot get a degree from Harvard in the age of eighteen, but the administrators of the estate say they shall be content if he has made his honest effort to carry out the provisions of the will.

The boy's grandmother, in Washington, stated that it would be impossible for him to fulfill the conditions imposed upon him, and that she would insist on receiving a share in the estate. She is said to have the support of one of her daughters, who was also mentioned in the will.

"Robert is a weak, delicate boy, and my husband knew it," she said. "He has not even entered high school. He has been delicate. We never thought he would live. His mother died a consumptive. His father, F. J. McCormick, married our daughter, was an army surgeon and had been commissioned to go to Panama, just before he died two years ago. He gave up his job to my husband eight years ago and Colonel Dyrenforth legally adopted the boy in 1901 and changed his name. I separated. There was no divorce, hence I am entitled to share in the property, whatever there is of it."

WORRIES LITTLE BANTAM HEN

Brood of Quail Scamper Off at Slightest Sound, Leaving Adopted Mother Distressed.

Mount Vernon, Ill.—A unique sight in the behavior of a small bantam hen in caring for a brood of quail which she hatched.

During wheat harvest the mother quail left her nest because the wheat was cut from around it and refused to go back and the little chicks were left to shift for themselves. Some days later the eggs in six house and put them under a bantam hen. The eggs in due time "chickens" arrived.

The bantam and children have a tendency to run and hide, and at the slightest sound that seems unnatural they jump through the fence and leave the little mother almost distracted.

The vow which the class took is called the "Ephebic" oath. Mayor Gaynor was greatly pleased with the action of the class and said that he would have the oath framed and hung in his home.

FAMOUS ELM TREE IS GONE

Was Branch of Famous Elm Under Which Roger Williams Met Indians—Planted in 1832.

Pittsfield(Pa.—An interested crowd of the other afternoon watched the demolishing of one of Pittsfield's old landmarks on Tweith street, where Chestnut the grandfather elm which has for years shaded the yard of the Friends' meeting house, and which has a prominent second to none in Pittsfield. The old elm was a branch of the famous elm under which the Rhode island founder, which William Penn made his treaty with the Indians.

Two other large trees which have been grown from the Penn treaty elm are at the Pennsylvania hospital and Swarthmore college. The old tree on Twelfth street was planted in 1832, when the surrounding neighborhood was a truly rural aspect. It was for many years remarkable for its magnificent outlook, but since the erection of the adjacent high buildings it ceased to thrive, and recently showed signs of decay.

A short time ago a heavy branch fell to the street, making a large hole in the sidewalk, and it was deemed necessary for the safety of pedestrians to remove entirely the old landmark.

Cheap Political Trickery.

It is to be regretted that anything should enter into the primary canvas in Charlevoix county that will in any way tend to create discord or dissention among republicans.

It is the right of every republican to express his choice, and by every honorable means advance the interests of his candidate, in the canvas for either corner of governor.

But when those who, through the inscrutable workings of politics and providence, are placed, for the time being in positions a little above their fellows, resort to cheap and transparent methods of misrepresentation of the whispering sort mostly, the constituent voters should when his weapons and use them. Of course talk is cheap and so is newspaper "influence," when it can be bought in the open market of the curb; but to the honest voter such methods are distasteful and repellant.

The opponents of Mr. Osborn in this county, or at least certain of them, are active in bolstering up their cause by statements that have in them no scintilla of truth. It is a fact, and we know whereof we speak, that Chase S. Osborn has pledged himself to no living man for any political appointment whatever. Furthermore, he has entered into no combination whatever, with any candidate higher up or lower down. The writer of these lines has the personal assurance of these facts from Mr. Osborn, and Chase S. Osborn always tells the truth.

Voters should fortify themselves against these cheap lies, and the cheaper trash that comes from subsidized sources.

Chase S. Osborn is gaining votes every day because he has the courage to speak plainly and tell the truth, even though the truth may stinge the vermin that infests the precinct of his own political heathdom. There never was a time in the political history of Michigan when plain words, writ large and uttered clearly, found greater justification than now.

And this is why Chase S. Osborn will be the next governor of Michigan.

Sesic-Comic Politics.

We are given to understand that Hon. Wm. Mears, of Boyne Falls, has publicly announced himself a candidate for the office of county clerk.

It is with great reluctance that we say anything about candidates for primary preferment, but we think the importance of this particular case warrants a warning.

We make the assertion, based on historical and well known facts, that there is not a man in Charlevoix county more unfitted and unqualified for the office than Wm. Mears. He is not, intellectually, educationally, nor in any other way capable of fulfilling the duties of the office.

He has been a candidate for county office every two years for the past twenty years and has been turned down more times than any other man in the county.

From the standpoint of political consistency he deserves nothing from republicans. He has since the beginning of his career been a democrat, but has accidentally elected to the state senate and relegated to a back seat after one term, been a sorehead oftener than any other man who ever sought office in Charlevoix county. What the people want in the public service is efficiency, and they can never get it in Wm. Mears.

His candidacy has always been taken as a joke. Such a thing seems impossible, but should he carry the primaries he would, between that time and the November election, hear more unpleasant things said of him than would be agreeable.

It cannot be that any considerable number of republicans will take seriously the candidacy of Wm. Mears for county clerk.

Announcement

To the Electors of Charlevoix County.

Owing to private interests which constantly demand my personal attention I am satisfied that if nominated and elected to the office of Register of Deeds I could not give it the attention required without more or less jeopardizing it.

I, therefore, publicly announce my withdrawal as a candidate for much office.

Thanking all the electors who have looked upon my candidacy with favor and being at all times ready and willing to support my friends who may place in office and ever wishing success to my party, I remain

Respectfully yours,
JACOB H. GRAFF.

WANTED—at once girl to do second work. Inquire of Mrs. F. Augustus, phone 310.

An Open Question.

At the last annual school meeting the freeholders of Charlevoix voted to permit the city to occupy the basement of the Carnegie library for municipal purposes, and we suppose the change will soon be made. The saving of the rent now being paid for the VanPelt rooms is the reason for this action.

Since the change was first proposed we have questioned its legality and doubted its wisdom. We think there was a considerable degree of thoughlessness in the action. But we have refrained from criticism, inasmuch as all interests are merged in one tax roll, and the tax roll is what talks in the settlement of most questions.

In occupying any part of the building for city purposes we are not certain that the conditions of the Carnegie bequest are not violated. The purposes of the Carnegie library gifts are strictly educational. The money was given for a public library and not for a city hall. There are rooms below that could be made into a city lock-up; such transformation would be just as proper. We believe that the school board has as good right to lease the entire building to the West Michigan Development Bureau as it has to turn any part of it over to the city.

The city of Charlevoix would not raise the money paid for the present offices, and, indeed, it had much better be saved in some other direction. The basement lecture room should have been set apart as permanent quarters for the Charlevoix Historical Society, a purely educational organization, and one that Charlevoix can well afford to foster and perpetuate.

Death of Belvedere Guest.

Miss Esther Moncreef, of Prescott, Ark., stopping with Mr. W. F. Lamb, a guest at the Belvedere hotel, met her death while bathing in the shoal water of Pine Lake beach, Saturday afternoon last.

The young lady, who was but sixteen years of age, had entered the water with several companions, soon after eating a hearty lunch. Her companions heard her scream and saw her stiffen but not disappear. The alarm was given and the body recovered after it had been in the water about twenty minutes. Dr. Wilkinson and the life savers were called and every possible effort was made to restore life but without avail.

A careful examination seemed to disclose the fact that death was caused by heart failure superinduced by acute indigestion. There was no water in the lungs. The young lady's father died of heart disease but a few months ago.

The remains, accompanied by friends, left Sunday night for Prescott.

—Every republican of Michigan, whether regular, irregular, standpatter, insurgent or stalwart, should ask himself these questions: Am I not, first of all, a Republican? Am I not a protectionist? Am I not willing to stand by a man who record has been consistent, clean, efficient and brilliant in support of every great principle of the party for half a century? Am I not bound, by every consideration that is just and fair, to cast my ballot in the primaries of September 6, for Hon. J. C. Burrows?

—The sun Brothers circus has come and gone. The general opinion is that it is a good, clean show, run by good clean people. Everything about the outfit has the appearance of respectability. While not as large as Ringling's, the feature are all free, and the band is particularly efficient. The same can be said of the menagerie—it is not as large as Hagenbeck's, but the animals are sleek and fat, and add their share to the general aspect of respectability. The tent was full at both performances, the most people turning out in large numbers.

—Rarely has the circle of the pioneer reporters of Charlevoix been so badly broken as when Mr. M. Allen, of Kalamazoo, died recently. Mr. Allen was one of the original members of that small number of Kalamazoo people who were the founders of what, in the old days was known as the "Hayt-But Hessel," and which has since developed into the Charlevoix Summer Home Association, an organization that ranks among the great resort associations of the country, and whose being in its membership prominent people from the Atlantic to the Rocky Mountains. Mr. Allen, of "Hiney Hoey Cottage," was highly esteemed by Charlevoix people, and his genial smile and hearty summer greeting will be sadly missed.

WANTED LITTLE ONES BACK

Female Porcupine Trailed Her Family to House and Finally to Freedom.

Some workmen who were employed putting down trees in a wind found a nest of five little porcupines in a little hollow. Seeing neither of the animals' parents and that the little porcupines were hungry they took them a distance of four miles and presented them to their employer's children, who kindly cared for the animals.

Late in the evening the house dog set up a great howl outside. The girl opened the door, when the excited dog rushed in with a bleeding nose. Closely behind a big porcupine waddled quickly through the hall. The dog was furious, but the porcupine sniffed her way to the door without heeding the dog at all. The door was open and she trotted through another room to the next door and from there to the box where her babies were. She crawled into the box and laid herself by her little ones, talking soothingly and nursing them to sleep.

The next evening the dog began the same racket, and when the girl went out he was rolling a big ball of quills around in great dismay. She took the ball in her apron and carried it to the box. It turned out to be Mr. Porcupine, who also wanted to be with his family.

The children took the reunited family to the barn. Here the porcupines seemed happy all winter and were so tame that they often crawled into the children's laps to be petted. Toward spring the door of the barn was left open one night and in the morning the porcupine family was missing. How it happened that the door was opened the children never understood, but I think their mother thought the porcupines wanted to be free again.—From Our Dumb Animals.

—Kathryn Gaskin entertained a number of her little friends last Friday afternoon in honor of her sixth birthday.

—Mrs. Dan Foley, of Petoskey, and Mrs E. L. Stanford of Boyne City, were guests at the house of James Gaskin last week.

—Mr. Kelley, the present lieutenant governor, if nominated and elected, merely promises a perpetuation of the present regime which was repudiated by Eaton County Republicans in November, 1908, by giving the Democratic candidate for governor a majority of 2,354. The alleged "repudiation" of the Warner administration by Mr. Kelley at Mt. Pleasant is the biggest political joke of the year. It goes to show the difficult straits of Warner machine is in when it is willing to go before the bar of public opinion and plead guilty in an effort to get the support of the voter. With one exception, every Eaton county employe in the state house is for Mr. Kelley's nomination which gives some idea of the "split" between the Governor and his political Friday.

In the last primary campaign Governor Warner willfully deceived the voters of Eaton County as to the exact condition of the state finances and in this deception enjoyed the hearty co-operation of his lieutenant governor. Eaton County voters have not forgotten that deception and are not prepared to be duped in this manner again. It is easy enough to frame up new issues for political capital, but what Michigan wants is a governor who will tell the truth about these issues the day before as well as the day after election. Voters should remember that the Warner machine has everything to gain and nothing to lose by supporting Mr. Kelley as both Mr. Musselman and Mr. Osborn have promised a "whitewing" if they are successful.

Two years ago Michigan Republicans started the campaign with an apology but it is a dangerous practice to apologize in off years, which accounts for nineteenth of the candidates for county offices supporting the candidacy of Mr. Osborn. No matter how venial Mr. Kelley's affiliation with the Warner machine may be, he stands by his own utterances on the recent banquet circuit as the defender of Warnerism in state politics and as such his nomination would be a burden to every county ticket in the state. The man who can pull the most Republican votes in Eaton county is Chase S. Osborn, of the Soo.

Osborn For Governor.

Charlotte Republican: Two months from next Thursday the enrolled Republican voters of this state will nominate a candidate for governor. Who is the best man for the job? This is the question that will soon be occupying the attention of the individual voter upon whom rest the responsibility. Before marking his ballot the voter should cast aside factional alignments, personal preferences and vote for the candidate, all other things being equal, who, in his judgment, is the best man the welfare of a partisan, who at all times places the success of his party above his own personal desires. With justly expediency as the first consideration who is the best candidate from the view point of a party man, who above everything else wants Republican success to begin at home?

In Eaton county, and this rule will hold good in every county in the state, the gubernatorial candidate should be a man who will lend rather than handicap the candidates on the ticket with him. With due deference to the merits of the other candidates, Chase S. Osborn, of the Soo, will pull more votes to the head of the Republican ticket next November than either Mr. Kelley or Mr. Musselman. The Musselman candidacy is not taken seriously even in Grand Rapids and it must be humiliating for such astute politicians as Senator William Alden Smith, et al, to be vouchsafed for such a forlorn political hope.

Mr. Kelley, the present lieutenant governor, if nominated and elected, merely promises a perpetuation of the present regime which was repudiated by Eaton County Republicans in November, 1908, by giving the Democratic candidate for governor a majority of 2,354. The alleged "repudiation" of the Warner administration by Mr. Kelley at Mt. Pleasant is the biggest political joke of the year. A Pioneer's Observations

To the Editor:

I have sometimes thought that our people were drawing the long bow on "Charlevoix the Beautiful," but I am now free to confess that any one who can appreciate either urban or suburban beauty will cheerfully grant Charlevoix's right to the title.

For several years I have been deprived of the privilege of knowing or observing the changes that were taking place, and like some other people, not being able to see, could not readily believe. I was beginning to think that "The Beautiful" was a misnomer. Having been absent from the town the greater part of the last twelve years, and most of that time confined to my room, and the last three years confined to an invalid chair. I was becoming a stranger in the city.

With the exception of a few of the early settlers the present inhabitants are to me strangers. I had begun to think that when a man gets old and helpless he seems to be forgotten by some of those who were once his professional friends but a little incident that occurred on the sixth inst. convinced me to the contrary.

Judge Mayne happened along. I am always pleased to see the boy, but this time he surprised me. He came with an automobile and a cordial invitation to take a ride about the city. I gladly accepted, provided they could load me and unload me without inflicting too much pain. In happy anticipation of the ride my heart beat like that of a boy starting for a fourth of July celebration. I was successfully loaded and we were off and whirling down Bridge street before I could fairly get my breath. Then I was in a reeling looked strange. The first real beauty spot I saw was the Beach Hotel and the environs, with the beautiful cottages and thrifty trees on either side, and from the high bank at the foot of the avenue old Lake Michigan lay shimmering in the sunset glow.

From there, wherever we went, it was one continuous scene of beauty. The well paved streets, perfectly kept lawns, beautiful flower beds and spreading maples. The old Dixon farm is no more a farm. The old orchard and the rebuilt house were all that looked natural. The Inn was a blaze of light, and the dining room was a scene of sparkling animation. The shadows of evening had fallen, so that the Chicago "crab was just pleasantly visible through the trees.

At the bridge, on our return, we were detained just long enough to see a large steamer pass through into the harbor. At the Belvedere the lights from the cottages glinting among the trees and the brilliantly lighted hotel was a sight worth going miles to see.

Great indeed has been the change wrought in the past twelve years, and who can say that it will be in the next twelve. From the retrospect I draw inspiration. I see large steamers at the factory docks taking on cement and farm products for the great cities, and regular railroad trains at the south depots discharging freight and passengers. But I hear some old-muddish people say the city will be polluted with cement dust. I would say to them, trouble not your souls; for the cement dust will bring with it a good spring of pure water.

Yours truly,
ROBERT MILLER.

Ford B. Robbins of Boyne Falls

Candidate for the Republican nomination for Sheriff of Charlevoix County at the Primary Election, Tuesday, September 6, 1910.

Ford P. Robbins is in the prime of vigorous manhood, has been a resident of this city for the past 15 years, has been three times elected to the office of Supervisor of his township, and is fully qualified to hold the important office to which he aspires

The only plank in his platform is the impartial enforcement of the law without fear of favor. If Mr. Robbins is the choice of the people for Sheriff they can rest assured that he will perform every duty which his high office imposes upon him, for he is a man who, when he has a thing to do, goes ahead and does it.

NATIONAL REPUTATION

That is What the Charlevoix Rustic Man is Rapidly Earning—Another Big Contract.

As an original designer and most skilful constructor of artistic rustic work Johnny Lynn, of Charlevoix is without a peer. Johnny believes, and he is not alone in the belief, that true art is that which lies nearest to nature, and nature is made to contribute what his practiced eye selects from the woods and swamps and thickets.

Some of the "Rustic Man's" best work is right here where he lives, in adornments that beautify. The rustic bridge on the Belvedere is one of the finest of his conceptions, and scattered all about resorts and city are "Lynnotypes" of what his fertile brain can conjure up. And thus, from a home beginning, his industry has expanded over territory that takes in New York and St. Louis. His work in the Anheuser-Busch pet shop, Chicago, cost him, and he won him renown, and Mr. Busch took him to Gotham, where he designed and executed rustic embellishments for a summer garden that greatly added to his renown.

And recently Mr. Busch, who is a Charlevoix summer resident, took Johnny to St. Louis to design a salle rustic blanche in the construction of a big rustic club house in a square park near St. Louis—a sightly place, overlooking the Meramback river and the highlands beyond. Jack proposes to "spread himself" on this work. He has certainly fallen into good hands after a hard struggle of seventeen years to bring his original ideas to the front.

A proof section of the club house has been worked out and approved by Mr. Busch, and the work will proceed at once. Six or more carloads of material will be shipped from this point, much of it coming from the beaver group of islands, where the most perfect natural creations are to be found. A number of experienced mechanics will go with Mr. Lynn from here.

The "Rustic Man" has lived in Charlevoix for thirty years, and the people know him to be in every way worthy of the success that is attending his work. We think the limit is not yet reached in the Lynn rustic creations, and that nature will in an increasing degree contribute to the genius of the foremost rustic designer of the country.

A Good Test Question

There never was a time in the life of the Republican party when it was more necessary for Republicans to be Republican than at the present time. Individuals may have their individual grievances against the party managers and some party action; they may find it easy to criticise the tariff bill or some other bill, but their loyalty should cause them to put smaller questions out of sight while they decide, beyond all question, what the future of the party itself shall be. "Am I a loyal Republican in the hour of sending party? Am I a good test question for every true partisan to ask himself. Then it might be well enough to determine whether or not you will support a man for United States senator who has kept progressive pace with all the history of the great party, with all of its great onward movements, with all of its great leaders and who has never ducked, straddled, evaded or stood as a scolding party censor and cried for recognition upon the record of irregularity, denunciation and insurgency.

Eighty acres of hay land made a return of 150 tons and a 30 acre piece of potatoes has yielded given him 45 tons of hay, 600 bushels of oats and 100 bushels of seed peas.

—The Western Michigan Development bureau has just received a letter from the Argentine republic asking for information in regard to securing a fruit farm in Western Michigan. The writer would desire a farm of about 40 acres. This letter well illustrates how far reaching the influence of the Western Michigan Development bureau really is.

CANADA'S NEW TOY.

The germ of the Canadian navy is rapidly developing into a lively organism. "Warships for Canada," it is announced, will soon start from Portsmouth for the Pacific coast of Canada after having been thoroughly overhauled and inspected under the authority of the British Admiralty. The cruiser Niobe will leave Portsmouth for Halifax. Each warship will carry a full complement of British officers, who will serve in the Canadian navy for two years and a "selection" crew, of which the members will be engaged for five years, says Toronto Globe. It is not expected that it will be at all difficult to decide the necessary officers and men in Canada when it becomes necessary to enlist them. It is interesting to note that the first proposal to construct a dry-dock of large dimensions under the liberal terms of last session has been made by the English firm of Vickers & Maxim, which has filled plans at its Canadian works at Montreal covering fifty acres and costing two and a half million dollars. This construction of the biggest destroyers has long been a specialty with this celebrated firm, but far more happiness for this country in the building and equipping of steel vessels of large size. The introduction of such a plant will mark a new stage in the evolution of shipbuilding in Canada.

FIFTY THOUSAND KNIGHTS PARADE

Brilliant Climax of Templars' Conclave in Chicago.

TRIENNIAL A BIG SUCCESS.

Acting Grand Master Melish in Command and Noted Masons From Different Parts of the World Present.

Chicago.—Fifty thousand Knights Templar, garbed in the handsome uniform of the order, wearing its glittering jewels and carrying drawn swords, marched through elaborately decorated streets of Chicago Tuesday, Aug. 8, passing beneath great arches and before a reviewing stand four blocks long, crowded with the leading officials of the order and the wives and families of the six knights. Forty-two brass bands made music for the marchers, and all along the route they were cheered by the thousands of people who had assembled to witness the spectacle.

This magnificent parade was the climax, in a spectacular way, of the thirty-first triennial conclave of Knights Templar, which opened here on Sunday, Aug. 7. In accordance with the time honored custom of the grand encampment, the delugs of the week began with divine service.

The air knights selected Orchestra hall for this purpose and entirely filled the body of that hall to listen to a sermon on "Templarism" delivered by Rev. Dr. George H. MacAdam of Madison, Wis., in the absence of Sir Kniht George A. Kelter of Cheyenne, Wyo., were evidently grand prelate of the grand encampment. The music was in charge of the grand organist of the grand commandery of Illinois, the choir consisting of several male quartets belonging to the order in this state.

Monday was devoted mainly to the receiving of the grand and subordinate commanderies and escorting them to their hotels.

Parade of The Knights.

The "grand parade" of Tuesday was the largest parade of Knights Templar ever held. The preparations were elaborate and Michigan boulevard was most elaborately decorated. The air knights formed in line of march on the boulevard south of Thirty-first street, and signal to move was given by the aides of Darnell, R. I. N. G., the detachment for the purpose being composed of Knights Templar all of whom are members of the battery. The same detachment fired the salute to the grand master.

Marching northward in Michigan boulevard, the parade passed, near Hubbard court, beneath an entrance arch built in the form of an ancient battlement with its towers and turrets. This was intended to represent the entrance to the city, and as the column passed under it, buglers stationed on its heights heralded the approach of each grand division.

Next the knights came abreast of the first grand stand, upward a mile in length, and this needed no decorations, for it was filled to its capacity mainly with ladies whose beautiful summer costumes made it like a vast garden. About 50,000 persons were in this immense stand, as at its center was a gorgeous throne on which sat the acting grand master, William Henry Melish of Cincinnati, who became head of the order on the recent death of Grand Master Henry W. Rugg of Providence, R. I. Mr. Melish will be regularly elected grand master before the close of the conclave.

Just north of the Art Institute the parade passed before another reviewing stand in which were Mayor Busse, the city council and the park commissioners.

Beautiful "Templar Way."

At Washington street the marchers turned west to State, where they entered on the "Templar Way." This stretch extended from Randolph to Van Buren street and was made beautiful by a handsome arch and massive Corinthian columns of pure white erected thirty-three feet apart on both sides of the street. Festoons of natural moss connected the columns, and the bright red cross and the shield and coat of arms of the order were conspicuous in the scheme of decoration.

Moving south to Jackson boulevard, the knights again turned west, and near the federal building passed before yet another reviewing stand which accommodated Governor Deneen and his staff. Marching north on La Salle street, the parade passed in review the grand commandery arch a mere white shield spanned the street at the La Salle hotel, the headquarters of the grand commandery of Illinois.

Entertaining Scenes at Night.

The scene in the streets at night was especially beautiful, for all the arches, festoons and columns of the decorative scheme were brilliantly illuminated, and on State street, in addition to the "Templar Way," the merchants had put up decorations that transformed the great shopping district into a veritable fairy land.

Undoubtedly the most spectacular feature of the night display was the wonderful electric set piece erected in Grant park on the lake front, representing a colossal size the official emblem or badge of the conclave. It was 100 feet high and its 5,000 powerful electric lights of varied colors illuminated all that part of the city.

Much of the success of the conclave must be attributed to the efforts of John D. Cleveland, grand commander of Illinois and president of the national executive committee. Arthur MacArthur of Troy, N. Y., is the very eminent grand generalissimo of the grand encampment and W. Frank Pierce of San Francisco the grand captain general.

Among the most noted of the visiting nobles from other lands are: The Right Hon. the Earl of Euston, grand master of the great priory of England and Wales, the Lord Athenney, past great constable; Thomas Fraser, great marshal, H. Dawson Crane, past great herald; F. C. Van Duzer, past great standard bearer; H. J. Hosser, acting grand master bar bearer; John Ferguson, past prepositor of England and Wales, and the Right Hon. Luther B. Archbold, most eminent grand master of the great priory of Canada, and official staff.

MEET OF IOWA REPUBLICANS

HAVE WARM TIME IN THEIR STATE CONVENTION.

Senator Cummins Scores Tariff Law in His Speech—President Taft indorsed in Platform.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Iowa state Republican convention adjourned Wednesday after a bitter controversy between the progressive and anti-Taft forces. Candidates for supreme justice and superintendent of public instruction were nominated and a platform was adopted. Senator Cummins was the temporary chairman and Senator Dolliver the permanent presiding officer. Both were cheered and blessed during their addresses.

The resolutions as adopted dismiss consideration of the president with the clause, "We indorse such efforts as President Taft and his advisers have made to fulfill the promises of the national platform."

They reaffirm their loyalty to the platform of 1908 but do not recognize the revision of 1909 as a satisfactory fulfillment of the party promises and therefore favor the creation of an independent non-partisan tariff committee to secure facts regarding imports and urge revision of schedules separately. They commend Senators Dolliver and Cummins for their work upon the tariff bill, the railroad bill and the postal savings bill. They commend the action of the house in revising the rules. They indorse the anti-trust law and recommend it be given additional strength to meet the devices of monopoly industry. They favor the fixing of a physical valuation on railroads in order to secure effective control of rates and a complete system of publicity. They favor amendments to the postal savings law to keep the money deposited by the government within the communities where deposited. They favor conservation of Iowa's natural resources. They indorse the primary law. They promise three months' free textbooks steps along prohibition lines in Iowa. They demand adoption of United States senators by direct vote of the people. They insist on a readjustment of the representation of Republicans in national convention. They favor an income tax, and cooperation with the national government in enlarging the usefulness of the system of higher education.

Under the primary law the nominations for state officers were made at the primaries in June excepting for supreme judges and superintendent of public instruction, in the latter office there not being a candidate. Judge Evans of Fort Dodge and Judge H. M. Bremer of Red Oak were renominated for the supreme bench. A. M. Deyoe of Garner was nominated for the office of superintendent of public instruction.

The state committee is composed of six insurgents and five stalwarts, and C. F. Franke of Dubuque long will be continued state chairman.

Senator Cummins, as temporary chairman, threw the convention into disorder when he named the party of "Lincoln, of Grant, of Roosevelt," ignoring President Taft.

Senator Cummins was very emphatic in his declaration that the tariff bill as it stood needed considerable revision to make it right. He also warned the country against going too fast on the certain tide that has set in, and that wealth was demanding too much tell already.

When the insurgents presented the name of Jonathan P. Dolliver for permanent chairman, the stalwarts offered opposition in J. C. Mabry of Allen. Dolliver was nominated by a vote of 55 to 45. In accepting his position he said: "I have but one ambition left in public life, and that is to make a fight for rights against private interests, and I am willing to take the risk, the man who serves to have suffered at the hands of the roll call." Here Dolliver was hissed.

BROWNE MUST STAND TRIAL

Judge Kersten Denies Motion to Quash Indictment and Orders Case to Proceed.

Chicago.—Nee O'Neil Browne must be tried upon charges of bribery in attempting Representative Charles A. Allen with $1,000 to vote for United States Senator Lorimer.

Declaring that the contentions of the defense, if upheld, would render the bribery law fruitless, Judge Kersten Thursday afternoon in a crowded room refused to quash the indictment against Browne and ordered the accused to trial.

UNITE IN EFFORT TO DOWN OSBORN

MUSSELMAN AND KELLEY PLAYING GAME TO SPLIT UP ANTI-WARNER VOTE.

IF ELECTED, KELLEY WOULD PROBABLY SUPPORT MUSSELMAN FOUR YEARS HENCE.

It is becoming increasingly apparent to shrewd political observers that a thorough understanding exists between Pat Kelley and Amos Musselman, candidates for governor. The Kelley papers about the state are daily publishing the Musselman press dope, and Pat himself refers constantly to Musselman in a most friendly way in his speeches. On the other hand, Musselman, who started out to show up the inefficiency of the Warner administration and seek the office of governor wholly on the ground that this state business was mismanaged and needed overhauling, is now playing the soft pedal. Not a word of criticism of the Warner regime has escaped Musselman's lips for a month now.

The game being played is plain. Musselman has no show of landing the nomination this time. All he can do is help Kelley and hurt Osborn by splitting up the anti-Warner vote, and thus make Kelley's nomination the easier.

The natural and probable reward of such service would be the support of the administration four years hence for Musselman.

Fortunately, the "cat is out of the bag," and the people, who want an overhauling of things at Lansing, will be fooled into scattering their votes for the good money growth of the Osborn sentiment all over Michigan shows that the popular mind is awake to this game. It proposes to put an end to Warner-Kelleyism on Sept. 6.

THE U. P. REJOICES.

The Menominee Herald-Leader has aptly and tersely expressed the sentiments of the voters of the upper peninsula in the following paragraphs printed in that representative daily under the caption, "Osborn Will Be Our Next Governor":

The upper peninsula has arrived.

We are not part and parcel of Michigan.

We are to have our leading citizen for governor of Michigan.

Chas. S. Osborn of the Soo will, if he lives, be Michigan's next executive.

Menominee is glad.

The Soo rejoices.

Escanaba is delighted.

Houghton is happy.

The copper country, the iron country, the agricultural counties, aye, all the state, north and south, is elated.

As last we are to be led into the promised land.

And by a man the whole state loves.

Chase S. Osborn is a Wolverine.

He is a Christian gentleman.

He is a man of affairs.

He is a man of ideas.

He is a man of action.

He is a man of affairs.

He is a type of the American workingman who loves his work and his fellow workmen.

He is the soul of honor in his private life, in business and in politics.

He would rather be right than be governor.

He will be both.

He is the first, and the people are hurling to him with the second.

Osborn is a man.

He will give Michigan a square deal.

Osborn is a Roosevelt.

He must be our governor.

To lead the Michigan fight for equal rights and equal taxation, we need a Roosevelt.

His name is Osborn.

The upper peninsula congratulates Michigan.

Our congratulations will be accompanied by 93 per cent of our total Republican votes on Sept. 6.

Today he is the upper peninsula's Osborn.

After election he will be Michigan's governor.

Unity!

The upper peninsula, with every loyal citizen, is on the job.

And meanwhile Osborn is sweeping the southern counties in the most enthusiastic political tour in Michigan's history.

Intellectually, Chase S. Osborn is the peer of any man whom the Republicans in recent years have put forward for governor. It is certainly refreshing to note that, for once, at least, some thought is to be given to qualifications rather than to party politics. He is said to be the choice of the Republicans of Michigan. Mr. Osborn's candidacy is being received with so much enthusiasm that his opponents are almost completely demoralized. His present tour is one grand ovation; they dare scarcely encouragement to the machine which is antagonistic to his candidacy. We can almost imagine we hear some one say that Michigan's finances and Michigan's former greatness are to be rehabilitated by the nomination and election of Hon. Chase S. Osborn—Pashella County Republican.

The Roosevelt, Mr. Osborn is an example for every young man or to aspire and to catch his enthusiasm is only to hear him give one of his addresses. One is forceful of thought and will. So keep up with Osborn, for he is with us when he touches this county in the next four weeks, and then if you take him anyone him at the primary election. Osborn is the man that will do credit to the state, the party and the candidacy.—Boston Herald.

THOROUGH JOB OF HOUSE CLEANING

THAT'S WHAT CHASE S. OSBORN PROMISES IF NOMINATED AND ELECTED GOVERNOR.

TO GIVE MICHIGAN A CLEAN, EFFICIENT AND ECONOMICAL ADMINISTRATION.

The following splendid endorsement of Chase S. Osborn appeared in The Hastings Banner, one of the large, most influential and strongest weekly papers in the state:

Mr. Osborn is a clear, forceful and eloquent speaker. He strikes straight from the shoulder. There is never any doubt as to what he means, for he means what he says. He has the courage of his convictions and is not afraid to tell the plain truth just as he sees it, let it strike where and whom it may. The people of Barry county admire that kind of a man, and there can be no doubt of their admiration for Mr. Osborn, nor that it will be expressed by a large vote for him on primary election day, Sept. 6th.

Mr. Osborn believes he has a message for the Republicans of Michigan. He believes that there are abuses which have grown up in the state that need correcting—abuses which make in many ways for inefficiency and extravagance in the administration of state affairs. He asserts with the utmost positiveness that, if nominated and elected governor of this state, he will fearlessly set about the work of house cleaning, with the aim of securing the maximum of efficiency in administration at the minimum of cost to the people of Michigan. From a long and intimate acquaintance personally with Chase S. Osborn, we have no doubt that he would hold every energy of his strong and virile mind to the end of giving this state an administration free from the taint of graft, and one that would be strong and efficient in every department. Mr. Osborn's plats, and we believe the voters of Michigan will agree with him, that it is better for the party and for the state for the Republicans to do their own house cleaning. He says he will do a thorough job of it if nominated and elected governor. Those who know the man well understand that he will be as good as his word—that kind of a man. He will not assume, he says, that any man has been guilty of misconduct as an office. But he will seek to have the books of account and the records of offices and departments given a searching examination. And while every man will have a "square deal," there will be no favors shown to any officer of the state who has been untrue to their trust, or who have been inefficient in the discharge of their official duties.

We believe it will be an mistake for the voters of this state to complain a strong man like Mr. Osborn to do the very work he says he is prepared to do. We have no use for some of the men who have been honored by the present administration with positions of trust, and we seem to hear the "cur" of the governor. While entertaining a high regard for Governor Warner personally, we believe he has listened to some bad advice, and has been misled by false reports. We believe he has listened to some bad advice, and has been misled by false reports. We believe he has allowed their own personal advantage rather than the public good.

It can do no harm to have a new deal in the state administration, and one that is pledged to the square deal proposition. We have confidence that Chase S. Osborn will, if nominated and elected, give the people a square deal as governor of Michigan. And if an investigation of the books and records of the state and of the departments shall show what Mr. Osborn insists is necessary—an extravagant expenditure of the public money, and in some places incompetent and inefficient administration of the public business, then it would surely be time to set about correcting these matters.

Osborne is the Man.

The real strongman and hot contest is for the nomination for governor. The contest has been going on for months. All three candidates are well-known locally, but the Hon. Chase S. Osborn of the Soo seems to be the enthusiastic choice of an extremely and almost overwhelming percentage of the Greenville people. He is certainly the most accomplished, the most versatile, the best equipped and most fearless candidate Michigan has ever had for governor. With Osborn in the executive chair there would be no state treasurer scandal, no Jackson prison rottenness, no grafting politics spending state money and time to maintain a political machine to perpetuate a regime and dictate a succession, and as the primary approaches the enthusiasm for Osborn and a new deal is surprising the state.—Greenville Call.

No one can doubt that Chase S. Osborn, candidate for governor, makes a host of friends in every county he visits. Everywhere he strikes a popular chord. Men like him personally and for the most part they endorse his doctrine. He does not make any extravagant statements, nor proclaims no false pretenses. He simply makes friends, and wherever there is a wonderful change of sentiment, we predict that when primary election day comes around, Sept. 6, Chase S. Osborn will be given a substantial majority vote in Michigan.—Sandusky Republican.

Chase S. Osborn has been called the Roosevelt of Michigan, for culture, force, in courage, in eloquence, in zeal, in persistence, in wide knowledge of men, in thorough acquaintance with the governments of the entire world, in a love of the common people and a will to do his duty. Osborn deserves the title.—Ithaca Herald.

MODEST VICTOR HUGO.

The Great Master Thought No Honor Too Great For Himself.

It was Théophile Gautier who said something to the effect that if he thought that one line of the great master, Victor Hugo, was lost he would not acknowledge it to himself if he were alone at the bottom of a dark well. On another occasion Gautier spoke of Victor Hugo as "a new Moses from Mount Sinai, charged to deliver the tablets of the law." Decidedly, Victor Hugo was a man who knew how to cast a spell upon those about him. For example, look at the following picture drawn by the "Souvenir sur Turgenieff":

"One evening Hugo's admirers assembled in his drawing room, were competing with one another in the eulogy of his genius, and the idea was thrown out, that the street by which he lived ought to bear his name. Some one suggested that the street was too small to be worthy of so great a poet, and the honor of bearing his name ought to be assigned to some more imposing thoroughfare. Then they proceeded to enumerate the most popular quarters of Paris. In an ascending scale, until one man exclaimed with enthusiasm that it would be no honor for the city of Paris itself to be renamed after the name of genius. Hugo leaning against the mantelpiece, listened complacently to these flatterers outbidding each other. Then, with an air of one engaged in deep thought, he turned to a young man and said to him in his grand style, 'Even that will come,' Renan."

THE OVARINAS.

Picturesque Barefooted Fish Hawkers of Portugal.

The ovarinas are perhaps the most interesting people in Portugal. They are probably the lineal descendants of the original inhabitants of the land, and have come from a small place called Mortosa (Sotarejo), not far from Oporto. As the termination indicates, the ovarinas are the women of those people.

Both old and young, for even young children are thus employed, are strikingly active and energetic. They go about barefoot, wearing a peculiar costume, and carrying huge baskets of fish and shellfish on their heads. They travel many miles a day and penetrate every corner of the city, crying their wares in a loud, unusual shout. They almost even to the sixth floor and formals with buyers. They go barefoot not because of their poverty, many of them possessing expensive gold ornaments, but because they can thus more easily cover the many miles they run during the day. Attempts have been made to do away with this method of selling fish, but they have all failed. The customers like to deal with these fish girls and can purchase from them very small amounts.

Fish is not purchased by weight, but by the fish or part of fish. The price averages 12 to 15 cents per pound. There are not less than 2,000 ovarinas engaged in selling fish in Lisbon.—Consular Report.

When He Didn't Stutter.

A confirmed stutterer went into a restaurant and met a few casual acquaintances, who at once commenced chaffing him most unmercifully respecting the impediment in his speech. At least one of them, a port item fellow who had been making himself rather conspicuous by his remarks, said, "Well, old man, I'll bet suppers round you can't order them without stuttering." "I-I-I-do-do-do," says Brown, and, to the astonishment of himself and the discomfiture of his challenger (all of whom were unaware of his lisping, as is often the case with stutterers, in first class shape), he beckoned the waiter and sang the order without the slightest hitch, then, turning round to his tormentor, said, "Ne-ne-ne, yy-you ce-can pp-pay."—Argonaut.

The Start of an Author.

Soon after "Treasure Island" had appeared and attracted public attention to Robert Louis Stevenson, two gentlemen were traveling up to London from Norfolk. One of them was reading "Treasure Island." Presently, having finished the book, he dropped it into his traveling bag remarking: "Well, I think I could myself write a better child's story than that." The other, who, by the way, was his brother, urged him to try. Six weeks afterward the former handed to the latter a complete tale in manuscript. It was "King Solomon's Mines," the first novel that made a reputation for Mr. Rider Haggard.

The Phrenological Test.

A distinguished phrenologist while dining at a hotel stared at the table that he had formed an opinion of the character of each one present. An Irishman said that he would propose a question and that if it was truthfully answered he would forever believe in phrenology. The phrenologist said he was satisfied and told him to proceed. "Tell," said the Irishman, "will you be after telling me am I married or single?"—London Telegraph.

A Discarded Lover's Revenge.

Here's a brand new, made in Swiss, method of revenge for discarded lovers. A young couple in Davos were to have been married, but the girl jilted her lover because he showed off his bicycle. The jilted man during the night pasted all the love letters he had received from his former on the walls of his house. "Heartless girl, I return you your letters," was inscribed in type-type above the correspondence.

Lighting the Way.

In the little Silesian town of Zarkau the authorities have adopted an ingenious automatic device for the benefit of those who are afraid to go home in the dark. The introduction of a coin in a slot at the foot of an electric light standard after extinguishing hours will light the roadway for twelve minutes.

A Possible Exception.

Wife—Isn't it a fact, dear, that handsome ones are proverbially dangerous? Husband—Well, I don't know. I always try to be pleasant.

A Hart Schaffner & Marx Special Sale

The fact is such clothes as Hart Schaffner & Marx make are seldom sold at less than the full price; it isn't necessary; they're always worth full price. But we buy more clothes than just enough; we can't tell in advance what we're going to want; we want to have more, anyway. And here they are.

They're just such clothes as we sold during the Spring & Summer—fine, high-class Hart Schaffner & Marx clothes; suits that are worth and sold for $25, $22, $20, now marked to sell at $19, $17, $15.

The difference in the price represents our desire not to carry over these summer goods until next spring; we offer you this difference to induce you to take the clothes now. You'll realize what a big inducement it is when you see the goods.

Fond Mother Brought to Realize That Child's Mind Was Not Yet Fully Developed.

"The average child is a veritable bachelor," said his psychology professor, "and until its mind is sufficiently developed to comprehend the deeper meanings of religion, it remains a little Pagan."

Young Mrs. Windson smiled politely, but with a mo-thid-to-not-another-childrenare expression she said:

"That may be true in many instances, but I do wish you could hear my little Lois say her prayers. She is so earnest that I believe she fully understands all I've tried to tell her."

It was the professor's turn to look politely incredulous.

"I'll call her in and let her answer for herself," she added, somewhat ruffled by his indifference.

In response to her summons, a small girl entered the room.

"Darling," said the mother fondly, "tell Professor Brindley to whom you say your little prayers."

Lois looked up with an expression of angelic sweetness.

"To the bed," she answered briefly.—Lippincott's.

The Lure of the National Capital

BY EDWARD B. CLARK

THEY cannot keep away, for the Washington lure is strong upon them. The attraction of the capital draws former senators and former representatives here just as surely as the call of duty summons the present officeholder. They drift down in November and scores of them stay until the adjournment, and other scores stay all through the summer.

Some men who before they were sent to congress rarely left their environments of their home villages have found after a term or two in the capital city, that the district had few attractions to offer them, provided there was money enough in their bank accounts to keep them in comfort in the city by the Potomac.

There are former senators and representatives whose incomes have been sufficient to secure them government positions in the capital which will not only allow them to remain here, but which will pay them for their stay. The lot of those men seems to be particularly fortunate, and they are the objects of more or less envy on the part of those who would like to stay here, but who owing to pecuniary reasons sons and to liability to get office are compelled to return home.

There are plenty of evidences that former representatives who have chosen, after having once been defeated in the home district, to stay away from the native heath, are not altogether free from the criticisms of the home people, and perhaps there is no reason why they should be. When a man who has spent his entire life among certain people is weaned away from them by a short residence elsewhere, it seems that resentment springs, and few denials probably will come to the statement that a good many of the former officials who stay in Washington in preference to going home are not without frequent intimations that the people back in the district regard them in some degree as deserters.

Of course there are exceptions to every rule and in the case of senators and representatives who have served for a long term of years, the opportunities are not so easy to secure. They have the right there to appear because of their former services. There is one marked and shining exception however, to the rule of occasional return to the chamber where the legislative service was rendered. When Samuel Pasco of Florida left congress in 1891, to be gone six years, he declared that he would never appear upon the floor of the senate while he was out of office, nor would he go to the capitol unless his professional business called him to appear before the Supreme Court. Spooner kept his word. He always had objected to the role which admitted former senators to the floor of the senate. He did not say so, but he thought that in coming few cases the lobbying opportunity might be too strong to be resisted by some of the senators who were not above using their personal influence with their former colleagues on behalf of some specific legislation.

In the spring of 1897, John C. Spooner resigned from the United States senate. After the six years of his absence from congress was ended he had been returned again to the upper house, but in the spring there was no temptation to resort to earlier privileges of law. Since the day that Senator Spooner left for this supposedly the last time, he has not been in the senate of the United States, nor has he been seen in the corridors of the capitol. He is in his law practice in New York, and occasionally he comes to Washington, but walks away other former representatives he shuns the actual scene of his legislative activities.

Gen. Charles Grosvenor of Ohio, who was in the house of representatives for years, and who was considered one of its most picturesque characters, a man thoroughly energetic in debate and appealing personal qualities, stays in the Ohio

Promises to be Perfect

Mammoth Lens Recently Cast in France Seems to Justify Expectations.

The world's most powerful telescope lens was recently cast in France and is now in process of cooling. The first such large lens, which was attempted some years ago, proved a failure, yet everything seems to show that the one just cast will be a success. This, however, cannot be known with certainty until the coolingprocess is over, a few month being required to let the heat properly leave the lens.

Over eight feet in diameter, and five inches in weight, this lens is so large and cumbersome that a special mounting will be built. As planned, it will be hoisted to the top of Mount Wilson, over a mile above the sea, there to be built into the observatory telescope. As this gigantic piece of glass must be so placed that it can be moved by clockwork to counteract the movement of the earth in rotating, it will be pivoted upon a steel bearing which has been immersed in mercury, as was the 60-inch lens, the largest hitherto in the world.

If it be remembered that to obtain a successful, flawless lens hundreds must be cast, the best of them selected, and so on until one clear and uniform lens is obtained, this process often taking as long as three years, the cost and worth of this 8 1-3 foot lens can be realized. Astronomers and lovers of the heavens all over the globe are said to be awaiting news of the success or failure of the lens with the keenest interest, as they believe it will, if successful, throw light on a subject as yet unexplained natural phenomena.—The Pathfinder.

But Without the Charm.

An old coquette has all the advice of a young one, and none of its charm.—Dupuy.

eye state most of the time now that he has retired from congress, but the Washington lure draws him here periodically and he is seen always in his old haunts. General Grosvenor was such a fixture that it seems impossible to realize when he comes back and appears in the old places that he has been away at all.

No one, not even James Charles Grosvenor more than Champ Clark, the Democratic leader. Grosvenor is a standpatter of such strength that Mr. Cannon it was said, used to sit abashed in his presence.

Mr. Clark is a free trader so sturdy that the other parties are weaklings; but nevertheless these two tariff extremes are not a friendship that time and separation have not been able to break.

In the Mann tariff Republicans when General Grosvenor retired, that they were not entirely hopeless as long as John Dalzell of Pennsylvania remained with them. Dalzell recently had a narrow escape from losing the nomination for congress. If he by any chance should be defeated at the election it is believed that the hare will be as strong upon him as it has upon the others.

Dalzell is as picturesque in his way as Grosvenor is in his way. It always was said of him that he never slept. He is nervous energy in the essence, and here wakeful of Republican interests generally on the floor than is the titular Republican leader, Mr. Dalzell is always looking out for the interests of his constituents.

One drowsy June day when the house was through, Dalzell yielding to environment, nodded and then napped. Instantly the witty, wide awake Democrats put through something to which no one saw any objection. It touched Pittsburg.

Dalzell awoke too late. He had been asleep at the switch. Had his eyes never known sight of sleep that hour, he could not have lived down the memory of that one unconscious moment. One day just before the close of the last session, as he was leaving the White House, three voices in union called to him so that all within a block could hear: "Any sleep this session, John?"

Dalzell was wakeful to this emergency and his answer carried little comfort to the inquirers, for none of the three was a standpatter:

"Not if the tariff is up," he sent.

During the closing days of the last session of congress something of a "filibuster" was attempted by the Democrats in the senate in order to make sure that action should be taken on the statehood bill. A filibuster is known to the parlance as an attempt to delay legislation. The senate has no set rules like those of the house, and so if one man chooses to talk on any particular subject he can delay the consideration of any measure that he chooses, and the limit of his endurance is the limit of the body that is on his force although if he has other senators of his own mind he can "spell" him in the speaking, and thus relieve one another. The filibuster is almost indefinitely long.

One of the most noted filibusters of recent years was conducted by three men still in the service, and curiously enough the arrangement for the filibuster was made by emissaries of both parties. The active participants were Senators Stone of Missouri and Gore of Oklahoma, Democrats, and Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, Republican.

Three three senators made up their minds that they did not wish to have a vote taken on the conference bill which had been reported by Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, a bill which some of the senators said was a mere makeshift and would accomplish no good purposes.

In these days it is hard to find in congress a typical Yankee voice which the Englishmen say is our national characteristic. Gore of Oklahoma, however, has it. Why, it is hard to tell, but he has it to full measure, and no Maine coast man in Yankee voice characteristics can surpass this son of the western plains state.

The Filibuster in which Gore, La Follette and Stone took part was continued through a night and a day when Washington was hotter than it ever had been known to be before, at least so the natives say. When Washington heat takes possession of the capital's barrier it lays hold on the premises not to let go until November. It is impossible to keep cool in either houses of congress when the heat of Washington takes its earlier

During many of the hours La Follette spoke there were comparatively few senators in the chamber. Hour after hour he spoke, and then taking up his book of fiction, he read with a perfect regard for the rules of enunciation. His auditors were all sleepy and most of them were out of humor because there were only two who were in sympathy with the speaker, and yet perforce every person in the chamber gave heed to what La Follette was reading. For its subject matter perhaps they cared not a whit, and yet by the force of his reading delivery he drove it home to their attention.

When La Follette had ceased speaking Senator Gore of Oklahoma, who as had been planned, took up the work and kept at it for some hours. He was relieved by Senator Stone of Missouri, who droned was tired with his previous vocal attempt to keep the senate from a vote. The Missourian kept it up for seven hours and then Gore relieved him once more. That filibuster ended because Gore being tired, failed to note, and no one told him, that Senator Stone whom he expected was to relieve him, was not present in the chamber when the Oklahoma senator sat down for the third time. The vice-

-ln senator's voice seemed to be actually in bet with conditions that surrounded him, and so Gore than it was during the opening hour.

The Wisconsin senator entered into rather a rasping voice which like the voice of Gore of Oklahoma, is open to the Yankee characterization, but it was sweet, mellowsounding compared to one many choose to call it, passes with the first few minutes of utterance. The roughness is softened and with the words fall smooth and rounded and with a certain superfluity of tone, even though the subject lacks soaking of appeal.

When a senator has the floor in his own right, he can talk upon any subject he may wishing the run. He does not of necessity have to confine himself to the subject in hand. So it was that La Follette did not speak entirely of the currency question, but about other matters as well. Occasionally in order that he might spare his brain the trouble of thought and so keep it unwearied, he read from a book of fiction.

LAW'S VALUE SHOWN

FIGURES REPUBLICANS MAY POINT TO WITH PRIDE.

Workings of Payne-Aldrich Measure Shown to Have Been of Benefit to the Country—Official Statistics Quoted.

The Payne-Aldrich law, it will be remembered, went into effect on the 6th of August of last year, so that the returns for the full fiscal year, which begins on the first of July, represent only roughly and approximately the working of the new law. Commissioner Dana of the bureau of statistics calls out the returns for the eleven months since the law went into effect. The statement shows the total imports in the eleven months period to have been $1,445,364,550, against $1,231,828,976 in the corresponding months of the fiscal year 1907, the previous high record year of imports. Of this total under the Payne law, 49.14 per cent entered free of duty, being a larger percentage free of duty than in the corresponding period of any year under the Wilson tariff law, and 1892 and 1894, under the McKinley law, which permitted more free of duty. Customs receipts during the eleven months' operation of the Payne tariff law were $292,722,151, exceeding those of the corresponding period of any earlier year except 1907, when the receipts for the corresponding month aggregated $307,023,261. Compared the customs receipts for the period, as reported by the treasury department, $292,822,161, with the value of imports as reported to the bureau of statistics by the collectors of customs, $1,445,360,550, the average ad valorem rate of duty will be found to have been 20.95 per cent., and dutiable imports 41.79 per cent.

The combination of this ad valorem rate of duty with that of corresponding periods in each year back to 1891 shows a lower rate on total imports than in any earlier year except 1907, the ad valorem rate averaged 20.95 per cent., and 1894, the closing year of the McKinley law, when the ad valorem rate averaged 19.79 per cent.

The Payne law has been more lenient in levying free of duty under the entire operation of the Payne law than for any period longer than under the Dingley or Wilson law, but slightly less than under the McKinley law, the share entering free of duty under the Payne law during its entire operation having been 49.14 per cent.; under the Dingley law during its entire period, 44.31 per cent.; under the Wilson law during its entire period, 48.83 per cent., and under the McKinley law during its entire operation, 53.04 per cent. And let it be remembered that the McKinley law imposed no duty on sugar.

The Tariff as a Revenue Raiser.

To the minor features of the tariff law that have confounded the critics is now to be added great capacity as a revenue producer. The end of the fiscal year has brought about one of deficits between government receipts and expenditures. Last year there was a shortage, as regarded the income from all sources for the 12 months of $57,243,000. This year there is a surplus of more than $9,500,000. The receipts included a deficit of $24,000,000. The new law has brought a revolution in this respect and has relieved the government from conditions that involved great embarrassment. It is now stated that it may not be necessary, for the present at least, to issue bonds, as the government has power to do, for prosecuting work on the Panama canal, the interest revenues permitting expenditure of the money from current receipts.

New Tariff Law Justified.

The showing for the past year is gratifying from every standpoint. It justifies the favorable city crown the vacillations of the working of the tariff act. In other words, you will discover about better if you wait immediately after having eaten it, than if you sit still. Try this, and tell you how you will gain in weight, besides saving more in the cost of living than you will lose in the wear and tear of shoe leather.

But suppose you are already corpulent, is walk big after meals, in that case, make you obese? No.

Paradoxical as the statement may sound, walking will in that case make you thinner. Fat is a very unstable compound, and when it is present in excess more of it is destroyed by the increased amount of oxygen in the blood—due to the exercise—than is deposited by the blood, while on the other hand when sufficient tissue is deficient in oxygen-bearing blood, which also carries fatty particles, deposits more fat than it can destroy, and thus the thin subject grows heavier.

Walking, then, is the open air is an exercise par excellence for everybody. It shakes up the liver just enough to keep it in good working order, it enlivens the blood by increasing its amount of oxygen, thus favoring the destruction and elimination from the system of effete matter and poisons, particularly by the lungs, skin and kidneys, and finally by stimulating activity of the bowels and liver it tends to prevent the deposition of morbid matters of a tuberculous or cancerous nature.

SULLIVAN, MICHAEL.

An East Boston doctor told of the experience of a druggist on the other day who came into his store to buy a mustard plaster. After the man had signed the book as required he said: "Now, don't get that name twisted. I'm Michael Sullivan, and not Sullivan Michael, same as they turned it around in the directory."—Boston Journal.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR TRADE

American Foreign Commerce the Coming Year Bound to Assume Gigantic Proportions.

One important factor in the outlook for trade and industry is the excellent condition existing in the countries which are the best customers American producers have outside their home markets. The prospect for foreign purchasers is quite different from that which would exist if the times were bad in Great Britain, Germany, Canada, France and Mexico.

But these best patrons of American exporters are all in better than an average state of industrial and commercial activity. Canada is enjoying a great advance in every form of material development, and though the widespread and severe damage to the wheat crop in the Canadian northwest will undoubtedly check this growth for the next year or so, it will not prevent a steady and rapid advance in progress of the Dominion will be rapid. Mexico is making notable strides in industries and trade and is in the development of a country still far below the possibilities of its natural wealth.

Great Britain, Germany and France, the three leading customers of American producers in the Old World, are expanding their foreign trade and increasing their industrial strength and efficiency. We are all in a position to buy more American merchandise than ever before, and the excellent prospect for American exports to all of these great European markets.

It is impossible to form an intelligent estimate of the business outlook for the coming year without taking account of conditions where the surplus of American farms and factories, mines and mines and forests, is largely disposed of. The prosperity of the best customers of the United States in foreign lands is one of the most important factors in our activity and many-sided development in the business of the American people.

Don't Get Dizzy.

The Democrats can not profit by Republican betrayal of the Republican cause. They have no other hope on earth than that which they gain through hope for treason in the Republican camp. How can a Democrat go out and persuade a farmer to vote the Democratic ticket when the farmer knows that during the last Democratic administration a 250-pound hog was taken in exchange for only 150 pounds of granulated sugar, whereas now it can be taken in exchange for only bring 500 pounds of the same kind of sugar. And the same comparison can be made with calico and woolen goods and everything a farmer has to buy. Democrats want to make it impossible of wheat to get a farm wagon; today it is binder, or one load of wheat, will pay for a wagon. Fifteen years ago the banks controlled the farmers; today the farmers control the banks, and these changes have come to pass under the Republican party. It seems to me the only question is whether we can keep our heads and avoid being made dizzy by the force and power of the progress being made.—Senator Carter.

WILLY WAS TOO LIBERAL

Overuspply of Alcoholic Stimulants Disturbed Schedule of Funeral Arrangements.

Dean Ramsay's memoirs contain an anecdote of an old woman of Strathmiy. Just before her death she solemnly instructed her grandchild: "Willy, I'm deein', and as yo'll hae the charge o' a' I have, mind now that a decent funeral is to be used at my funeral as there was at my baptism."

Willy, having no record of the occasion of the baptism, decided to give every mourner as much as he stabed, with the result that the funeral procession, having to traverse an inlet to the churchyard on a short November day, arrived only at nightfall.

Then it was discovered that the mourners, halting at a wayside inn, had seated the coffin on a dyke and left it there when they resumed their journey. The corpse was a day late in arriving at the grave.

STATE'S ANSWER TO OIL COMPANIES

DOCUMENT FILED IN THE INGHAM CIRCUIT COURT.

REPLY PREPARED BY KUHN

Defense Entered in Suit Started to Avoid Paying Taxes on Oil Cars Which Come Into the State of Michigan.

Lansing.—Attorney General Kuhn has prepared the answer of the state in the case instituted by the oil refineries to avoid paying taxes on their oil cars which enter this state, and filed the document in the Ingham circuit court, where the case is to be tried. The question as to the validity of the tax imposed is left for the discussion in court, but the state's lawyer points out that during the four years this tax has been assessed, the companies have failed to file the reports required as to their business within the state. On this account it is asserted the companies have not paid what is claimed that the tax commission has arbitrarily assessed their property without proper investigation, or the law states that the commission shall make the assessment upon what other information is obtainable in case the companies do not file the reports.

Sys Cheboygan Jail Is Filthy.

Secretary Abel Shivey of the state board of corrections and charities, who returned from a tour of inspection of jails and county poorhouses in the upper part of the lower peninsula and the upper peninsula, has filed a report.

The Cheboygan county jail, Secretary Murray's report tells, is not properly equipped with beds, and prisoners are forced to sleep on floors that are infrequently swept. The filth is described as "terrible," and in this connection Murray says that the county officials have ignored the order of the state board to take steps to remedy conditions.

Saginaw Wants an Investigation.

Following much agitation over the electric lighting and power rates in the city and as the result of the Gaslight merger, the Michigan Power company takes over the Bartlett Illuminating company and the businessmen of the former's rates, in many instances higher than those charged by the latter, the city commission unanimously decided to ask the state railway commission to investigate and establish an equitable schedule of rates for this city. The mayor and city attorney were instructed to appeal to the commission at once and ask that the hearing the appeal was commenced and it will be forwarded to the commission as soon as possible.

Ask State to Set Rates.

Following agitation over the electric lighting and power rates in this city and at the hands of the Eastern Michigan Power company taking over the Bartlett Illuminating company and the installation of the former's rates, in many instances higher than those charged by the latter, the city commission unanimously decided to ask the state railway commission to investigate and establish an equitable schedule of rates for this city. The mayor and city attorney were instructed to appeal to the commission, and the work of presenting the appeal was commenced today and it will be forwarded to the commission as soon as possible.

Must't Overwork Women.

As the result of complaints made by Flint citizens, Miss Lucile M. Burton of Saginaw, state factory inspector, visited this city and complained to the Flint Chamber of Commerce of the practice of employing women for long hours. The state law limits the number of hours that women may be employed to 9 hours a day, and 54 hours a week, and Miss Burton said that the Flint laundries have been violating the law in regard to limiting the hours which females may work each week. Miss Burton said that the state board has advanced in price.—Hickory (N. C.) Times-Mercury.

Still Old Bourbon Party.

As in 1875, so today Democratic leaders pay little heed to reconstructing their own party, to realignment of the scattered forces behind real principles and new forces; they attempt to lean on the broken reed of Republican disaffection, to seduce the dissatisfied and to make of the Democracy on the promise that it holds the fulfillment of their desires. Under these circumstances, history can but repeat itself.

Same Old Editorials.

The season is now at hand when the Democratic editors take the quill in hand and, lighting his corncob, proceeds to revamp those hot old editorials explaining wherein and how "all signs point to Democratic success this fall."—Saratoga Sentinel.

Just a Suggestion.

The London Economist finds that the average selling price of prices Ewbank since 1850 is 30 per cent. Would it not be a good idea for the tariff commission to find out during the last Democratic administration a 250-pound hog was taken in exchange for only 150 pounds of granulated sugar, whereas now it can be taken in exchange for only bring 500 pounds of the same kind of sugar. And the same comparison can be made with calico and woolen goods and everything a farmer has to buy. Plan to Value State Property.

While their intention to do so has been known for several months, the railroads made public their plans to secure an accurate valuation of the property property of the state by announcing that they had placed the work in charge of Ira T. Sayre of Flushing, a former member of the tax commission, and Orin Bolt of Muskegon, a former secretary of the commission.

It is an immense job to go through every county in the state, but the railroads feel that the only way they can convince the legislature that they are being discriminated against is to get the facts and lay them before that body in order to get relief.

"There is nothing secret about our work," said A. R. Atwater of the Grand Trunk. "We know we are being assessed at full cash value, and we also know that the agricultural lands of the state will not average 60 per cent of their cash value. The railroads must have relief, and we intend to present the facts to the legislature fairly and honestly.

"We have no intention of diverting the primary school funds or of trying to shift our taxes. We could have started suit, but in justice to the state and to ourselves we decided to go to the expense of getting at the exact facts. In the time the legislature meets in January we hope to place before it a summary of the so called examination, and when the board of equalization meets next August we will have a schedule of every county in the state."

Mr. Sayre was in the city and outlined the work he has undertaken.

Petitions State Board.

The city's petition to the state railroad commission was completed and forwarded to that body asking for an investigation of the lighting and power rates of the Bartlett Illuminating company, the Saginaw Power company, and the Eastern Michigan Power company. All the transactions which have taken place within a year have been compiled and all the circumstances related.

A review of the steps taken by the Bartlett company in the alleged sale to the Saginaw Power company is given, and the petition shows that by the sale the local company has forfeited its rights in Saginaw that could be sold. It is further claimed that the Eastern Michigan company "received franchise for power to be generated from the waters of the Au Sable, and has no franchise to sell electricity manufactured in Saginaw." It also claimed that the rates are exorbitant.

Politicians Take Heed

Some over zealous politicians or their friends are due for a tilt with the new primary law unless some of them become more familiar than they are at the present time with its numerous provisions they will be facing a big fine or jail imprisonment.

It is said that in many localities larger cuts are being run in some papers than the law allows. Get familiar with the law or someone—perhaps a rival—will make matters interesting. Not knowing the law will not excuse a man. Candidates, workers for candidates and all voters should become familiar with this law.

If not familiar it is liable to cause some one a fine of not exceeding $500 and imprisonment not to exceed six months and the provisions are very strict.

Just a few reminders of the law that are of importance to all candidates and voters:

Remember the size of the cuts are limited.

All nominating petitions must be filed by 4 o'clock on the afternoon of August 22, the secretary of State to forwith prepare lists of candidates as they will appear on the ballots.

General Primary day September 6

County canvass September 13.

State canvass, not later than September 26.

County conventions, between September 8 and 22.

State convention between September 7 and October 16, not less than 10 days after the meeting of the state board of canvassers. This year fixed for October 6 at Detroit.

County returns to be sent to the secretary of state not later than September 16.

Head Section 45 of the primary law carefully. Its a hard paragraph to digest at best but read and heed. Briefly it is intended to prescribe a penalty for hiring with money and the promise of positions, party workers either prior to or on primary election day.

Section 47 covers the posting of bills, posters, lithographs, photographs, etc.

This law cannot be read too carefully and it is almost safe to say that every county in the state has already seen a violation of the law—largely through ignorance, but this ignorance will not excuse the politician or his friends if the matter gets into the courts. Not only are these people violating the primary law but many editors in both the upper and lower peninsula have overstepped some of the provisions prescribed.

Traverse City Eagle: Mr. C. Green returned Tuesday from North Manitou island, where he had been on a business trip. Mr. Green reports that cherries are just now in condition for picking on the island, and that they are of the finest quality and bring top prices. At the fruit farm of John Hawley, located on the east end of the island, many pickers are now at work getting the crop ready to ship. The pickers are being paid 40 cents per crate for picking, this being a record price for the service. Fruit crops on the island are always much later than on the mainland, the cherry crop being an excellent example of this delay in fruit ripening at the mainland where the cooling breezes from all sides are given full sway. The lateness of the crop gives the fruit an added value, for cherries are very scarce this time of year, and the market in Chicago will pay almost any price for the fruit. The cherries are all of the sour variieties, as the sweet cherries have been gone for some time.

Osborn Still Leading

Detroit Saturday Night—Since last week's edition went to press we have received from the editors of Michigan 35 more republican votes, and two or three others. The republicans who expressed their choice for governor gave 17 votes to Osborn, 10 to Kelley and 4 to Musselman. This makes the total vote among the republican editors 160 for Osborn, 65 for Kelley and 35 for Musselman.

For the probable winner in the legislative district in which the home of Mr. Osborn received 10 votes, Kelley 9 and Musselman 2. This makes the total on this part of the pool 107 for Osborn, 60 for Kelley, and 13 for Musselman.

Judging by the total vote he has received from the republican editors there are two eighths, or more, about the advisability of nominating Mr. Musselman. But the vote of the editors leaves room for only one opinion as to whether Warnerism is still an issue in this campaign or not. Mr. Kelley long ago recognized it as an issue and as gracefully as the circumstances would permit read a sort of declaration of independence at Mt. Pleasant a few weeks ago.

Either that declaration was too late or it missed fire. Kelley was given the honor of saving Mr. Warner's bacon in the primary campaign two years ago. Now he is paying for it. The glory which he won on the stump as a Warnerite now serves only to illumine his identity with the Warner admiration. The thrust he made at Osborn the other day for running as an anti-Warner candidate after contributing $750 to the Warner campaign fund was very neatly turned by the Saginaw man with the reply that he was in the habit of contributing to republican campaigns irrespective of the candidates.

Mr. Kelley will have to come again and come harder if he wants to align Osborn with the Warnerities in the public mind. And he will have to come harder than he did at Mt. Pleasant if he hopes to improve the editors of Michigan with the completeness and genuineness of his divorce from Warnerism and its chief priest.

It Pleases the Opposition

Nearly every report from every meeting held by Mr. Towsend in his campaign for the nomination to the United States senate tells of his bitter arraignment of the great leaders of his party, and especially of the great party leaders in the senate with whom he seeks to associate and with whose co-operation he hopes to accomplish great things for the state. The same reports tell of his denunciation of the Payne tariff law that became a law by his vote fully as much as by the vote of any other member of congress; of his somewhat spirited recital of the business of his party, and of his brilliant portrayal of his own erratic course in congress. All of this is immensely interesting to the Democratic and Socialistic hearers, who compose the greater part of his audience, and who clap their hands and cheer like one. It makes easy copy for black-headed articles in all the papers that are bitterly hostile to the Republican party, its policies and leaders.

It ought to make every Republican scratch his head and think.

B., member of the Christian Science board of lectureship of the First Church Christ Scientist in Boston. Christian Science, as a cult, in its progress along the pathway of religious endeavor, has passed that period when the term "cult" can be justly applied to it. That the faith has drawn to its many bright intellects and very many deeply religious minds cannot be denied, and the public, as a consequence, is in a receptive mood regarding the claims set up by Christian Science teachers and leaders.

—The right of the city to trim shade trees has been challenged by a suit for trespass, brought by no less a person than the circuit judge. We have always been loth to criticize the village council. It is a thankless job, and much unjust criticism always attaches to it. We believe that in the tree trimming matter the council meant well and it is equally true that there were places where the work was necessary. But we believe that the right and the wishes of the individual citizen is a factor. The citizen planted the trees he nursed them in their infancy. They are his property. He controls the soil to the curb. If the condition of the trees suit him, and they are not an obstruction to pedestrians, we question the right of the city to trim them.

Importation of Wild Animals

HE return of Colonel Roosevelt and party from Africa, with the cargo of animal specimens which had been killed during their hunt in the wildest of the jungle, reminds New York dealer in wild beasts to talk interestingly of the loss he has in which his firm is engaged. There are nearly a dozen firms in New York city that carry on an immense business in the transportation of animals fresh from the jungle. And this number, of course, does not include such immense foreign animal firms as Hagenbeck. It is a paying business, as indeed are all business where the demand exceeds the supply. The demand for wild beasts is far greater than the supply, and as a consequence prices are good, and the dealers amid of wealth. The extent of the demand may be appreciated when one considers that most of the great cities in the United States have zoological parks or menageries, and that the animals are constantly being purchased by them. Then there are private collectors and circuses and the like, that are ever ready to pay the highest prices for desirable animals. The animal dealer who could secure and bring to this country three or four gorillas would make a small fortune. But no dealer has ever succeeded in doing this. The gorillas die in a few weeks in captivity; they could not stand an ocean trip for a week.

A rusty old German liner lumbers noisily into Quarantine, and then the unloading on the tide. An officer, with broad, red, bewhiskered face, stands at the head of the companies ladder, and he sudden a peculiar audio, as a husky screamlike inflation rises from below. "The animals are getting hungry," he explains; "you know we have several hundred of them on the 'tween decks. Want to see them? All right." In another minute, probably, the visitor is surrounded by a scene of the world is at our side. He is not a trainer, or even a keeper, but he is a sort of middle man, or go-between, and his special business is the personal management of wild animal tours. He receives them—lions, tigers, elephants, everything else—at Hamburg, where they have been brought fresh from their native wilds, and not every expert knows his business. He owns a vessel bound for New York, but he sails with them to make sure that they arrive safely and in good health. And he sure that if the tiger gets off on his deck and needs a nice fresh lion rabbit to tone up his system, this man will be aware of the fact almost before the tiger is—and, orp, a steep tiger bounce is unselfish in accordance with the precepts of wild beast materia medica. Then, too, one can never tell just when the big lion is going to rouse from his lazy gorge; when he does he wants a tenderloin young goat, and he wants it quick. It is a part of the animal man's duties to anticipate the lion's appetite with all possible expedition.

He is a quiet, unassuming man, with stoop shoulders and hazy eyesight, and he looks the way to the lower decks without a word. Perhaps the unfamiliar may believe that a tour through the animal section of a freighter-carrier coast is an unimpressive experience. Well, let them try it and see. They can be said at the outset—it is somewhat different from a menagerie. It means something of a change in the diet, and to a human—and odd with animals that have been ruthlessly snatched from their lairs in Africa or Asia, or elsewhere, and clapped into little barred boxes, not as large as dry goods cases; slammed out and of days have to the vessels of several seas on the way to Hamburg; then finally placed in the stygian 'tween decks of a German hooker.

The swaddling cribs seas of the North Atlantic have not improved their tempers, or their nerves, systems and the sullen temper of Quantine is quickly ingrained with that fact. The howls and whines and the barks come abruptly as the steamer enters. For they bring the smell of hay, and the great beasts sniff longingly, and hungrily, and too.

The cages lined both sides of the gloomy space, with a little passageway between the boxes. Perhaps this passageway was three feet wide, not more. The cages were piled two and sometimes three deep. In the lumbering, creaky, ramshackle world he is there; in the next above a smaller animal, say, a leopard or a lynx, and above that a bear, or a bunch of monkeys. Think of it! A forest, or a bunch of monkeys, with ferocious animals, sleeping along for 100 feet on end. Odd. Talk about nightmares! The reporter's hair stiffened out like so many pieces of wire, and he wished most fervently that he had not come. It was more agreeable, by far, to see these animals in a zoo, maybe where the cages are ample and the bars an inch thick.

"Never keep in the middle of the aisle," says one of the animal men; "these fellows sometimes get nervous."

Words such as these, of course, hardly tended to reassure.

It really was too dark to see much. One caught a glimpse of a tawny shape, or a gray, gloomy perspective until lost in the darkness, of rows of glowing green eyes and great teeth with the flash of red tongue writhing between. A zebra switched the reporter with his tail and he turned, only to jump almost out of his skin as an elephant touched him on the other shoulder with his trunk.

He was hardly over his scare when, zip! a leopard reached out after his coat tail.

In one way this lower deck section was a good place to visit; the joy and relief in being able to leave it furnished the biggest and most absorbing sensations that this monotonous world has to offer. Imagine that you had just been released from a Russian prison, and the sights and the sounds and the smell of real

A TRIBUTE TO HON. CHASE S. OSBORN

(From One Who Knows Him).

To My Friends in Hillsdale County:

I have felt that I wanted to say a few words to you, giving my opinion of Chase S. Osborn's qualifications for governor of this state, and take this way of doing so. My reason for this feeling is that Mr. Osborn has been my close friend for many years, and I have great admiration for him as a marked character. He is so profoundly fitted for the duties of chief executive of our state that I see confronting us, if you all knew him as I do you would at once be his loyal friends and supporters—that the dignity of his character would commend him to you. He is a man of wide sympathies and is a deep and conscientious student of civic and social problems; in this particular he has few equals. He is honest with himself and all others in any position of trust which he has held he has never been swayed or influenced by personal considerations, but has had an eye single to his duty and responsibility to do the best possible as he understood it. He is a thoroughly trained statesman, an educated gentleman, a graceful, polished orator, a successful man of affairs, and, above and beyond all, he is true to himself and, as Shakespeare says:

"This above all: To thine own self be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man."

I take much pleasure in saying this to you because it comes from the heart. Hoping that in the interest of good government you may give to him your support, I am,

Yours sincerely,
WALTER H. SAWYER,
—Hillsdale Standard-Herald

OSBORN SENTIMENT IN WAYNE.

The one feature of the North Red Cross chautauqua held in Wayne park, Thursday, that stood out in bold relief from the ordinary round of handclapping and speech making, was the pronounced Osborn sentiment, which began to manifest itself as soon as the host called away from the Detroit clock, and continued throughout the day, waxing stronger every moment. It reached its height after his speech in the grove, when men, women and even the children joined in giving him what was little short of an ovation. His earnestness and his eloquence won the hearts of all, and the burst of applause that followed was spontaneous and heartfelt.

Mr. Osborn's address was not a political harangue in any sense. It was more in the nature of a heart-to-heart talk between friends, and his remarks were addressed to the children as well as to grown-ups.

"In the old days," he said, "they used to judge a man by the size of his arm. Later they came to judge him by the size of his purse, but I want it understood that this is no effort on anyone present (with a closing at Congressman Denby). Then there came a time when the head was the standard of measurement, and still later the mouth, and that is no reflection on any of the men on this platform. Now in these days days we have come to measure man by their hearts and the warmth of their minds, and I believe that is the best standard of measurement."

In conclusion he said:

"If my candidacy makes for a better understanding between the great north country of ours, known as the upper peninsula, and the lower section of our state I shall be happy. And now may God bless every one of you."—Detroit Times.

"It is evident that the newspaper men of Michigan would like to see one of their number made governor, and for this reason the great majority of them are doing all in their power to have Chase S. Osborn nominated at the September primaries. They know that the late Governor Johnson of Minnesota was one of the best governors that state ever had, and that he was a newspaper man. His administration attracted favorable attention to every part of the Union and was regarded as the light of a good one. Mr. Osborn is a good man of the stamp of a man that Governor Johnson was. He is a clean cut, manly man, who understands the needs of the state and knows that the people are looking for an administration that is not bound up in self-interests and one that will have in mind the good of the people in general. Mr. Osborn is well equipped for the place, he has been a close student of all public questions and believes thoroughly in a square deal. The newspaper men of the state want to see him given a trial, as they feel that the people will be more than satisfied with him, and that he will stand the test.—Fremont Review.

The Chippewa county member of the executive committee of the State Finance, the home county of Chase S. Osborn, is every spot and place and grace to his fellow Gangers that he yearns him the safest man before the people today in which the farmer can repose trust. This gentleman, Jerry Lawson, has known Osborn many years and is willing to stump the state for him and donate his time on the ground that Osborn has been unjustly assailed by people who are trying to in this manner capture the votes of the Republican organization.—Howard City Record.

A Softened Expression.

"Father," said the small boy, "what is a compromise?"

"It is something, my son, that enables you to say he is a free lance instead of admitting that he is out of a job."—Washington Star.

A man never runs on a bench, and never pulls the wheels at their head.

You can conquer your cares more easily if you do not continually carry a long face.

THE U. P.'S FAVORITE SON.

The upper peninsula has a favorite son. He likewise is admirably qualified for the office of governor. He is a man of broad sympathies, the qualities of mind and disposition, courage. He has convictions and does not slate them a yet when he is asked to make them known. He has courage to hit a blow that needs hitting and to nail in to clean up any bad place in state government that happens to need cleaning. He is one of the best equipped candidates for high office who has come before the voters of Michigan for many years.

All these things and the fact that he is a favorite son outlike him to the loyal support of the upper peninsula voters the same as Mr. Musselman is going to have the support of the voters in Kent. And make no mistake, Mr. Osborn is going to get it. Friends of the other candidates may paint the situation as rosate as they please in their misplaced hopes but when primary day comes the upper Michigan vote will come up to Mr. Osborn's most sanguine hopes. The upper peninsula pulls upwards a game fighter and a fearless man and when he comes from among them they back him to a finish.—Marquette Journal.

M'LAUGHLIN FOR OSBORN.

The many personal and political friends of Congressman McLaughlin in this city and this section of the Ninth congressional district will be interested and most of them greatly pleased over the fact that Mr. McLaughlin has announced his sincere desire for the nomination of Chase S. Osborn as the Republican candidate for governor. Congressman McLaughlin knows something of Chase Osborn's work as an official, and he knows also of his personal characteristics and dependable qualities. It is not usual, perhaps, for a man to offer himself a candidate for office to become interested in another's candidacy or to strive to open the people, but in this case Congressman McLaughlin's interest in the Republican party make the best choice possible for the head of its state ticket has led him to add his words of commendation and his personal influence in behalf of Mr. Osborn's candidacy.—Cadillac News.

A HOT CAMPAIGN.

Admiration for the energy which Chase Osborn has put into the whole campaign for the Republican nomination for governor of this state ever since he decided that he wanted the nomination is only second to admiration for his real ability as a man and as an executive. He has campaigned through the southern portion of the state as no other candidate for office ever did campaign.

It is a good thing for the upper peninsula to have a man like Chase Osborn going from place to place, getting acquainted with the people, letting them get acquainted with him, making good sound Republican speeches to them and asking their support for his candidacy. It shows the folks of the southern peninsula a fine example of the right kind of material we have up this way when it comes to selecting one of them for public office.

And we know full well that wherever Mr. Osborn speaks he makes a great many friends among those who hear him, for you can't help admiring Chase Osborn if you are a person really near enough to hear him talk. Mr. Osborn is getting thru a pretty good job that will be remembered.—Houghton Gazette.

It appears to be true that the leading Grangers of the state, those most prominent in the direction of the order's affairs, have decided that Chase S. Osborn is just as desirable for the interests of that organization as in other aspects for Michigan's good as the next governor. In Muskegon county Mr. Osborn was known and served long before anything by the members of the State Grange, who presented and promoted the instance his nomination. He is an earnest supporter of Mr. Osborn. He is, of course, not the advocate of any great body of Michigan voters, but the importance and direction of state affairs are identical with general interests. Chase Osborn's candidacy is favored in all sections of the state by those best informed as to the present needs of Michigan.—Cadillac News.

Glamour and Big Dog.

Sultan, Prince Bulldog, favorite bourbonoid, attached to passing railroad train and was run to pieces. His master's grief over the dog's agonies was only that the sou tierfiert trial to lead him away, but the prince would not go. "No I gouge leave him the train." Thus ended the dog's sufferings were over. Humanity lost its type and murmured "But Thyne forefathers showed benevolence in their religion. They believed that God had in the begining granted all the creatures of the dogs that had their faithful comrades here below. I wish I could believe that."

Got Off Easy.

A young man lately left an practical joke recently. He put an advertisement in a paper for a wife and invited such candidates to follow his curte the visitor. It was a foolish thing to do, but one of the conditions was that him out very well by sending his father-in-law interv. "Since I do not intend to carry curte, for, though there is some authority for putting a curt before a curte, I know of none for putting one before an curt."

A Leading Citizen.

"Didn't you tell me Pete Joe was one of the leading citizens of Crimson Gulch?"

"Yes," answered Hickory Bob. "He was. When he left town he led the vigilance committee by a quarter of a mile clean to the next county."—Washington Star.

HUNTING THE WALRUS.

The Eskimo Takes Advantage of the Animal's Curiosity.

In his frail skiloot it is a difficult and dangerous task for the Eskimo to go out to sea forty to sixty miles and intercept the walrus as he passes on his migration into the Arctic.

The circus will fill his boat, for it weighs from 1,000 to 3,000 pounds. He forms the walrus when they are lying asleep on the ice floes in herds from ten to several hundred. Death must be instantaneous, else with a few rolls or the peculiar lumbering, bumping movement inseet of the seal when ashore, he makes the few feet to the water and that is all. If he has not sufficient flubber and air to float. He has much natural curiosity, and if not scared by shots will come up close to your boat or the ice floe on which you are sitting, spurting, snorting and rolling his eyes; with his gleaming tusks and frizzled snout he has an uncanny, goblin, monster-like appearance. A herd of fifty or sixty of them will come up en masse, raise high out of the water to stare at you, then snort, spurt and disappear again, only to come up on the same spot and repeat the maneuver indefinitely. Taking advantage of this the Eskimos bide behind ice hummocks and throw a harpoon into one, then sunk the tough rawhide line around an ice cake. He must perform some up to blow, and he is then lifted with the ride. The thick skin and the mass of blubber and meat beneath render him almost invulnerable.—Pacific Monthly.

MAKE THEM LAUGH.

A Bachelor's Idea of the Way Children Should Be Treated.

"The people who don't have to do things can always do them better than the people who are obliged to do them," said the cynical bachelor. "If you want to know how to invest money, ask a fellow who has never had any to invest. I suppose it's the same with raising children. Nevertheless, I am fond of children, and never having had an opportunity of raising any of my own, I am critical about the way other people, more fortunate than I, raise theirs.

"My brother has a youngster, a boy about six years old, and everything that kid wants he cries for. The minute he begins to cry he gets it, which, according to my reasoning, is all wrong.

"Why not make him tough for it? It's just as easy for a child to laugh as to cry, and it's far more healthful, besides being much more cheerful for the surrounding population.

"I've tried the experiment with him, and it works like a charm. If I happen to have anything he wants, and he cries for it, I make fun of him. Then he ceases to cry for it, and I give it to him. Laugh for it. Laugh for it.

"It took me but about two lessons for him to understand this, and you have no idea what a wonderful difference it has made in the disposition of that kid. Still, I'm only an old bachelor, and I'm not supposed to know anything about such things."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Took an Unfair Advantage.

Mrs. Dorkins—Yesterday I called Mrs. Grandpre's attention to the fact that she had left the gate between our back yards open and that her chickens had come through and scratched up our flower beds, and she looked as if she would give that little my hood off. How foolish it is for people to get angry when you remind them that they have been careless about something they had no business to overlook.

Mr. Dorkins—I am glad to hear you say that, Mirth. You won't mind if I mention that when I came home last night I found that you had left both the back doors unlocked.

Mrs. Dorkins—Why, you're always watching to see if you can't catch me in some little fault, and it makes you perfectly happy when you do.—New York Tribune.

Something to Live For.

Three little girls were playing the mother of one came into the room and engaged the children in conversation. "Marion, when you grow up, I'm going to live with you when you grow up." she asked.

"I am going to be a famous singer," she replied.

"And you, Susie, what are you to be?"

"Oh, I am going to write stories when I grow up," she answered.

"And what is Marjorie to be?" continued the mother.

Marjorie, aged five, thought seriously a moment, and then said, "Well, I am sure, but I think I'll be a widow."—Bullpeater.

A Silk Producing Caterpillar.

In Assam, where the natives call it "eri," a silk producing caterpillar has been used for silk spinning for centuries. Lost, strange to say, its employment for the purpose has been restricted almost exclusively to that region. One of its advantages is that its cocoons are not killed by the heat of commercial silk reels. The silk of these cocoons is dried only with concentric loops of silk. This renders it unnecessary to kill the insect when its silk is used.

Rubbing It In.

"What made the boss glare so at that man who just went out?" said one waiter to another.

"Well, he said his bill for a fifty was 'when he was in Paris,' and there was one dinner he asked 'somebody else' about in the neighborhood, 'somewhere where a fellow could go and get a decent meal for fifty cents.'—New York Press.

STEEL TRUST AS CAT BUYER.

A rat got tangled up in one of the dynamos which supply power for the great steel trust plants south of the United State Steel corporation at Gary, Indiana, Louisville, Courier-Journal. It required several hours to separate the rat's remains from the dynamo and in the meantime the corporation was losing money at the rate of a thousand dollars a minute. Now the steel trust is advertising for cats. Advertisements have been inserted in the Gary newspapers, offering 50 cents apiece, with no limitations as to sex, age, size, pedigree or character. Fifty cents a head is a good price for cats and the officials of the steel trust are likely to have to contend with an embarrassment of offerings. When the news percolates to all the other and small towns of Indiana there will be a rush of tribe adjournments to Gary and the steel trust will find itself with a surplus of cats scarcely less troublesome than the oversupply of rats with which it has been contending heretofore. Hundreds of Indiana families will willingly part with all their feline possessions at a compensation of 50 cents per cat. Some thousands of small boys will explore the alleys and woodsheds until the last backyard fence is denuded.

The report from Pisa that royal engineers state that the inclination of the leaning tower at that place has increased eight inches and that the structure is likely to collapse will tend to further increase the number of those who believe that the tower was never intended to be a freak of masonry, but that it became a wonder by the yielding of its foundation on one side. As a freak of masonry for freaks the famous leaning tower has had value in addition to the historic considerations, and it is doubtful if there would doubtless be a demand for its reconstruction. A modern builder could give Pisa a leaning tower of greater inclination by using an anchored steel skeleton and clothing it with well fastened veneer.

A speaker at a meeting of a medical society in New Jersey declared that some of the greatest surgeons doing had left science, forceps and other instruments in the abdominal cavities of patients operated upon, and that the practise was "inexcusable." This makes cheerful reading for the lay public, especially that portion of it that has hospital experience in prospect; but the statement of the existence of the practise is also puzzling from the fact that it must be a more or less expensive practise to the surgeons themselves to be so careless about losing good instruments.

34 DEAD IN WRECK

EXCURSION AND FREIGHT TRAINS CRASH AT SAUJON FRANCE.

108 PERSONS ARE INJURED

Lives of 1,200 Persons Are Jeopardized by Open Switch—Most of Killed Were School Girls Returning From Vacation.

Paris—An excursion train was wrecked at Saujon Sunday and 34 persons, many of them school girls, were killed and 40 others were injured, several of them fatally.

The accident came without warning and in the solid peale that followed the crash many of the passengers were trampled upon and probably fatally injured. Speeding at 60 miles an hour, the excursion train with 1,200 passengers on board, struck an open switch and before the engineer realized the peril, smashed into a side-tracked freight train.

A relief train, with all the available doctors, was rushed to the scene. The uninjured passengers aided in dragging out the dead and injured. An emergency hospital was established at the side of the track and everything possible was done to aid the victims.

Most of those on board were school girls returning from vacation spent Their frenzied efforts to aid their injured companions only served to increase the excitement and hampered the doctors considerably in the work of rescue.

The engineer and fireman tried to jump as the crash came, but were pinned in the wreckage. The boiler exploded and many were scalded by the boiling water.

An investigation is being made to place responsibility for the wreck. It is claimed that there was a signal for the switch engineer that the switch was open.

So many were the victims that at first only those who had been serious ly hurt received medical attention. As fast as they were attended they were put aboard the relief trains and carried to Bordeaux, where they were placed in hospitals.

BELGIAN EXPOSITION BURNS

100,000 People in Panic—Two Persons Are Killed and Forty Injured, Some Fatally.

Brussels.—One hundred thousand visitors were swept from a panic by a fire that wiped out the exposition grounds. Two persons are known to be dead and 40 injured, some fatally.

The flames started in the French section and had gained considerable headway before they were discovered. The instant the alarm was given, the 100,000 persons at the exposition became panic-stricken and a wild rush was made for the exit.

The people fought and struggled in a madness to get out of the place. Many of those hurt received their injuries by falling to the floor and being trampled upon by the crowd.

The two killed were trapped by the flames and attempts to rescue them were unsuccessful. The crowd got in places of safety, however, before the flames reached them. No estimate of the damage, which was great, has been made.

Brussels.—As a result of the partial destruction of the Belgian exposition by fire Sunday night, the executive committee at a meeting held Monday decided to close the fair until the ruins of the burned sections could be cleared away, when the exposition will again be opened.

It is impossible to estimate the damage caused by the fire that wiped out the fairy-like structures and caused with the exception of marriage, we presume.

FIVE INJURED IN CAR RIOTS

COLUMBUS TRACTION COMPANY SUSPEND ALL TRAFFIC.

Mayor Declares He Will Not Call for Troops—Conductor Fires Into Crowd.

Columbus, O.—Rioting was resumed in the city Sunday night and one man was fatally shot and five others injured. No force was the violence of the crowds that all street car traffic was abandoned during the night.

Mayor Marshall again declared that he would not call for troops. He said police would continue to ride the cars, limiting started at shifter park, where a band concert was being held. A mob gathering in Mohawk avenue blockaded the car tracks and stopped the cars. Jerring mobs gathered about the crews and a fight started. Motorman L. B. Duvall was struck in the head with a brick, and fell unconscious in the street. Conductor W. P. Miller and Motorman L. P. Evans of another car, were also attacked and severely bruised by sticks and rocks.

When two automobile loads of police arrived the crowd numbered about 5,000 people. Three rioters were arrested.

When John J. Gallagher, a conductor, was called "scab" by a crowd near Ralph Clair avenue, he turned to a woman sitting behind him. She handed him a large revolver which she took from a valise at her side. He then fired firing into the crowd. The woman, stall and handsome, stood up and cried "Give it to them, Jack."

Just then an automobile load of police drove up. Gallagher and the woman were placed under arrest. In the woman's valise were found two extra revolvers and ammunition. She said her name was Anna Gallagher, the motorman's wife.

At the police station Gallagher and his wife were released on bond, furnished by the railroad company.

Emmet Hoover was shot through the leg in a restaurant, when the crowd tried to drag off and beat.

TROOPS TO COMBAT FLAMES

Soldiers Are Rushed to National Forests in Northwest to Fight Destructive Fires.

Washington—Forest fires in the northwest, threatening destruction to human life and to millions of dollars' worth of property, have alarmed officials of the interior department and forest service.

In response to appeals from the five-score additional United States soldiers were Saturday rushed to assist in combating the flames.

The soldiers have been dispatched to the Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, Lewis and Clark, Missoula, Flathead, Colville, Wash., national forests; the Flathead Indian reservation, Montana, and the Glacier National park, Montana. The troops have been ordered over the entire Belt and Gica. Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, has informed the interior department and forest service officials that the assistance of the army will be given in meeting the emergency to the limit of the number of soldiers available, if necessary.

Spokane, Wash.—At Wallace, Idaho, hundreds of pounds of dynamite, hauled to the limbs of trees on high peaks surrounding the city and exploded in the hope that the effect might produce rain to check the devastation wrought by forest fires, is said to have had a result, for rain began falling Sunday for the first time in two months. The fall has been heavy.

A dispatch from Stites, Idaho, says the situation in the Elk City district is the worst in the history of that region. Under the black winds in the mountains for the last two days and nights the forest fires are burning with fury. The whole country in the vicinity of Elk City is ablaze. The town is cut off from communication with the outside world and is surrounded by fire.

AMERICAN AVIATOR ESTABLISHES WORLD ALTITUDE MARK AT 6,750 FEET.

FEAT ASTOUNDS EXPERTS

Claimant Lands Safely Near Farmhouse 12 Miles From Lanark, Scotland, After Two Hours' Adventure—Sensation of Scotch Meet.

Lanark, Scotland.—J. Armstrong Drexel, the American millionaire aviator, Thursday night attained the world's altitude record by ascending 6,750 feet, according to the official announcement.

His barograph will be submitted to the experts of the Kew observatory in London, who will determine the accuracy of the measurements.

Drexel's flight was the sensation of the aviation meeting. Ascending at seven o'clock in the evening, he shot up into a bank of clouds and disappeared from the gaze of the anxious crowd. His altaiti landed about two hours later 12 miles from Lanark.

Aeronauts are enthusiastic over Drexel's feat. He made his attempt to break the record because of breaking Hubert A. Broukins' record, but his mounting was made under conditions which he expressed to friends, he would have been his supply of gasoline became exhausted.

Asbury Park, N. J. — Benjamin Pitts, a bachelor, was dashed to death at the close of the program of the Ocean Grove camp meeting, held, when he lost his grip on his aeroplane and was also injured in a fall 5,000 feet into a tree. Ten thousand persons saw him plunge. His body was horribly mangled.

The accident was due to the youth's own carelessness. After swinging off the ground under the huge hot air balloon to which his aeroplane was attached, James Fleming, Pitts forgot to hitch his safety belt to the trapeze bar of the parachute.

He was scheduled to make what is known as a double parachute drop. When the first parachute opened after a fall of 10 feet, the bar of the suspended trapeze slipped through the hoop and was thrown from his seat perch and some hurtling sensational simultaneously with the second parachute, which the doctors said, his agonized endeavor to grasp the bar.

President Lewis is Missed at Opening of Special Convention in Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The fight over the illinois compromise agreement became the special topic of the convention of miners.

Secretary Perry of the miners came out as an opponent of President Lewis and recommended that the convention make the illinois strike the main issue of the international union to be fought until all the demands of the proposed Peoria convention have been accepted by the operators.

PAUPERISM IS INDIAN PERIL

SALES OF LANDS WOULD MEAN RED MEN'S RUIN.

Cecil Lyon Tells Gore Inquiry Committee His Connection With McMurray Contracts.

Sulphur, Okla. — Witnesses testified before the Gore congressional committee last investigating committee that if the Indian lands in Oklahoma were sold and the $20,000,000 proceeds were turned over to the Indians in cash, the state within ten years would be flooded with paupers.

It was asserted that many of the Indians who signed the McMurray contracts, allowing a ten per cent "attorney fee" to J. P. McMurray and his associates, were financially irresponsible. They would soon squander the cash. It was declared, and within a few years the country would be confronted with the problem of how to take care of them.

Except for the appearance on the stand of Cecil Lyon, Republican national committeeman of Texas, the witnesses were all Indians. Mr. Lyon told of his financial interest in the old tribal McMurray contracts, which provided for a ten per cent fee, but which disapproved by President Roosevelt in 1904.

Asked if he had been invited by McMurray to join in the deal because of his political influence and his access to Secretary Ballinger, Mr. Lyon said he supposed he was, but he was strictly without the invitation to his business ability.

Many Chickasaws testified they were entitled to allotments of only half as 25 per cent. attorney's fees if he would sell the land within a year.

REJECT ROOSEVELT

REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE VOTE AGAINST HIM FOR CONVENTION CHAIRMAN.

JAMES S. SHERMAN CHOSEN

Snub Administered by "Old Guard" on Alleged Ground Former President Tried to Dictate Party's Fortunes.

New York.—Theodore Roosevelt suffered a sharp defeat Tuesday when the Republican state committee, by a vote of 29 to 15, refused a resolution naming him as temporary chairman of the state convention to be held at Saratoga September 27.

Vice-President Sherman was chosen unanimously to act as temporary presiding officer.

Let by State Chairman Woodruff and William Barnes, Jr., of Albany, the "Old Guard" encompassed the defeat of Colonel Roosevelt. The leaders of the state leaders charged with attempting to dictate the fortunes of the party in the state.

After the meeting had been called to order and the time and place of the state convention had been decided, William Barnes, Jr., offered a resolution presenting the name of Vice-President Sherman for temporary chairman of the convention. Lloyd C. Griscom rose to second the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt and moved also that the vote be postponed.

The motion to postpone was defeated by a vote of 12 to 25. The resolution to make Colonel Roosevelt temporary chairman then was put to a vote, and Sherman, whom Vice-President Sherman was unanimously chosen for temporary presiding officer. Mr. Griscom and Henry Stoch of New York not voting.

STEEL TRUST AS CAT BUYER.

A rat got tangled up in one of the dynamos which supply power for the great blast furnaces mill of the United States Steel corporation at Gary, Indiana, Louisville Courier-Journal. It required several hours to acquaint the rat's remains from the dynamo and in the meantime the corporation was losing money at the rate of a thousand dollars a minute. Now the steel trust is advertising for cats. Advertisements have been inserted in the Gary newspapers, offering 50 cents apiece, with no limitations as to age, sex, size, pedigree or character. Fifty cents a limit is a good price for cats and the officials of the steel trust are likely to have to contend with an embarrassment of offerings. When the news percolates to all the cities and small towns of Indiana there will be a rush of felina shipments to Gary and the steel trust will find itself with a surplus at cats scarcely less troublesome than the overplus of rats with which it has been contending heretofore. Hundreds of Indiana families will willingly part with all their feline possessions at a compensation of 50 cents per cat. From thousands of small toys will replace the alleys and woodsheds until the last backyard fence is denuded.

The report from Pittsburg that royal engineers state that the inclination of the leaning tower of that city has increased eight inches and that the structure is likely to collapse will tend to further frighten the people of those who believe that the tower was never intended to be a fresh air resorty, but that it became a wonder by the yielding of its foundation on one side. As a "drawing card" for tourists the famous leaning tower has had value in addition to the historic considerations, and if it should fall there would doubtless be a demand for its preservation. A modern builder could give Pisa a leaning tower of greater inclination by using an enclosed wire elevator and clothing it with well fastened veneer.

34 DEAD IN WRECK

EXCURSION AND FREIGHT TRAINS CRASH AT SAUJON FRANGE.

108 PERSONS ARE INJURED

Lives of 1,200 Persons Are Jeopardized by Open Switch—Most of Killed Were School Girls Returning From Vocation.

Paris—An excursion train was wrecked at Saujon Sunday and 34 persons, many of them school girls, were killed and 108 others were injured, several of them fatally.

The accident occurred without warning and in the wild panic that followed the crash many of the passengers were trampled upon and probably fatally injured. Speeding at 60 miles an hour, the excursion train with 1,200 passengers on board, struck an open switch and before the engineer realized the peril, smashed into a side-tracked freight train.

A relief train, with all the available doctors, was rushed to the scene. The unhinged passengers aided in dragging out the dead and injured. An emergency hospital was established at the side of the track and everything possible was done to aid the victims.

Most of those on board were school girls returning from their vacations. Their frenzied efforts to aid their injured companions only served to increase the excitement and hampered the doctors considerably in the work of rescue.

The engineer and fireman tried to jump as the crash came, but were pinned in the wreckage. The boiler exploded and many were scalded by the boiling water.

An investigation is being made to place responsibility for the wreck. It is believed that there was no order to warn the engineer that the switch was open.

So many were the victims that at first only those who had been serious ly hurt received medical aid, but as fast as they were attended they were put aboard the relief train and rushed to Bordeaux, where they were placed in hospitals.

BELGIAN EXPOSITION BURNS

100,000 People in Panic—Two Persons Are Killed and Forty Injured, Some Fatally.

Brussels—One hundred thousand visitors were thrown into panic by a fire that wiped out the entire Belgian exposition. Two persons are known to be dead and 40 injured, some fatally.

The flames started in the French section and had gained considerable headway before they were discovered. The instant the alarm was given, the 100,000 persons at the exposition became panic-stricken and a wild rush was made for the exits.

The people fought and struggled in a maddened attempt to get out of the place. Many of those hurt received their injuries by falling to the floor and being trampled upon by the others.

The two killed were trapped by the flames and attempts to rescue them were unsuccessful. The crowd got to places of safety, however, before the flames reached them. No estimate of the damage, which was great, has been made.

Brussels—As a result of the partial destruction of the Belgian exposition by the Sunday night, the executive committee at a meeting held Monday decided to close the fair until the ruins of the burned sections could be cleared away, when the exposition will again be opened.

It is impossible to estimate the damage caused by the fire that wiped out the fairy-like structures and caused two deaths and thirty injuries.

The losses, however, will not be as great as was at first believed, which during the excitement of the conflagration they were estimated roughly at $100,000,000.

The entire Belgian and British sections; the whole Kermesse, of Brussels, the Coney Island of the exposition, with water chutes, toboggan slides and other special entertainments, and everything west of the Avenue des Nations, were destroyed, but by heroic work of the firemen and troops and the use of dynamite in blowing up buildings in the path of the flames, the fire was checked.

Practically everything in the American, Danish, Russian, Norwegian, Australian, Japanese, Turkish and Swiss sections was saved. Only the facades and about one-third of the entire French section were burned. The British loss is heavy.

Portunately the most valuable art treasures, which had been loaned to the exposition or acquired by it, were removed beyond the reach the flames and the pillaging criminals who attempted to take advantage of the disaster.

FIVE INJURED IN CAR RIOTS

COLUMBUS TRACTION COMPANY SUSPENDS ALL TRAFFIC.

Mayor Declares He Will Not Call for Troops—Conductor Fires Into Crowd.

Columbus, O.—Rioting was resumed in the city Sunday night when one man was fatally shot and five others injured. No force was the violence of the crowds that all street car traffic was abandoned during the night.

Mayor Marshall again declared that he would not call for troops, and police would continue to ride the cars. Rioting started at Shiller park, where a band concert was being held. A mob gathering in Mohawk avenue blockaded the car tracks and stopped the cars. Jeering mobs gathered about the crews and a fight started. Motorman L. S. Duvall was struck in the head with a brick, and fell unconscious in the street. Conductor W. P. Miller and Motorman L. P. Evans of another car, were also attacked and severely bruised by sticks and rocks.

When two automobile loads of police arrived the crowd numbered about 500 people. Three rioters were arrested.

When John J. Gallagher, a conductor, was called "scab" by a crowd near Saint Clair avenue, he turned to a woman sitting behind him. She handed him a Sams revolver which the tool drew from a valise at her side. He then began firing into the crowd. The woman, still and handsome, stood up and said "Give it to them, Jack."

Just then an automobile load of police arrived on the scene. Gallagher and the woman were placed under arrest. In the woman's valise were found two revolvers and ammunition. She said her name was Anna Gallagher, the motorman's wife.

At the police station Gallagher and his wife were released on bond, furnished by the railroad company.

Ernest Hoover was shot through the leg in a Sunday riot when the crowd tried to drag off and beat.

LEG A MASS OF HUMOR

"About seven years ago a small abrasion appeared on my right leg just above my ankle. It irritated me so that I began to scratch it, and it began to spread until my leg from my ankle to the knee was one solid scale like a scab. The irritation was always worse at night and would not allow me to sleep, or my wife either, and it was completely undermining our health. I lost fifty pounds in weight and was almost out of my mind with worry and despair as no matter where the irritation came, at work, on the street or in the presence of company, I would have to scratch it until I had the blood running down into my shoes. I simply cannot describe my suffering during those seven years. The pain, mortification, loss of sleep, both to myself and wife is simply incalculable, no power and one has to experience it to know what it is.

"I tried all kinds of doctors and remedies but I might as well have thrown my money down a sewer. They would dry up for a little while and fill me with hope only to break out again just as bad if not worse. I had given up hope of ever being cured when I was induced by my wife to give the Cuticura remedies a trial. After taking the Cuticura Remedies for a little while I began to see a change, and after taking a dozen bottles of Cuticura Resolvent in conjunction with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, the trouble had entirely disappeared and my leg was as fine as the day I was born. Now after a lapse of six months with no sign of a recurrence I feel perfectly safe in extending to you my heartfelt thanks for the good the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. I shall always recommend them to my friends. W. H. White, 312 E. Cabot St., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4 and Apr. 15, 1904."

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME XLII. Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday September 1, 1910. NUMBER 20

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR

SPIDER'S "EAR FOR MUSIC"

According to French Scientists Insect Really Has No Conception of Harmony.

It is true, perhaps, that some of the overzealous enthusiasts have succeeded that sisters have "an ear for music," but there is little or no evidence to bear out their contention. It is merely a pleasant supposition to give their study entertainment.

Professor Lecaillon, a distinguished French scientist who has given years of study and observation to the effects and so-called "ear for music" of the spider, contends that the apparent sensitiveness of this insect to musical sounds has been wholly misunderstood. He takes note of the fact that brother scientists think that some species of the spider appear to respond in strange manner to the notes of certain musical instruments such as the piano, harp, flute, and violin, suggesting that they have some kind of instinctive recognition of the sounds or the vibrations on which they are based.

Professor Lecaillon says that when musical sounds are made close to the spider's den he is not cognizant of anything like harmony. He thinks the vibrations are merely carried along the delicate strands of his web to his parlor, apprizing him instinctively of some sort of a disturbance at his front door. His spidership thereupon goes out to see what the row is about.

Drawing from the Senses.

Some pictures in the latest development in the training of the young idea how to draw, such it is certainly a great aid to accurate visualization. Taste picturing is perhaps the most peculiar, however. It involves sweet meats or fruit. Smell picturing sometimes leads to curious results, as when a bunch of violets was held to the nose of a child and touched it. His sense of touch was stronger than his sense of smell, and he immediately drew a bird, taking the flowers for feathers. Sound picturing is also very deceptive, and it is astonishing how many people (it may be practiced by grown-ups as well as youngsters) will mistake a plane for a saw. Touch picturing is especially difficult, and here the child who has had a little training in this kind of drawing will often beat the finished draftsman who is new to it.

One of the Oldest of Books.

"The Teaching of Pupo Xystus," the little book of aphorisms which was popular in the early church, has now been translated into English for the first time by the distinguished scholar, Prof. F. C. Conybeare.

The interesting feature of this old book, which was known in 229 A. D., is the modern spirit of the man who first compiled it. He seems to have been, according to the Spectator, "a man of wide experience, as devout as he is humorous, as many sided as he is single minded, almost a Quaker in his attitude on nonresistance and his repulsion to the furious force of things, almost a Socialist in his view of property, a man without much natural reverence for those in high places and with perhaps an overweening respect for scholarship."

"Blue Blood."

Don't boast of your inherent "blue bloodedness," nor of the "blue blood" of your ancestry. Science makes a lobster of you if you do, and in this way: No vertebrate ever has been found by Professor Robert to possess "blue blood." He says it is a fiction as applied to man, but that lobsters and crabs' blood show the bluish tint in marked degree. Don't be a lobster—use some other boasting phrase that will stand analytical research.

Action of Thunderbolt.

An extraordinary phenomenon was seen in New Zealand recently when what is supposed to have been a thunderbolt struck and shattered the Grand hotel flagstaff at Rotorua. The noble at the hotel describes the thunderbolt, which resembled a ball of fire, as falling into the yard like a meteor to within a foot of the ground, five feet away from where she stood. It gave a great flash, the flame blinding her for a moment, then rose, soaring like a balloon over the roof of the hotel. It struck the flagstaff and exploded with a loud noise.

Traverse City Eagle: The following is a clipping from one of the Minnesota newspaper received by H. D. Agnew, which has an account of the death and life work of his uncle, Rev. Joseph Waukazoo, who for many years lived at Northport and was well known in vicinity and in the state of Michigan: Rev. Joseph Waukazoo, pastor of the Indian mission on the Bend of the River, of the White Earth reservation, for over twenty years, died this week of paralysis while on his way home from Red Lake. Rev. Waukazoo was one of the best known Indian missionaries in northern Minnesota. He was ordained a deacon of the Episcopal church of the diocese of Duluth in 1887 by Bishop Gilbert, and since that time has been intimately connected with the work of the church. During the Civil war Rev. Waukazoo joined the Union forces by enlisting with a Michigan regiment. He served throughout the war as a sharpshooter, and received an honorable discharge from the government. He was born in New York, and was a descendant of the Ottawa tribe of the Ojibwa nation. At the time of his death he was between seventy-five and eighty years of age.

ACCIDENT THAT MEANT RUIN

Simple Overturning of an Inkpot Resulted in the Bankruptcy of Great Firm.

The mere motion of a hand ruined Cobbett & Co., one of the largest and wealthiest of English contracting firms. They and an American firm had tendered bids for the building of the great Kasira bridge for the Russian government.

Jacob Cobbett, who was the brain and center of the business, spent six months in designing and contriving and had all his plans ready. The bid was accepted and materials was bought in enormous quantities. A time limit had been set for both commencement and finish, and Cobbett was perfecting his plans and making sure of the smallest details, with all the formidable expense on the table before him, when he stretched out his hand, overturned an inkpot and drowned the most important of the papers in a black sea.

Cobbett had a poor memory. In a fever of anxiety he tried to reconstruct his plans from stray notes. It was impossible, and he called on the Russian government for more time. Time was refused and Russia repudiated the contract on the ground of delay, as the agreement allowed. Cobbett could not get his work through in time, and the Yankee firm, which now advanced a cheaper tender, with out and dried plans, got the job. The loss drove Cobbett & Co. to bankruptcy, and the great Kasira bridge in Russia is American built.

The Violin Maker.

He chisels top and bottom of the violin's body from solid blocks of spruce and maple, coaxing the subtle and delicate conformations through a month of patient labor, putting soul and yearning into the wood, as perhaps no other hand-craftsman may, in his search for expression true. He is building a slender and sensitive box with a wonderful power to emit vibrations marshaled into order, and delivered as a voice. No visible beauty of carven form and no original departure from set design avail him in reaching his goal. He seeks intangible essence of sound and means for its artful bestowal. For him there is no established law for alluring the tone to some dimple in the wood, to delight it to rapturous perfection. He pursues an ignis fatuus of quivering air-waves that leads onward endlessly. He may only strive toward achievement of his object as strove his forebears of the craft, and frequently with far less reward.—Harper's Magazine.

Man's Feathered Friends.

Men of science are generally agreed that birds are nature's great check on the excess of insects and that they maintain the balance between plant and insect life. Ten thousand entomologists, it has been estimated, could not destroy every blade of grass on an acre of cultivated land. The insect population of a single cherry tree infested with aphides has been estimated by a prominent entomologist at more than 12,000,000. The bird population of cultivated country districts has been estimated at from 200 to 1,000 a square mile. This is small compared with the number of insects, yet as each bird consumes hundreds of insects every day, the latter are prevented from becoming the scourge they would be but for their feathered enemies.

Dogs of Other Times.

Swiss naturalists have recently presented to the Helvetian society of natural sciences the results of careful studies of the remains of dogs found among the ancient lake dwellings of Switzerland, the earliest of which date from the age of stone.

It has been found that three different races of dogs existed there at that time, one of which resembled the Siberian sledge dog of today. Later, when the age of bronze dawned upon the Alps, two new species appeared, one being a shepherd dog and the other a hunting dog.

All of these dogs were of northern origin, the centre types of the Mediterranean lands not having crossed the Alps.

Traverse City Eagle: State Game Wardens Eddy and Smith have been having a busy time of it watching the whitefish and trout that are being caught and shipped out undersize. They have apprehended many of the illegal fishermen, and several have been brought to justice during the past year. The last one to feel the weight of the law was Jake Amo and his partner, a man by the name of Slandvguist, of South Fox Island, who have been arrested after their packages of whitefish had been opened and found to contain whitefish too small to ship. The conviction was made on July 10, but warrants were not issued for the men until a week ago, when both game wardens made the trip to the South Fox. The accused men will be in the city today, and will be tried before Judge Arnold F. Mettinger in recorder's court tonight.

Northern Michigan

The burglar epidemic has struck Boyne City, also, it seems, and at noon Thursday, W. H. White of that city called W. Z. Sears over the long distance phone to give him the description of some jewelry that had been stolen Wednesday night when prowlers raided the White home.

W. H. Cole of Cross Village, Emmet county, western Michigan, reports a net income of $1,200 for so much of the present year as has passed. Eighty acres of hay land made a return of 120 tons and a 30 acre piece of ground has already given him 45 tons of hay, 600 bushels of oats and 100 bushels of seed peas.

John I. Gibson, the secretary of the Western Michigan Development Bureau, will be one of the speakers at the fall meeting of the Northern Michigan Press Club at Elk Rapids, September 22 and 24. He will give an address entitled "Western Michigan Editors and what they are Doing toward the Development of the Region."

Traverse City Eagle: Rev. Willard Heath a superannuated minister of this city and founder of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal church, died at his home, 815 West Front street, this morning, after a life in this city extending over nearly a half century. He was the first pastor of the Asbury church, in which capacity he served for many years.

With fair prospects for a good crop, Wexford county farmers are jubilant over the fact that potato buyers are endeavoring to contract for unlimited quantities of potatoes at 60 cents the bushel. Potatoes are the staple crop of farmers in northwestern Michigan and the price offered is higher than for several years. A number of farmers have contracted their entire yield at 60 cents.

Traverse City Eagle: Falling from the back of his horse as he was trying to swim the animal in East bay just off the dock at Acme, John Oram was thrown into the water and was drowned, the body never coming to the surface. Mr. Oram had ridden the horse into the bay to wash the animal off, and at the same time see if it could swim. The horse walked out to a depth much over its head, and neither horse nor man could swim both going down.

While one of the Indian families was returning home from a visit to the government paymaster at Harbor Springs a papoose was lost out from the wagon. The baby was found, crying by the roadside, by a young couple out walking, who surprised people by appearing with a full grown baby in their possession. About 5 o'clock the next morning people were aroused by a team of Indian ponies tearing into town with a frantic buck and squaw talking Indian at a great rate and inquiring for the papoose.

Petoskey Record: Last Wednesday night the home of C. J. Hallbergh on Kalamazoo avenue was entered by a burglar and a gold watch and chain and several dollars in silver coin was the toll the Judge had to pay for this visit. Entrance was gained through the kitchen door, which had been left unlocked, and the burglar faced his year of operations in the Judge's bedchamber. He took Mr. Pallbergh's clothes from the foot board of his bed and going to the dining room rifled the pockets, getting for his reward the Judge's gold watch and chain and Masonic charm and about three dollars in small silver money. The officers can find no clue on which to work.

Northern Michigan in the matter of crop production has just been given a recommendation from the state department that is worth more than many whole pages of high priced advertising. The report as to crop conditions for July throughout the state shows the northern counties, not including the upper peninsula, to be ahead in every important respect. The present condition of corn is 94 in the northern counties as compared with 77 in the southern counties and 75 in the upper peninsula. The prospect for beans is given as 91 in the northern counties, 81 in the southern counties and 70 in the upper peninsula. Sugar beets show the same superiority for this section of the state, 90 in the northern counties as compared with 84 in the southern and and 75 in the upper peninsula. Every other product that is grown at all in this section of the state shows as good condition as the same product elsewhere and most of them are reported as in better condition here than any other portion of Michigan. Inasmuch as the general status of the crops in the northern counties south of the Straits of Mackinac includes the products of a very large portion of former pine lands the better results as compared with any other section of Michigan dispears all doubt and question as to the crop producing qualities of such lands.—Cadillac News.

The newspapers of northern and western Michigan, which during recent months, have been telling of the rapid improvements of this section of the state and of the great increase in land values, can now point to an official state report confirming in full their somewhat glowing statements. During the last six months 60,360 acres of state land located in northern counties were sold for more than double the price paid two years ago for lands located in the very same counties and sections. Deputy Land Commissioner Carlon says that this remarkable increase is due to the increased worth of the land as demonstrated by actual results. Land that now bring $10 an acre at a state sale could not have sold a few years ago at 50c an acre. The value of these lands is known now, but it was not know five years ago.—Cadillac News.

—Chas. Graves, Nick Shows and F. J. Meech returned Saturday from Fox River, upper peninsula, where they went after trout. They made a great catch, and they expressed 130 splendid specimens home, but, for some unaccountable reason, they were seen around by way of Detroit, and when they arrived here they were wordless. The one member of the party who is truthful about such matters asserts that one of the trout weighed three and one half pounds.

Mr. Murr is looking for some one to do some work in his surroundings that he has made so much pleased with Charlevoix and his surroundings that he has made an offer to either purchase or build a summer home here and with that in view has opened negotiations for the purchase of Mrs. Lehmann's cottage and grounds (The old Nettleton Place) just west of Chicago Club House. Mr. Murr selected this as the most beautiful sight now available on Round Lake with a frontage of 300 feet and his intentions are to erect six or more cottages along the lake front which would very much improve the appearance of the north shore of Round Lake.

Our Duty at the Primaries

The republican primary election occurs next Tuesday. There is yet time to carefully and candidly reflect on the importance of right action on that day. The good citizen defines efficiency and integrity in public office, and when he votes his conscience he cannot go astray. The public interest is your interest.

A candid and careful consideration of the sensational question should convince thoughtful republicans that, by reason of his distinguished services to the state and nation, and the strong position which he holds in the senate, Senator Burrows deserves a re-election. He is a commanding figure in the councils of the government, and his record requires no explanation or apology. Michigan can poorly afford to lose him.

Reports from all sections of the state indicate unmistakably that Chase S. Osborn will carry the primaries by a large majority. No candidate for governor has ever received such universal response in every county that Mr. Osborn has. The malicious attack made upon his personal record by an Detroiaia paper has already begun to react upon his political enemies. The editor of the paper was on Saturday arrested for criminal libel, and a more or less prominent candidate for governor, who has circulated the slander, will also be made to answer. There is not a stain upon the raiment of Chase S. Osborn, and those who know him best, in other peninsulas, will resent the slander next Tuesday or thereafter. Mr. Osborn will be nominated and elected, despite the dirty work of his opponents.

The indications are that Mr. Scott, of Alpena, is the favorite candidate in Charlevoix county for state senator. He is an able, clean man, who will represent the district with credit.

Mr. Tanner, who has served as representative one term, is entitled to another. He has no opposition.

To the Voters of Charlevoix County. Contributed

William J. Weikel, of Charlevoix, in my opinion should be the republican nominee for the office of sheriff at this county. He has worked for me as under-sheriff during my term of office and will continue in that capacity until my term expires. I am intimately acquainted with him and as an officer he is honest, trustworthy, capable and willing. He has been deputy and undersheriff under three different sheriffs and has learned the business, and during this time has received only favorable comments. The office is an important one and requires experience, good judgment, tact and courage, Mr. Weikel possesses all of these qualifications. If any man is entitled to the office of sheriff of this county that man is William J. Weikel.

FRANK McWAIN, Sheriff.

—Mike Greer, engineer of the game warden steamer Chase S. Osborn, was brought home from Mackinac City, Monday, with badly scalded face and hands as the result of a bursted steam pipe. As the boat was approaching Mackinaw City the engineer heard the escaping steam, but supposed it to be from the escape valve. As they neared the dock the Captain rang the bells to back, but the engine did not respond, owing to the increasing loss of steam. The boat struck the dock heavily, shifting the holter four bolbs and flooding the engine room with steam. The boat is laid up at Mackinaw City for repairs.

Osborn Stands For Progression and "Progressive" Stands for Osborn

Progression, a magazine published at Sault Ste. Marie, has this to say about Chase S. Osborn. Mr. Osborn lives at the Soo.

Inasmuch as the Hon. Chase S. Osborn is a strikingly progressive proposition, it is a consistently progressive proposition for the new progressive magazine, PROGRESSION, to endorse and endeavor to promote the gubernatorial candidacy of the leading citizen of the Soo and Chippewa county and the prospective leading citizen of Michigan.

We will mention a few reasons why, according to our sagacity, Osborn should be chosen as the next governor of this big and important state.

Firstly—He, to a greater degree than any other man in the race, or mentioned for the race, is partisanularly qualified to snugly fill shoes of the governor size.

Secondly—Michigan, governmentally, is deep down in a rut of political error and the wise and gifted Osborn has the superior strength and steam to pull the Wolverine chariot further out of that rut than any of his opponents. In other words, we think Osborn has the hard-headed business ability and executive force to rescue Michigan from the efforts of inefficient and questionable management and put the state enterprise on a paying basis. That word "Osborn" is something of a synonym for another word, "success." Success seems to be quite chronic with Osborn.

Thirdly—Osborn has the brains to know home and brilliancy to advertise Michigan and she has not been advertised since the days of the rebellion and Blair, the famous war governor. With Osborn as governor, Michigan would be very conspicuously on the map. With Osborn as governor, the Michigan star in solid glory would glow with greater glare. Osborn is a man to make a nation lift her eyebrows and observe.

Fourthly—Osborn is a big hearted and generous man. He likes to make people happy and he has been actively engaged in that line of business on a large scale for a long while. A big and good and proud and kind man is the kind of a man for governor, and looking at the political proposition from this standpoint, Osborn is the goods.

Fifthly—It is wise political strategy for the republican party to nominate Osborn at this strikingly critical time. Nominate Osborn and he will put the same powerful ability and strenuousity into his campaign against a democrat, that has made him feared and famous in the primary arena. We think it is not untimely to warn the republicans that the political pendulum is swinging democratically these days, that a democratic candidate for governor was a "near governor" about two years ago, and that it is up to the heavy-headed party leaders to see to their very strongest head-of-the-ticket card for the November game. Osborn ability, Osborn high pressure, Osborn business acumen, Osborn popularity, Osborn integrity, Osborn prestige, Osborn magnetism, Osborn initiative, Osborn frankness, Osborn bravery and "Osborn and a new deal" are the safe, sane and winning combination.

Stably—While Osborn has been paper interests in the lower peninsula, he has never been a stand-pat, "let-well-alone" kind of a man. He is a man who is for the people, and the people know it. He is a man who is for progress, and the people know it. He is a man who is for the people's interests against the interests of the few, and the people know it. He is a man who is for the people's interests against the interests of the many, and the people know it. He is a man who is for the people's interests against the interests of the few and the many, and the people know it. He is a man who is for the people's interests against the interests of the few and the many, and the people know it. He is a man who is for the people's interests against the interests of the few and

FOREST FIRES CLAIM MANY VICTIMS—LOSE LIFE RIDING DEADLY FOE.

SETTLERS FLEE FOR SAFETY

More Than 50 Persons Are Known to Be Dead—100 Missing, 200 Injured—Loss Already Reaches $25,000,000.

Spokane, Wash.—One hundred fire fighters are reported dead in the Bodaciel canyon near Wallace, Idaho, and five citizens were burned to death in their homes as a result of forest fires which for sixty days have terrified the Coeur d'Alene country and which spread to the town of Wallace, the metropolis of the mining district.

More than a third of Wallace is burned. The Pacific, Michigan and Coeur d'Alene hotels, two O. R. & N. depots, a big hardware warehouse and 150 to 200 residences are destroyed. The town is almost dark by day and the heavens and surrounding country a sombre mass by night.

Action on the air and the heat is tremendous. Telegraphic communication is cut off for a time, but the fighters believe they have the fire in the city under control.

Newport, Wash., a town of 2,050, is burning, but the loss of life is yet unknown. Cries for help are being answered as rapidly as relief parties can be made up. All the available soldiers in this part of the country are pressed into service.

Spokane, Wash.—In the Coeur d'Alene district of Idaho more than fifty persons are known to be dead, and nearly 100 are missing as a result of the forest fires.

The seriously injured, mostly fire fighters, will number, according to a statement made Monday by W. H. Wetzle, forest superintendent of the Coeur d'Alene, more than 200. Many of them have been stricken blind and others have broken limbs.

The families of homesteaders, comprising 15 persons, are believed to have perished in La Tour creek near Cataldo, Idaho, in the forest fires.

At many points hundreds are hemmed in by a narrowing wall of flames and it is impossible to reach them with help.

From Wallace came reports that the city of Burke is in flames and certain of destruction. The fire rangers in that territory are so exhausted that no effective battle against the flames can be made. The 200 residents of the town are in flight toward Wallace.

Forest Ranger Pulaski reports to Superintendent Weitz that six of his men are dead, five having been smothered in the War Eagle tunnel, where the entire crew took refuge.

Ranger Bell reports 12 dead, three permanently blinded and 11 suffering from broken legs.

In the little town Sand Point, Idaho, Forest Ranger Van Dyke and a crew of 45 enlisted in Spokane are reported surrounded by flames.

A woman and her daughter perished at Caldwell, Idaho.

Four persons are known to have died near Newport, Wash., in an attempt to reach the river.

All along the Great Northern and Northern Pacific tracks between Spokane and Helena numerous fires are known to be raging fiercely, but definite reports cannot be secured, as telegraph and telephone wires are all down.

Before communication with Libby, Mont., ended it was reported that every man and boy of the town was working, with 100 pair fire fighters, to divert Flower creek to the north side of the village as a protection against the flames driving up from that direction.

Helena, Mont.—Reports received here from every fire district in Montana indicate that the situation is by long odds the worst in the history of the state. Despite the large number of troops, civilians and railroad employes that have been put into the field, the flames are absolute masters of the situation, and there is only one salvation—general rain, but for which there is no prospect.

Washington.—Already the forest fires raging in the Missoula, Mont., and northern Idaho districts have consumed timber and property valued at more than $25,000,000. This, according to an official of the forest bureau Monday, is a conservative estimate. These days mind at the present rate will more than equal the total loss in the Hinckley fire in 1894. The loss there was estimated at $20,000,000.

Illinois Post Office Robbed.

Philadelphia.—The post office at Philadelphia was robbed, according to a telegram received at the office of James E. Stuart, post office inspector. John Black, the postmaster, in his message, did not state the amount of the loss.

SHIP IS HELD UP ON OCEAN

CAPTAIN OF LINER BUCKMAN SHOT TO DEATH.

Two Armed Passengers Attempt to Take Possession of Vessel—One Jumps Overboard When Arrested.

Eureka, Cal.—The Alaska Pacific Steamship company's liner Buckman was held up at sea off this port by two passengers.

Captain Wood was shot and killed by one of the men in resisting. The second man was overpowered by the engine-room crew. The passenger who shot the captain jumped overboard with a life preserver.

The Buckman was bound from Seattle to San Francisco. Early in the morning Fred Thomas, passenger, went to the captain's cabin, while an accomplice descended to the engine room. Both men were armed and they attempted to take possession of the vessel. Captain Wood refused to comply with Thomas' demands and was shot down. Thomas ran out of the room and, seeing his plans had miscarried, strapped on a life preserver and leaped into the sea.

Meanwhile the accomplice had encountered resistance in the engine room. He was overpowered and carried in irons. The Buckman is proceeding to San Francisco in charge of First Officer Hansson. The attempt to rob the Buckman was reported to the steamer President, north-bound.

WILL NOT SUPPORT CANNON

Congressman Longworth, After Conference with Taft and Others, Makes Significant Statement.

Beverly, Mass.—The fight of the republican party reorganization against Speaker Cannon was opened by Congressman Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, son-in-law of ex-President Roosevelt.

In a statement which he issued Thursday Mr. Longworth declares that having voted for him in caucus on four different occasions he has approved of his action for the speakership for the last time and that when the proper time comes, namely the meeting of the Republican caucus at the beginning of the next congress he will oppose Uncle Joe to that position.

Mr. Longworth makes it clear that in his view harmony in the Republican ranks and party success depends upon Cannon's elimination.

"I am absolutely convinced," he says, "that Cannon cannot be again elected speaker."

The importance of the Longworth statement lies not only in the fact that the Ohio congressman, a long time friend and supporter of Cannon issued it, but that it was not given to the public until after a series of conferences with President Taft and other leaders that have called here and that the president was acquainted with the contents of the statement in advance of its publication, and that Vice-President Sherman likewise was informed Wednesday of the contemplated move and gave it his tacit approval.

Danville, Ill.—"I have no quarrel with Longworth as to who shall be speaker of the next house, and there is no room for disagreement touching this matter between Representative Longworth and myself," said Speaker Cannon Thursday after reading a statement by Representative Longworth.

"If any Republican candidate for congress feels that his position on the tariff question makes it necessary to stand by pledging that he will not support me in a Republican caucus I have no objection to his making the pledge."

CROSS ASHORE: 18 DEAD

British Warship Bedford Goes on Rocks of the Korean Coast—Probably Total Loss.

London.—Eighteen lives were lost when the British cruiser Bedford ran ashore on the rocks of Quelpart island, Korea, according to a report received here Monday by the Admiralty. The men were members of the engine room force.

The accident occurred during full speed in the fog. The vessel and the crew are evidently badly damaged, since the cable sets stated officially to have been due to "the break of water." The wreck is about two miles to the west of Nautilus island, which is off the southwestern point of Quelpart island. Many sunken rocks are charted in this vicinity, and navigation in the passage between Nutlow island and Quelpart island, is neither is not recommended for this reason."

The vessel lies in such a desperate position that there is practically no possibility of saving her. The hull is full of water up to the engine room boilerend, the water pouring in through gaping holes punched by the sharp rocks, and the officers and crew have been taken off. The sister warships, the Minotaur and Monmouth of the British squadron, which neighored near by, have been ordered to remain at the work to render assistance, were obliged to put to sea owing to the heavy weather which prevails

U. C. STORM BREAKS

THREE FORMER OFFICIALS OF WAR HAVE TO ANSWER TO CUSTODY.

MORE ARRESTS WILL FOLLOW

Charges of Conspiracy to Defraud and of Confidence Game Placed Against Stewart, Ewing and Taylor in Car Repair Frauds.

Chicago.—The Illinois Central railway scandal storm broke Friday with tempestuous fury when three former high officials of that road were arrested on charges of conspiracy to cheat and defraud the road by false entries. More arrests are to follow and the names of others said to be implicated will probably be revealed at the trial of the men already under arrest.

BRONZE IMAGE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON DEDICATED.

Virginia's Gift to French Republic Is Placed in Napoleon Hall at Versailles.

Versailles, France.—With appropriate ceremonies the bronze replica of Houdon's celebrated statue of George Washington was placed in Napoleon hall of the Chateau of Versailles in the presence of the French minister of war, General Brun; the French ambassador to the United States, M. Jusserand, and his wife, and the American ambassador, Robert Bacon, and Mrs. Bacon; the marquis de Lafayette, the members of the French mission which presented to America the statue of Rochambeau, now at Washington, and former United Senator Nathan B. General Brun, who presided, spoke of the statue as the greatest work of the greatest French sculptor of the eighteenth century. Col. James Mann, chairman of the Virginia commission, delivered the speech of presentation. State Senators Don P. Halsey and F. W. King of Virginia also made addresses on behalf of the state of Virginia.

Ambassador Jusserand, in the absence of the French minister for foreign affairs, M. Pichon, accepted the statue on behalf of the French government. He declared that the friendship of General Washington and of the American people constituted one of the glories of France. It was, therefore, eminently appropriate that this statue, "the third erected on French soil by our ancient allies, should be placed in the palace consecrated to all our glories."

Mr. Sibley was released on his own recognizance to appear before Justice of the Peace Perry M. Larren, Thursday, August 28.

ATHLETICS STOP NARCOTICS USE

CAN DEVELOP HEALTHIER BODIES AND STRONGER MINDS.

MUCH MONEY IS SPENT

Prof. C. S. Berry of the U. of M. in a Lecture Before the Ann Arbor School of Religion Came Out Broadly for Athletics.

Lansing.—Prof. C. S. Berry of the U. of M., in a lecture before the Ann Arbor School of Religion, came out broadly for athletics.

"The problem of modern education is not merely the development of the mind regarded as an independent entity, but rather education of the mind and body together," said he. "Toward this end athletic associations have been established. It is estimated that five times as much money is being spent each year for athletics as was spent 15 years ago. The 3-M C. A. the church and the social settlements are awakening to the fact that physical development is a basis for moral development.

"From state statistics it has been found that the reduction in the use of narcotics by high school pupils is due in small part to the teaching of the dangers of tobacco, but mainly to the encouragement of athletics. Ninety-five per cent of the high school superintendents of this state vouch for the good influences of athletics upon the moral development of the school. Seventy-five per cent of the boys in this state are engaged in high school athletics, and in order to do so they must be industrious in their school work. The requirements of the State Interscholastic association are strict.

In conclusion, Professor Berry lined up athletics against the camp of the anti-athletic camp of the literary professors.

Entering into consideration athletics, literature, art, etc., the former is doing the most for the moral development of the high school girl and boy. To day teachers must be educated to see the relationship of physical and mental development. We can develop healthier bodies and stronger minds in the youth today, only by awakening the health conscience of the teachers."

Says Candidates Don't Need Names

Atty-Gen. Kuhn will hand down an opinion this afternoon, relative to the question which arises in Detroit as to whether candidates for county offices in the counties of more than 100,000 inhabitants from Wayne county, are required to secure a certain number of names to their petitions in addition to paying the regular fee and filing an affidavit with the county clerk. The decision will hold that if a candidate files the necessary petition and the affidavit and pays the regulation fee that it will be the duty of the county clerk to place signers to a primary petition. The question was put up to the attorney-general by George Lord, secretary of the state tax commission, who is a resident of Detroit, and quietly, and deposited the necessary fee, that it was not necessary for him to secure signers to a petition in addition to what he has already done.

Gun-Runners of the Persian Gulf

A GROWING MENACE TO THE PEACE OF INDIA

BY T. H. MANNERS HOWE

HIS feeling is growing throughout the British army and Indian government circles that Britain is approaching a bigger campaign on the northwest frontier than has been seen in recent years. Not only are large sections of the tribesmen like the Mahsud Waziris and others exhibiting signs of increasing turbulence, but the frontier territories from one end to the other are strongly full of modern arms and ammunition, while there is pouring into them every day by every secluded crack leading through Baluchistan and the Afghan hills.

In addition to this, the present Ameer, inheriting his father's policy, has allowed thousands of modern rifles unaccounted to the arsenal at Kabul to reach the hands of his own tribesmen, and the probable cooperation of his latter in a frontier war against the Indian Raj may easily involve the British government with Afghanistan as well.

All this, as every Indian officer knows, is involved in the continuance of the persistent gun-running which is marking the growing war fever on the Indian northwest frontier through the Persian gulf. It is not too much to say that the peace and safety of India depend upon the suppression of this trade, and yet, owing chiefly to the poverty of British naval resources there, she can do little or nothing.

Muscat, at the entrance of the gulf, is the chief center of this nefarious traffic, which is carried on by Europeans and, unhappily, by British merchants. The guns, also in under British protection, derive a large revenue from it, but although negotiations with him for its prohibition might require diplomatic handling, owing to his treaty obligations with at least one other power, it is the only effective means of avoiding the outpouring of blood and treasure on the Indian frontier.

At present the efforts of the British navy are handicapped by the fact that the hydrographical outlines of Western Persia are so faulty and lateral of the gulf, do not allow preventive ships to go very close to the coast. It is this fact which enables the gun-running dhows to escape the vigilance of British cruisers.

Thus the dhows which put out from Muscat with their contraband cargoes adopt the simple plan of hugging the coast within the shallow-water limits, if they are making for Koweit, which is the center of the gun trade for Mesopotamia and western Persia, they can proceed all the way in comparative safety, otherwise they sail just far enough to be in a position to make a dash for Jask or some other port on the Makran coast, where their cargoes are received for conveyance by caravan via Baluchistan to Afghanistan and the northwest frontier Khels.

The two most active firms engaged in this trade are owned by a Hanchi and a Frenchman. There are also in Muscat numerous small shops engaged in the trade, and numbers of the agents are "banias" from India. Mysterious cargoes are also dropped overboard in the dead of night into well-sailing dhows and got away to obscure places along the eastern coast. It will be impossible to check this growing peril to England's peace in India without a large number of small "sauchi" patrol boats and an efficient coastguard on the Makran coast.

"No error," says Mr. H. Warrington Smyth, in "Mast and Sail in Europe and Asia," "has played a greater part in the world's history than the dhow. The latent yard is as much the emblem of the Faith as is the Crescent. The true baggara, bagala, or Arab dhow, the probable parent of all the lateen-rigged offspring, is now nearly to be met with in the Red sea and eastward to the Persian gulf, Karachi, Bombay, along the Malabar coast, and down the east of Africa to Zanzibar, making its voyages with the fair wind of the monsoon, and capable of holding its own in the hard weather often to be met with in the Indian ocean. Notwithstanding local differences of detail these vessels vary very little as a class; they are generally stubbed, having a long raking forward. There is great beam and rise of floor and a very raking transom stern. There is generally a high poop and forecastle deck, the rest of the vessel being unobstructed by open. The rig consists generally of mule and mizzen lateens. The mainmast is the spar stepped amidships, with a great rake forward."

A correspondent from India writes that the British authorities in the Persian gulf have been very active in suppressing the traffic in rifles and ammunition. The arms were being landed on the Makran coast and thence were carried by caravans for sale to the tribesmen on the northwestern frontier of India, to be used against the British troops when the next trouble comes. The navy men are reported to have been very successful, and made several good hauls of rifles and ammunition. To reward them, and their governors' chances of profit, four companies of the Fourteenth Sikhs were sent from Quetta to Gwadar, a seaport on the mainland of Makran, one of our illustrations depicts the entraining of some of the transport camels at Jacobabad in Sind, en route to Nushki, whence the column marched to Bela.

As a rule, when camels are entrained they are loaded on open trucks, but on this occasion it was found advisable to make use of closed cars. The "ooats" strongly objected to being loaded, but with a rope behind the hocks and a steady, persuasive stroke on the nose rope they were eventually hauled or pushed in. Once in the car the camels were made to kneel down in the sand which had been spread on the floor, their knees were then tied so that it was impossible for them to straighten out their forelegs.

The cars were each loaded with six camels, three in each end, facing inward. The space in the middle was utilized for sudden and fodder for the journey. Two camelmen also traveled in each car. It may be remarked that Baluchis differ from most people in that they do not notice that the camel has a particularly offensive odor. The camels imbibed and protested while being loaded, but they soon settled down and began to eat the fodder provided for them. It took five hours to load the first train of 120 camels. Only one camel that had an unusually large hump could not be coaxed through the door, and he was trussed like a chicken and carried bodily in by

ENTRAINING CAMELS TO COUNTERACT GUN-RUNNING

A TYPICAL DHOW IN THE PERSIAN GULF

The 3rd-sayee show shows the territory through which the contraband guns are run. In the foreground are the bare rocky hills surrounding Muscat; the capital of Oman, while to the right is the equally bare coast of Makran, from which gun-running routes lead inland to Afghanistan. Oman is an independent sultanate occupying the southeastern end of the peninsula of Arabia. It reaches along the Persian gulf, the gulf of Oman and the Arabian sea from El Hasa to the Hadramaut region. The area is about 80,000 square miles. The region along the coast is very mountainous, the highest peaks rising to about 10,000 feet. Behind the mountain chains the country gradually passes into the great desert of Arabia. The most favorable part of the country is in the central valleys, which are characterized by a temperate climate and rich vegetation. The chief products are dates, which constitute the main article of export, and other fruits. Pearls and mother-of-pearl and fish are also of some commercial importance. The chief port is Muscat. It is situated between two bills and looks out on to the sea, as shown in the view of the Persian gulf section, passing this article.

The population of Oman is estimated at 1,500,000, and consists of several tribes of Arab origin, partly nomadic, but the population is very numerous.

Muscat was taken by the Portuguese in 1508 and remained in their hands until the middle of the seventeenth century, when the Arabs of the interior secured possession of it. The imams or sultans of Muscat afterwards made extensive conquests in eastern Africa, including Zanzibar, Mombasa and Quiloa. Oman was at the climax of its power and commercial prosperity in the first half of the nineteenth century, when the authority of the imams or sultans extended over the Persian territories of Laristan and Mogistan, the islands of Bender Abbas, part of the coast of Baluchistan, and the long strip of African coastland including Zanzibar, Mombasa and Quiloa, together with the island of Socotra. The present ruling family originated in Yemen and was first established in the imamate in the person of Ahmed Ibn Said in 1741. The rise of the Wahabi power in Nedjed resulted in considerable loss of territory. In 1856, on the death of Sultan Said, his possessions were divided between his two sons, one receiving the African territories and the other Muscat, with the Persian possessions. These last were lost in 1875. Sultan Thuwaini, who succeeded in Muscat, was assassinated in 1866 by his son Sedim, who reigned for a short time, and was driven out by his uncle, Seyd Thuwaini. The latter died in his native city, and ever since every little beyond the capital, Muscat, the seat of which is therefore probably more well known in popular usage than that of the whole state.

London.—When Halley's comet set all Europe ablaze with excitement, its wonderful beauty was more exactly courted by enterprising photographers than was the comet by the foremost astronomers of Greenwich, whose photographic telescopes were kept searching the heavens, to note the arrival of the periodic visitor on the sensitive plate of the camera. Nor was the vigilance unrewarded. More than one distinct impression of the brilliant object is now on view at the Royal observatory, Greenwich.

This success has revived interest in this interesting institution by the Thames, but few outside scientific circles know much of the history and duties of the almost conventional group of buildings on

The fair hill where hoary sage's boast
To mark the stars and count the heavenly host.

Yet probably no hill in the world has had so strongly varied a part to play or played so important a part in the affairs of men. The greatest film across the footpath on its summit is the meridian from which the longitude of every high road, map and chart is calculated. All England sets its time by the minute-hand, and by adjustments to the daily and nightly observations taken here, the accurate moment is kept of diurnal changes in the temperature and humidity, the direction and force of the wind, the amount of sunshine and rainfall, the earth's magnetism and a host of meteorological matters forming a scheme of data increasing importance and interest.

There is a time-ball on the minute-master clock, fixed on the outside wall of the observatory, and drifting into 24 hours. There are still many who believe this clock is kept going by the sun. They do not know that the fixed stars are the real timekeepers, from which Britishers obtain their daily progress. The sidereal clock, kept within one of the buildings of the observatory, is corrected by observation of the stars every night, and every morning before ten o'clock the mean solar clock is checked from it. The latter is housed below the timeball on the tower which dominates the hill and is in magnetic connection with the clock by the boundary wall, which has the attached the correct time to countless visitors to the hill since it was placed there in 1852.

To this galvano-magnetic clock in the wall comes every Monday, a woman who makes $2,500 a year out of the unusual occupation in England. She sells the time to London watchmakers.

Her name is Miss Ballerette of Maidenhead. Eighty years ago the then astronomer royal suggested to her father that if he took the correct time on a certified chronometer every week he could no doubt find numerous clients. So he bought a famous watch made for the duke of Essex, one of the sons of George III, and soon worked up a business with Bond Street. The duke's wife and the time till she reached the age of 80 years, when she retired from the business over to her daughter.

When Miss Ballerette claim Greenwich time, she hands over every week her chronometer is corrected and she is given an official certificate. From that her 50 customers correct their watches and clocks.

CHURCH WAS BUILT IN 1679

Queer Old Quaker Meeting House in Buckinghamshire, England, of Interest to Americans.

London.—In the country of Buckinghamshire, England, is one spot of peculiar interest to Americans, by reason of its association with William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania. This is the little meeting house of the Society of Friends at Jordans. Built in a wooded hollow at the foot of a hill, it is the very expression of seclusion and of peace. The building is a simple red brick structure, with its interior of the usual simplicity—wooden wainscoting and benches, and whitewashed walls without adornment of any kind. On a small circular table, used formerly by William Penn, is the visitors' book, in which the names of American figure largely. The meeting house was built about 1679. At the present time two regular meetings are held in it every week, one on the fourth Thursday in June, the other on the first Thursday in June. In the neighboring village of Chalfont St. Giles, situated some two miles to the north, is the cottage where Milton lived and where he wrote "Paradise Lost" with two miles further on, still in the same direction, commanding the hills where Jesse of Hartwell Wood, is the fine old half-timbered house of King's Farm, where Charles Peace of notoriety died, in 1872, to Gulielma, daughter of Sir William Springett.

CHECKS FRISCO RAT PLAGUE

Federal Health Authorities Describe Extensive Campaign Against Disease-Spreading Rodents.

Washington.—While no case of human plague has appeared in San Francisco in the two years and four months and no case of rat plague has been found there in a year and six months, the deadly war for the extermination of rats in the Pacific coast metropolis continues without relaxation.

With this statement Acting Assistant Surgeon G. M. Corper of the United States Public Health and Marine hospital service introduces a report containing interesting details of the campaign against the rats. The war on rats is mostly in the nature of a prophylactic measure against rat-borne plague.

Thirty laborers are employed exclusively as rat trappers. There are in constant use about 8,000 traps of the cage and snap varieties. During May 8,561 rats were trapped. In this time the traps set were 751 pounds of bacon, 104 pounds of cheese and 420 loaves of bread. The bread was the best bait in cage traps; a record is kept of the location each rat is trapped.

Destruction of rats by poison is now limited to the sewers. During May 27,452 pieces of poisoned bread were distributed in the manholes in the sewers.

City inspectors, acting under the United States authorities, have been making a comprehensive rat survey in the city and Surgeon Corper says the result of the present campaign will be to show that the people have learned a lesson of cleanliness.

THIEVES INVENT A NEW WAY

Clever Philadelphia Shoplifters Perfect an Ingenious Device for Carrying on Their Work.

Philadelphia.—For some time past in several large stores in this city it was found that goods were being stolen in a wholesale way that set all the floor walkers working with redoubled energy, but despite their active vigilance the thieves were not detected for quite awhile. Finally the stolen goods were discovered and through the arrest recently of two men and a woman working from $2,000 to $4,000 worth of stolen goods were recovered in their room. The detectives entered the room just as the three were unloading goods of various kinds from an ingenious device in which the petticoat of the woman had been successfully worn out of the stores where it worked in the stolen.

The boxes were especially designed for making thefts easy, the arrangement being something new even in the varied arts of shoplifters. A hole about twelve inches long and two inches wide was cut in each box, and the box was so carried under the arm with this hole next to the side of the body that it was almost impossible to discover it. The operator would slip a few small trifling articles and pay for them, and then the woman would be attached to the box in such a way that it could be seen readily by the store people and detectives. Each of the thieves would operate at different counters in a rule, but sometimes one of the men and the woman would operate together.

AROUND THE WORLD

FAMOUS MEN IN WISCONSIN

Two of Them, Gen. Zachary Taylor and Second Lieut. Jefferson Davis, Became Presidents.

Three United States army forts, built before Wisconsin was a territory, did much to attract attention to what has become one of the solid commonwealths of the nation, writes Lieut.-Col. J. A. Watrous in Chicago Tribune. They were Fort Howard, at Green Bay; Fort Winnebago, near Portage, in Columbia county, and Fort Crawford, at Prairie du Chien. There were soldiers in those rude forts 75 years ago and since, who became famous. Two of them, Gen. Zachary Taylor, who was to Fort Howard as lieutenant-colonel more than seventy-five years ago and Lieut. Jefferson Davis, who went there a little later, became presidents, one of the United States, the other of the confederacy. These two officers were on duty for a short time in the two other forts named.

Sometimes a Friendly Indian Did the Paddling.

While at Fort Crawford Lieutenant Davis wooed and won General Taylor's daughter, his first wife. It is said to have been a romantic match, but that has been disputed. At all events General Taylor was so much offended that he and Lieutenant Davis were parted, and the latter, while Taylor was commanding an army and Davis was colonel of a Mississippi regiment in the Mexican war, Davis was seriously wounded in battle. Then General Taylor rode up to the wounded officer, shook hands with him and warmly complimented him for his bravery and the good management of his command.

At the next general election Taylor—"Old Rough and Ready," as he was called—was elected president. Four years later General Pierce was chosen president, and one of the first things he did was to offer his Mexican war comrade, Colonel Jefferson Davis, a place in his cabinet, which that fellow accepted. He made a good secretary of war.

Speaking of presidents, Wisconsin people do not forget that a volunteer regiment from Wisconsin was in Taylor's territory during the Black-Hawk war. Its transport for a night was the Wisconsin river stands, and was also at Port Atkinson before Governor W. D. Harriman, president, by becoming the foremost butter and cheese maker in the country. Mr. Harriman's father, Jonathan Harriman, was in the same company with Abraham Lincoln. Nor should I stop here. My grandfather, with his wife and daughter, went 70 years ago to Fort Winnebago, where the lieutenant was stationed for several years. He was R. H. Macy, Mrs. Harriman's maternal grandfather, and the girl was beloved by the entire garrison. He proved a faithful husband and married a captain of the engineer corps. In 1851 the captain, who was a cousin of Jefferson Davis, advanced over all the officers in the army except Brevet Lieut. Gen. Winfield Scott, and was placed in active command of the army. This is what happened to Maj. Gen. George B. McClellan, who three years later was the choice of his party for president, and officers who knew little Miss Macy at Fort Winnebago, have been persuaded to favor her husband's election on the ground that because of the White House. A recent mayor of New York is her brother.

When General McClellan assumed command of the army in 1861 his father-in-law was a major and quartermaster. The general lost little time in placing him on his staff as a brigadier general.

Maj. David E. Twiggs was another noted man. He served at Forts Howard and Winnebago from 1828 to 1830 Mrs. Twiggs was the only woman at Winnebago. Twiggs was a brigadier general in the army in 1861 and was one of the two officers who left the old army for the Confederacy.

This story would not be complete without a reference to the social life of those days, not only in Brown county, but in the Fox River valley, which is the most populous part of Wisconsin, and by the Wisconsin river from Fort Winnebago to Fort Crawford in a 150 miles. In making visits to one another they walked, rode in the private hack and on the Canal boats.

TAFT IN LETTER TO GRISCOM HITS VICE-PRESIDENT SHERMAN.

WOULD AVOID CONTROVERSIES

President Explains His Position in Regard to Fight Over New York Chairmanship—Was Not Opposed to Roosevelt for Place.

New York, Aug. 23.—President Taft and former President Roosevelt are again fellow workers in the same political field. The threat that they might pull apart has been forestalled by a full explanation on one vote and an unreserved acceptance on the other. The president makes it plain in a letter given out here Monday by Lloyd C. Griscom, president of the New York Republican county committee, how the misunderstanding arose. He explains that he never took any part in a committee called to defeat Colonel Roosevelt for temporary chairman of the coming Republican state convention.

Mr. Taft's letter, which was made public by Mr. Griscom, follows:

Replies to Griscom's Telegram.

"Beverly, Mass., Aug. 20, 1910.

"My dear Mr. Griscom: I see you know from your telephone conversation with my secretary, I have actually refused to adulit the propriety or necessity of the presence of the president in my statements which are not based on any act or authorized word of mine, and have been written entirely willing, however, to reply exaguerably to pub' ication of the August 19, which has just arrived and which is as follows:

"I am informed and believe that several members of the New York state committee who were in the Taft and President Sherman over ex-President Roosevelt as temporary chairman of the state convention were influenced by statements made to them that a second name was presented to defeat Colonel Roosevelt in accordance with your wish. As a member of the state committee declared to me before the meeting of the state convention candidacy had been arranged with you by telephone to defeat Roosevelt and that efforts were made to create an impression that you favor a particular candidate for temporary chairman; I want you to know that the injection of the name of a high member of your administration into a factional contest has produced a most embarrassing situation, and the absence of any authoritative information as to your attitude is seriously misleading many Republicans and impairing a movement for harmony and party leadership and clean government in this state. I know you desire us to have a fair field and hope that this may be made clear to the public.

Favored Roosevelt as Chairman.

"The suggestion that I have ever expressed a wish to defeat Mr. Roosevelt for the temporary chairmanship of the convention or have even taken the slightest step to do so is wholly untrue. I never heard Mr. Sherman's name suggested as temporary chairman of the state convention until I saw in the newspapers of August 12 that he had been selected at the meeting of the committee. When you called at my house Saturday evening, August 13, you told me Mr. Roosevelt intended to go to the convention as a delegate and you asked incidentally his being made temporary chairman, a suggestion to which I acquiesced. It did not occur to me that anyone would oppose it. This was the first time the subject of the temporary chairmanship was mentioned to me by anyone. You did not ask me to take any action whatever with respect to it. After a full discussion of the New York state situation I drifted in your presence the following telegram and sent it to Mr. Sherman:

Would Avoid All Controversy.

"Honorable James S. Sherman, U. S. Vice-President, Utica, N. Y.

"Please say to Senator Root and Woodruff that I have had a long conference with Governor Hughes and they have myself merely expressed to you that I hope you will do all in your power to avoid, without humiliation to anyone and with Victory for the party by a full conference with Mr. Roosevelt and reasonable concessions with reference to individual candidates.

"The thing of all others that ought to be avoided is a controversy in the convention. I am told by Mr. Griscom that such a conference with Mr. Roosevelt might conveniently be had before the state committee meets on Tuesday. Hope you will be able to report satisfactory solution when you come on Wednesday.—William H. Taft.

ROOSEVELT TALKS TO THE FARMERS

First Address of His Tour Delivered Near Utica, N. Y.

PROBLEMS OF COUNTRY LIFE

Danger Seen in the Growth of Cities—Plea Made for the Farmer, Laborer and the Farmer's Wife.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Theodore Roosevelt arrived here this afternoon with his party in the private car Roosevelt for the first stop and address of his tour through the west. A tremendous crowd was at the station to greet the former president and he was given an enthusiastic welcome.

The entire party boarded trolley cars at once and proceeded to Oriskany, nine miles outside the city, and thence to Summit park, a mile farther on, where Mr. Roosevelt spoke to the farmers of Herkimer and Oneida counties. The agriculturists were out in great numbers and brought with them their entire families, making the affair a gala event. Mr. Roosevelt is extremely popular with the farmers because of the deep interest he has shown in the problems of betering farm life conditions. If for no other reason, He was listened to with closest attention and his remarks were accorded frequent applause. He spoke as follows:

"There are no two public questions of vital importance to the future welfare of this country than the problem of conservation and the problem of the betterment of rural life. Moreover, these two problems are vitally interdependent, for the welfare of them can be successfully solved only by treating them as parts of a whole. A measurable success in any one of the three great lines of work I have mentioned means a measurable success in every other, and the farmer of the land is no more interested in the conservation of our forests and commercial welfare, all our material development in every field, depends in the last resort upon our preserving and increasing the fertility of our farms. It is of course, absurd to think of conserving our material resources, and at the same time neglecting or failing to promote the development of country life, for there can be a permanent improvement in the out if the life of those who live on the land, and unless that life is lived, the land will starve and language will perish from the country—and the country—should be as well represented as the city. The man who tills the soil is doing the work which in the last resort all the rest of us depend for our material welfare. The country life problem is one which the city must solve if it is to be solved at all. Where our civilizations have hitherto sprung up they have always grown to an acme in certain stages and then to fall. No nation can develop a real civilization without cities. Up to a certain point the city movement is thoroughly healthy and beneficial. It is a strange and lamentable fact that in the past in many cases the point has been at the expense of the country by declining and sometimes even by the extinction of the country. In some instances the country has tended to develop into a mere plantation worked for the benefit of the country of what is lost in it, and the country has been depopulated of its best. In consequence, in the past every civilization that has developed cities has in the end been destroyed by the barbarians from the outside. While prosper and the more healthy the cities are right along there these tendencies are at work in this country, and we are in great danger if we are now what never before was seen in any civilized nation, of a fall decline of the country population. In consequence, the city population is in a dangerous condition.

"The problem does not consist merely in the fact that in such a country the city is a good thing and not a bad thing, which will manifest itself in every state in the growth of the city at the expense of the country, and even if this is not the case, in so great an equalization of the country population as to make the city more attractive than the country, so that the country will be the country of the people who are fit for it.

"Country life is the unit in the problem in to make the corner of the farmer and the corner of the farmer's wife as attractive and as remunerative as corresponding corners in the city. We are well aware that the farmer must himself do the work, that he must be a husbandman and a quarter-master, a veterinary surgeon, a mechanic, a master of the market and a business man. The farmer's wife must be a doctor, a nurse, a teacher, a dressmaker, a cook, a housekeeper, and she has to do all this and more. The problem of farm life is realized by the author of the Farmer's Wife, and by the author of Vinnkerts book on the Rural Life Problem and by other trained minds.

Conditions of Farm Life.

"One feature of the problem should be recognized by the farmer at once, and as a rule it is recognized. It is in our duty and our business to concentrate our efforts on the farm so that it can be made satisfactory when the owners of the farm are prepared to give up away to live in cities instead of working their farms. Unless we do this it cannot be really satisfactory when it does. We must so work that there is for part of the year at least enough leisure for the farmer, his wife and growing children to enable them to demand for labor at all so that the farmer and his family can have time to do what come out to work in the country. We must so work that the farmer can with the prospect of steady employment and a fair remuneration for his work make a good home for a man who is willing to work some steadiness and industry, and who believes it pays to him his livelihood. Economic conditions are at the bottom of the kind of cooperating, organizing or combination which will enable the man—must be a man who labors for a living—to get the benefit of modern conditions which foster his self-respect and the dignity of his calling.

"Above all, the conditions of farm life must be shaped with a view to the welfare of the farmer's wife and children. The farmer's wife is as much as he is the farmer. To have the farm life attractive we must look at it and as to have the man a more drudge. It is every bit as important to introduce new machines to economize her labor which is now so hard, to introduce machinery to increase the efficiency of her work, to make her life easier—that's the slogan of organization. Nothing will help the movement which looks to the betterment of farm life so much as the—performance of duty and these are the duties of the farmer and his wife. The woman who shirks her duty to her home, to her husband, to her children, to her country, is the most despicable creature, from the standpoint of the welfare of the woman in turn, more important than the welfare of the man, for the mother of the race. Also, who bears shirk in her strong duty to her country, to the world, the world. She discovers honor, glory, and the world's praise, and the world's gratitude, and the world's love, and the world's service. She disappointed if she shirks her duty to her country, and the woman does not shirk them; and it is the duty of the country to see that she is so—that they are performed under the conditions which make for the well-being and happiness and for the well-being and happiness of the children who bring into the world.

A Strange Fatality.

An unusual fatal accident happened at New York when a sheet of window glass knocked from the frame fell five stories and killed Miss Lena Phillips, who was almost decapitated. The sheet of glass, which became unfastened while being washed, sailed obliquely through the air and struck the neck of Miss Phillips, who was walking on the street below.

KEEP BABY'S SKIN CLEAR

Few parents realize how many cuticuraby lives have been embittered and social and business success prevented by serious skin affections which so often result from the neglect of minor eruptions in infancy and childhood. With but a little care and the use of the proper emollients, baby's skin and hair may be preserved, purified and beautified, minor eruptions prevented from becoming chronic, with disfiguring rashes, itchings, irritations and chafings disposed.

To this end, nothing is so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective as the constant use of Cuticura Soap, assisted, when necessary, by Cuticura Ointment. Sold by Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole proprietors, Boston, for their Ninety-Page Cuticura Book, telling all about the care and treatment of the skin.

The Charlevoix County Agricultural Society announces its 25th Annual Fair, to be held at East Jordan, September 13, 14, 15 and 16th in full confidence that its previous efforts to give the public a truly great exposition of the agricultural and industrial products of the county have been appreciated and that the coming Fair will bring a much larger attendance and much greater interest than any of its predecessors. The development of all the interests that are allied to the farm the home, and the country estate is the object for which the Fair was established.

The Directors have no other object in view. Not as a source of gain, but as a means of uplifting and promoting agriculture, is their hope for the future of this Fair.

To this end we ask the co operation of all the people, for as long as people shall dwell upon the earth, so long will the soil be called upon to supply the things most needed by man.

Charlevoix County with its wealth of manufactures, has also great wealth in its soil. No County in this State has richer soil than is found in its valleys, while its hill slopes hold great possibilities for the fruit grower.

The Fair will endeavor to provide both instruction and amusement for the people. It invites contributions from the herd and flock, the poultry yard, the farm, garden and orchard, the flower garden and pre-to-house, art, needle work, and domestic products, farm machinery and pet stock. They will pass under the eye of competent judges and premiums in money will be awarded the most meritorious.

We propose that a premium awarded at this Fair shall mean something of value to the exhibitor, and to that end all wards will be made solely on the merits of the article exhibited.

To the Visitor we offer an inspection of the best the county produces, with the feeling that you will go from this Fair with a sense of patriotism and pride in your county that you have never before known.

Schools Begins September 19th.

Do not allow your boys and girls to go through the school year of 1910-11 handicapped by the disadvantage of not getting started with their grades the first day. School begins Monday, Sept. 19. All pupils should be on hand.

The Superintendent will be in the office at the high school afternoon, except Saturdays, and will be glad to meet parents and friends of the school. Let the Superintendent and teachers feel that you are interested in the welfare of your children and are willing to cooperate with them in giving them the best possible training. Remember that the boys and girls are under the influence of the teachers for only five hours of the day, and under home influence the rest of the day. Much better results can be obtained if friendly relations are at all times maintained between parents and teachers. Avoid misunderstandings by talking things over with the teachers.

Under the new tuition law, 8th grade graduates of rural schools may have their tuition paid by their district board to any one of the three nearest high schools. We shall be glad to welcome our share of those students. The Superintendent will be glad to correspond with any who may be planning to come to Charlevoix for their high school course.

There are some openings for students to work for their board. Rooms for light housekeeping may be had at reasonable rates, and students may board themselves.

The tuition for the high school is two dollars per month.

No Cheating.

There are parts of New York where there is practically no cheating. In parts are those which are inhabited by people who have too lately arrived from the other side to have become infected with American carelessness and thriftlessness. In these parts the grocer, the butcher and the baker trades on the level, not because he is more virtuous than others, but because he can't help himself—because his customers will go elsewhere if he is too generous to his till.—New York Globe.

WILLIAM J. WEIKEL
Of Charlevoix

Candidate for nomination for Sheriff on the Republican ticket at the Primary, Sept. 6th 1910.

William J. Weikel is a sterling and active man and has been a resident of Charlevoix County for 45 years. He has been appointed deputy and under Sheriff by three different sheriffs, and has made one of the best officers that Charlevoix County has ever had—which proves that he is the right kind of a man for the office of Sheriff. If Mr. Weikel is the choice of the people for Sheriff they will make no mistake as he will do his duty at all times.

Ford B. Hobbins of Boyne Falls

Candidate for the Republican nomination for Sheriff of Charlevoix County at the Primary Election, Tuesday, September 6, 1910.

Ford P. Hobbins is in the prime of vigorous manhood, has been a resident of this city for the past 15 years, has been three times elected to the office of Supervisor of his township, and is fully qualified to hold the important office to which he aspires

The only plank in his platform is the impartial enforcement of the law without fear of favor. If Mr. Hobbins is the choice of the people for Sheriff they can rest assured that he will perform every duty which his high office imposes upon him, for he is a man who, when he has a thing to do, goes ahead and does it.

DWIGHT L. FITCH of East Jordan

Candidate for nomination of Prosecuting Attorney on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Fitch was born on a farm in Livingston County in this State. Is 43 years of age. He obtained his education by his own personal efforts, working on a farm and teaching school. Graduated from the University of Michigan and has practiced law 15 years, overly ten of which have been in Charlevoix County.

He is not a politician. Has never held an office in this County. Is not the candidate of any political organization or combination. He has put up an honorable campaign, making no attack upon any of his opponents, only urging his own qualifications and fitness for the office. If nominated and elected he promises to give to the office his own personal attention, give to all a "square deal" and give the people one of the best administrations of that office they have ever had.

Smokeless Frying Pan.

A frying pan said to prevent smoke and odors from emanating from the food being cooked, even onions being included, is described in Popular Mechanics. One side of the wall of the pan has an extra section of wall attached. At this point the inner wall is cut low, and between the two is an opening. With the cover in position on the pan the natural draft of the cooking range starts a circulation through the pan and over the food being cooked, this circulation drawing all smoke and odors down into the fire chamber.

—This issue contains a statement of the Charlevoix State Savings Bank as called for to be published as of September 1st by the State Banking Department. In the two years and four months that President Foley and Cashier Rachow have had charge of the management of this bank its business has increased over $100,000. This is very gratifying to the stockholders and patrons of the bank.

—It has been said by one with a statewide knowledge of rural conditions that the farmers of Western Michigan are today the most wide-awake farmers in the commonwealth. To prove the statement the speaker said that there is more activity among the granges of the counties north of Grand Rapids and west of the center of the state than among the grangers of any other portion. Today there are 225 grangers in Western Michigan and each of these is a force working for progress, for advancement, for bigger and better things, for higher standards. Each grange in its own community is performing a social and educational function of a character of which are of great value. The vitality and wide-awake fullness of the grange in Western Michigan is demonstrated by the fact that the 1910 session of the state organization was held in this region and that the 1910 session is also to be held in Western Michigan territory. Surely a region in which there is so much activity as regards rural affairs is one in which it is worth while to live.

—C. C. Otis, son of Hev. N. L. Otis a former pastor of the Congregational church of this city, is here this week in the interest of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada. The Sun Life is one of the strong financial institutions of America, having assets of $33,000,000 and a surplus of nearly $5,000,000. It writes more policies in Michigan last year than the three great New York companies combined. Anyone wishing to secure further protection for his home at the lowest net cost should see Mr. Otis while he is here. Inquire at this office.

—Just now we hear much talk about keeping local option out of politics, and that it has no business being considered at the primaries. If is the voice of the steen bumar of its disciples. Let us say to the voter that if he will look up the antecedents of those who express these views, he will find that the gentleman who wants the voter to stand on this elevated and liberal ground voted "wet" at the last election.—Boyne Journal. The editor of this paper is one of those who oppose the mixing of local option with politics, and he did not vote wet, and never will. The above slur is an insult to a large number of local option voters. It is just the kind of talk that will drive votes to the "wets."

—Major Mansfield, who has been spending several weeks on the Beaver group of islands in the interest of the State tax commission, has been working for some years to induce the State to make a State park of Garden Island, and he is confident that he will ultimately succeed. There are 4,000 acres of land on the island, and it is chiefly wooded, the small colony of Indians having clearings. The state already owns one acre, and the United States has 1,500 acres. The movement cannot fail to be a popular one, and as the State possessions have already been set apart as forest domain the general government, we think, can be induced to add its lands. Garden Island would be an ideal game preserve and summer resort location, and we hope the Major will keep up the good work.

THE CENSUS

In Northern Michigan Counties Charlevoix Has the Lead.

Special to Petoskey News: Emmet county population thirteenth census, 18,561; twelfth census, 15,092; eleventh census, 8,796. Cheboygan county population thirteenth census, 17,832; twelfth census, 15,516; eleventh census, 11,586. Charlevoix county population thirteenth census, 19,157; twelfth census, 16,956; eleventh census, 9,686.

For the purpose of settling the legal status of the state of Michigan as relates to its oncoming primary elections, the directors of the census Durand, at Washington, has given out population information on its such quantities as is necessary, prior to the general count which has not yet been nearly finished, but which will be full of surprises when the full report is made. The following telegram received from the director as Emmet, Cheboygan and Charlevoix counties show a most healthful condition of affairs, though Charlevoix county seems to have the best of the general increase of population for the past decade.

Emmet county shows an increase over the previous national census of 2,630, Cheboygan county shows an increase over previous census of 3,356, while Charlevoix county has raised its previous record by 5,201.

—The librarian of the public library has the following report to offer for the month of August: No. of fiction given out, 569; juvenile fiction, 354; nonfiction, 125; classified [as follows: Philosophy, 4; religion, 5; sociology, 17; philology, 2; natural science, 5; useful arts, 1; fine arts, 7; literature, 28; history, 11; travel, 18; biography, 27; total number, 1038; daily average, 47. Daily average attendance in reading rooms, 10. Number of the new patrons enrolled during the month, 41. Total number of patrons, 1200. Fines collected $6.95. The following is a partial list of the new books added to the library—the complete works of John Fisk, Eugene Field and James Whitcomb Riley, "The Children's Hour" (10 vols.) and the American Statesmen series (34 vols.)

—Although a considerable number of our summer visitors will remain the greater part of this month, the resort season of 1910 is practically a "closed incident." There is indisputable evidence that the resort business of this season was greater than that of last year. While the business of the larger hotels may not have shown up better, a greater number of cottages and residences have been occupied, and rentals were active. The demand was greater than the supply. Another gratifying feature of the season's business is the enthusiastic admiration of the resort people for Charlevoix. Every one of them is an advertising agency for the best resort town in Michigan. They always bring new people back with them. They not only speak of the natural beauty of the place, but are loud in their praise of the public spirit of our people in the matter of street improvement. In everything that constitutes an up-to-date resort town Charlevoix has the goods.

—The excitement of the primary canvas and election are over, and one conviction has anchored itself in the minds of most voters, and that is that the present primary nominating system is a stupendous fraud. As a rule, the people will put up with increased expense when there is a corresponding benefit; but we have yet to find one intelligent citizen who has succeeded in demonstrating to his own satisfaction any feature of this Warner abortion that has it even a faint tint of "reform" color. The tax payers of every voting precinct are compelled to pay for two elections, where under the old system there was but one. Two expensive campaigns are entailed upon the nominee to say nothing of what the unsuccessful candidates are compelled to disgorge. And in this so called "reform" method there is as great political iniquity as there was under the caucus system. We know we are ignorant, but we want some one who possesses greater intelligence and can give the subject more thorough perscrutation than ourself to educate us up to a reasonable limit of political knowledge. Thus far we cannot find anything out of "primary reform" that is a solace to our purturbed spirit. Show us.

The Last Ditch.

When William, prince of Orange, afterward William III. of England, was elected stadtholder of the United Netherlands in 1672 and found himself in the midst of war with England and France he was asked by the Duke of Buckingham whether he did not see ruin impending over his country.

"Very," he answered. "There is one certain means by which I can be sure enough to see my country's ruin. I will die in the last ditch." And, rejecting all terms of peace, he checked the invasion of France by opening dikes and flooding every inch of land, drove them from Holland in 1674 and made honorable terms with England and finally after varying effort brought the war to a successful close by a treaty with Franco in 1678.

Taken at His Word.

The doctor was telling how he came to be one of his best paying patients. The man was a hypochondriac, who was always imagining that something terrible was about to happen to him, and the doctor, who was a great joker, was very busy trying to rescue him out of his morbid condition.

"You have worried yourself until you are bordering on a nervous collapse," said the doctor to him one day. "You shouldn't think about your symptoms all the time, but just attend to your affairs as if there was nothing the matter with you."

"All right, doctor," replied the patient. "I'll do as you say. You needn't come to see me any more."—New York Sun.

Hunting up the cat he opened fire, at the same moment his sister rushed toward the animal in order to save it, and received the shot, the bullet entering her back inflicting a dangerous wound. At the present writing the child is resting easy although the doctor has not yet been able to locate the bullet. The little fellow realizing what he had down became frightened and ran away, and was almost a mile from home when overtaken.

He rumpled the tobacco, if indeed Reid's as though he found satisfaction in them. He was quite willing now to yield everything to Zelda's hands. The very man in whom she asked questions was a relief to him.

"Mr. Balcomb gave you a thousand dollars to bind a bargain—is that what you call it?" he asked of the clerk, strip. I think I understand that. But there are three debts—are there other things that must be paid? And if we still have two houses we can get money for them. We must face the whole matter now—please keep nothing back."

"I have told you everything. I have squandered your money in speculation—gambling is the name for it, but I have kept the farm and this house untouched. Everything else has gone and I have given an option for the sale of that strip of ground on the creek. And I sold a block of late belonging to you in an irregular way. I could not sell property without an order of court; that was required by your mothers will, but my creditors were anxious and Balcomb arranged an abstract to suit himself—I let him do it. I am the guilty one; it is my crime."

"Let us not use unpleasant words. It's my birthday. Pin quite grown up and you must let me help—my first help!"

"Yes, sir not Hodney; not my uncle," he said, hurriedly. "He is vile, bad, very indeed. He would take my mercy on me. And I am an old man and broken, very badly broken."

"I shall have to tell Uncle Hodney; but you need have no fear of him. I promise you that. Mr Carr is your lawyer, isn't he?" she asked.

"Yes; but he has been away. I took advantage of his absence to do things he would never have countenanced."

"You don't mean that man!" She had tried to avoid any reference to the interview of the night before, but the mention of Leighton's name brought the whole wretched scene clearly before her. It was not in her nature to hate her uncle, that she called on.

"I'm very, very feel toward him as you do, father; I believe that we might trust him. I look upon him as a friend."

Enfa Dameron's weak and the talk was wearying him. He closed his eyes and rested him head on the back of the chair, meaning it then aside to avoid reactivity. He was beaten and he was not used to defeat. He was stunned by the failure of his gambling operations. He had lived so entirely in dreams for a year that it was difficult for his mind to realize the break in light of a workaday world. Echoes of the harsh things that had passed between him and the child of his age were still in the room—phantoms that haunted him. She had summoned an apparition of her dead mother and had called him a liar; and he had lacked spirit in the barest terms she had hurled at him. He was beating upon her heart. He did not know—he did not understand, the motives that had compelling her. He had thrown away her money, and she did not upbraid him for it; she was even dwelling upon the fact that one could overlook and pardon the loss of a fortune was utterly beyond his comprehension.

"Try to cheer up," she said, rather her hand on his shoulder for a moment. "Don't talk to anybody about business of any kind. I'm going down to market and you needn't be afraid of him, or of anybody."

Rodney Merriam greeted Zelda cheerfully.

"Am I not the early bird?" she demanded, walking into the library. "I had hoped that you would congratulate me in quick and cheering words. It's my birthday; I would have you know."

"At my age—"

"You've said that frequently since we got acquainted."

"As I was saying, at my age, birthdays don't seem so dreadfully important. But I congratulate you with all my heart," he added, sincerely, and with the touch of manner that was always charming in him. He drew out the drawer of his desk. "Of course I haven't an idea of what you have in mind, some rubbish here—hardly worth considering—that I wish you'd carry away with you."

He took out a little jeweler's box and handed it to her.

"I've rarely been so perturbed," she said. "May I open it now, or must I wait till I get home? Unless they used to tell me when I was younger."

"If you're interested in an old man's taste, you may open it. I'm prepared to see you disappointed, so you needn't present you like it."

Zelda tore open the gift with the eagerness of a child, and pressed the catch. A dripping of pearls fell into her lap and she exclaimed over them joyously.

"Rubbish, did you say? Verily, it that was rubbish, one might—"

She threw the chain about her neck as fast as she could her fingers hurried by; then she brushed the white hair from Rodney Merriam's forehead and kissed him.

"You don't you delicious old dear! I know you hate to be thanked—"

"But I can stand being thanked. Put those things away now; and don't forget to take care of them. You can give them to your granddaughter on her wedding day."

"I can't imagine doing anything so rash. I can see myself calling for a gift without a reply."

"The subject of poverty carried no irony to the mind of both. His father was a miser, who had twinded his out of practically all of her fortune. He was a hypocrite, Rodney Merriam to himself, and here was his daughter in calm and cheerful as though there were no such thing as unhappiness in the world. His admiration was affection rose to high tide.

"I'm sorry if I seemed a little—preoptimate—yesterday," she said. "But I was all new and strange, and I didn't know that you did not like father. You will overlook whatever I did and said yesterday, won't you?"

"It's a good plan to begin the world over every morning. I want to see you in sorry I saw Zee. I began at the wrong end yesterday. The fault was all mine."

"Father and I have had a long talk about his business. He dropped a lot last night on his own account. I have told him that I was coming to you. Father has met with misfortune. He has lost—he frankly admit it! he spoke related with the money that belonged to me—and the money is all gone."

"Yes; I am not surprised.

"There is the hope we live in and the farm—they are still free. He says they belong to you."

"If he has untrustfully placed them for me I am glad, very, they pass in your possession to-day. They are yours to-day."

"Yes; I understand about the. I was fearful some thing of this sort and I am glad."

"But there are some things that are not quite right. Father has told me about them. There is something about an order of court, which affects a piece of property that he has sold—enough (this Mr. Balcomb. Father takes all the blame for that. I suppose that is what you wished to tell me last night. But I'm glad I heard it from father. He has you will not be hard on him. I have talked to me in an honorable spirit that, that—I respect very much."

"Zee!" he exclaimed. "Zee, he isn't worth it!"

"Please don't!—and the sob clutched her throat again—"I didn't come to you what it was worth but to get you to help me."

"Yes; I'm to be sure, it must be done your way," he replied, quickly.

"But it's the right way. Now I want you to tell me what to do. People have transacted business with father and he failed to get the approval of the court. I am not sure that it was his fault—it must have been Mr. Balcomb's way of doing it. I don't make no difference and father takes all the blame. Now, a little given to this way is not right—that what you say?"

"We are usually that titles are good or bad—and he smiled at her.

"That more must be a way of making this good."

"Yes; I think a several ways. That is for a lawyer. You are the only person I can trust and I advance to the conclusion of that sort, I suppose."

"That is what I wish to know. And it wouldn't be very much trouble to make it right."

"We must ask a lawyer. Morris understands about it. He is considered a good man in the profession. The address of Morris is Morris, Morris and Morris, 1 Pine Street. Morris is a friend and knows Balcomb.

"I had rather I might ask Mr. Leighton to help us."

Hodney looked at her quickly. Enfa Dameron, Zelda his daughter, and Mr. Leighton. The combination suggested unhappy thoughts.

"Morris is coming up this morning. He said it, and he's usually on time. That's one of the good things about Morris. He keeps his appointments!"

"Leighton is a good, Uncle Hodney. I'm going to ask you something. It may seem little queer, but everything in the world is a little queer. Did you ever know—was there anything—it was the sob again and she frowned hard in an effort to keep back the tears—"I mean about mother—and Mr Leighton's father?"

The blood mounted again to the old man's cheek, and he bent toward her sharply.

"Did he throw that at you? Did Zeta Dameron, after all your mother suffered from him, insult you with that?"

"Please don't! Please don't!" and she thrust a hand toward him appealingly. "I used to see the word part in Mr. Leighton, how long will it take?"

Morris looked at Morrison as though for his approval.

"Uncle Jerson, of course, Mr. Leighton. You needn't ask him!"—and the two men laughed. There was no malice in the situation; "angle when the person chiefly concerned refused to have it so. He had accepted the loss of the bulk of her fortune and the fact of her father's gentlemanly without a quarter. Rich seemed indeed, to be in excellent spirits, and commonplaced her closer to his side.

"Off this is fine—" began Morris.

"Of course it's final," said Zee.

"I'll come back here at 4 o'clock and you can sign the power of attorney if you wish. But there's one thing I'm going to do—on my own responsibility, if necessary. I'm going to get back that option on the creek strip that Mr. Dameron gave my friend Balcomb. Balcomb is a bad man, and I'm not disposed to show him any mercy.

"I'd rather you didn't—if my father pledged himself to sell—"

"Let Morris do it his way," begged Merriam. "You may be sure Balcomb won't lose anything."

"I'm afraid he won't," said Leighton, and left them.

SPEED OF A TELEGRAM.

The difficulties of sending a telegraph message from Honolulu were illustrated the other day by Antonio Scarfoglio in "Round the World in a Motor-Car." Upon asking the telegraph operator at Foxrankichya to receive his message, the official announced gravely that he could not accept a cipher message unless assured that the boy was deposed in St. Petersburg. Signor Scarfoglio assured him that the message was not in cipher, but in Italian.

"Italian? Italian? First of all, what is Italian?" questioned the operator.

"Italian, my worthy sir, is a very beautiful language which is spoken in Italy, a country which enjoys a constitutional monarchy, a liberal government, an army, navy, macaroni!"

"Ah, yes, macaroni. I remember the country of macaroni."

"So now you can transmit the message at once, so that it shall arrive at Torino at once."

"Did you say Torino?" he asks.

"Torino, Torino!"

He began to look through a book, chanting, "Torino, Torino, Torino. Here it is, Torino, in Texas, United States of America. Why did you want to talk about Italy?"

"But it is not Texas; it is Torino in Italy." Then I ventured, "They mean vermuth there."

"Ah, I understand now; but it is pronounce the names of towns in Italy I beauty can understand you. It is Turin, Turin, not Torino.

"What is the cost?"

"But why do you want to pay me? You must understand that your telegram cannot go."

"Why not?"

"Ah, my dear sir," he resumed, "you had allowed me to speak, I should have told you from the first that I cannot telegraph in Latin characters for the simple reason that I do not understand them."

"But there is a tablet hung up here saying that the office accepts telegrams written in Latin characters."

"That is very true, but it only accepts them in Latin characters. I understand them not."

"Now for the story which should interest every one for we are all other Italians, or we are the friends of Italians and the freedom of each individual is at stake.

"Interest in Labor Sunday.

"Labor Sunday—the Sunday preceding Labor Day—will be observed generally this year and in future years throughout the United States. This is because of the American Federation of Labor asking for the observance of that day. The numerous letters and telegrams received at American Federation of Labor headquarters from affiliated bodies indicate that interest in the idea of giving special attention to a special day in honor of the pulpit one day in the twelve months is widespread. The readers are urged to try to bring about an unanimity of their reasonable districts with representatives of the church so that ministers will deliver addresses that may attract trade unionists to the church on the Sunday for the day. Ministers should say what they think on the occasion in order that their trade union hearers may put the right construction on the attitude of the church stands on the question of the rights of labor. A LECTURE

—ON—

Christian Science

Its Mode of Operation

BY BLISS KNAPP, C. S. B.

Member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship of the First Church of Christ Scientist, Boston, Mass.

Following is the introduction by Mayor Hampton:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

When I was asked by the committee of the local Christian Science Church organization to preside at this meeting, I demurred, on the ground that it would be more fitting for a member of the church, one who was of the faith, to officiate. But when I was informed that it was customary, and preferable, for one not of the church, to preside, I gladly consented. For I believe that it is the duty of all good citizens, and especially public officials, to assist and encourage in every possible manner myself and all organizations, sectarian and non-sectarian, religious and non-religious, that are engaged in making this old world better and I believe that the Christian Science Church is making better and happier men and women of thousands of our people, and doing much to make this a better world for all of us to live in.

I am not a member of the Christian Science Church. But I have seen some of the good they have accomplished, some of the men made better through their membership in this society, and I am glad to say the good word for the good I know it has done. For I believe most firmly in the doctrine expressed in these lines:

When, over the fair fame of friend or foe,
The shadow of disaster shall fall, instead
Of words of blame, and proof of thine and woe,
Let something good be said.
Forget not that no fellow living, yet
Fell so low but love could lift his head.
Even the cheek of shame with tears is wet.
"If something good, be said.
No generous heart may validly turn aside,
In pride of sympathy. No man is dead,
But may awaken, strong and glorified,
If something good be said.
And so, I charge ye, by the thorny crown
And by the cross on which the Saviour bled,
And by your own soul's hope of fair renown,
Let something good be said.

It would seem to me, that this doctrine of saying something good, should be part of the Christian Science creed, for I have noticed that members of the church seem to be looking always for the best in others, for the good in life. They are optimists. And if there is anything we need more of in this world, it is people blessed with the optimism which helps us over the hard places, which sees the silver lining to every cloud, and helps our neighbors to see that silver lining.

But we are here to listen to an exposition of the Christian Science faith, and the lips of one well qualified in every way to speak upon this subject, one who is a member of the affiliated organization of the First Church of Christ Scientist of Boston, I have the pleasure of introducing Mr. Bliss Knapp.

Before speaking definitely on the subject of Christian Science, it may be well for us to recognize that all the great religious systems of the world, that tradition and usage have handed down to us, are the claimants to a revealed truth. Pure religion is revealed truth; but whatever may be the nature of their revelations, that which claims to be the demonstrable revelation of Christ Jesus from them all is its power to give health and strength "I am come," said Jesus, "that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." That is, the abundant vitality of Christian truth gives life. For this reason the educated classes of today are coming to realize that adopting such religious beliefs as Buddhism, Shintoism and so forth, are not so much religions as they are philosophies, because they lack this life-giving element that characterizes Christianity. It is therefore, this life-giving element that lifts Christianity above the plane of a mere philosophy into a living religion. It is this life-giving element that enabled the Master to heal the sick and raise the dead through prayer of understanding, even to the raising of himself from the tomb in what is known as the resurrection.

It is this life-giving element in Christianity that Christian Science interprets. It does not claim to amend the Bible, but it does emphasize its spiritual meaning, and seeks to interpret rather than to proclaim a creed altogether new. It is therefore a system of spiritual teaching that improves the health and morals of humanity. Every Christian believes that spiritual teaching should improve the morals of men, but we have come to recognize in Christian Science that there same spiritual teachings, in their larger more scientific understanding, will so purify the minds of men as to heal them of physical disease.

Such a system of spiritual teaching that can bring surcease from pain and sorrow must be truly Christian. Indeed every sincere Christian has sought in prayer for that same Christ-spirit to help the sinner and heal the sick. Christian Science declares, moreover, that this Christ-spirit acts in obedience to the laws of God, and not the laws of man. In other words, it operates in obedience to divine law with such precision and accuracy that it may be understood and demonstrated as did the primitive Christians. Two things therefore, we must understand,—the vitality of Christian truth, and its law of operation. The one is Christian, the other must be scientific; and whoever understands both must be not only a Christian but a Christian Scientist.

Footsteps in Spiritual Discovery

It is for us to lay hold of this divine law and learn how it operates. Since it is an eternal law of Truth, this healing power was not for a particular time or period, but must be an eternal truth that is ever operative, and needs only to be rediscovered and understood to bring a return of primitive Christian healing. Let us then turn to the prophets and apostles to learn how they came to understand for themselves this healing power of God, that we may emulate their good works. The first thing discovered was not the law but the Christ spirit, but the divine power. The first of the old patriarchs was reared in the midst of idolatrous worship. Everybody believed in worshipping some idol fashioned by man's device. They believed in as many differing powers as there were idols until Abraham, the first man ever called a Hebrew, recognized for the first time one supreme intelligence or power governing the universe and man. This was to him a mighty power, which was revealed to him as the Almighty; and from that time, God has been known to men as the Almighty. He therefore established a perpetual covenant with Abraham to "walk before God and be thou perfect." Not discerning its law of operation, Abraham employed this covenant to no definite purpose, except that it gave him so bright a promise and so firm a faith as to destroy some of the bondage of material imperfections. This seed of faith in the Almighty continued until the covenant was renewed through the law, when God gave to Moses the ten commandments.

Moses began to recognize that this divine power as operative through law is not confined to holy places or special occasions, but is everywhere present and ever available for man's use. He began to recognize, moreover, that this power as operative through law has a healing and saving effect. By means of this power, and guided by its law, Moses healed serpent bites and leprosy, brought deliverance from the plagues, from the Red Sea, and from the terrors of the wilderness, until his reliability and truth were absolutely established. Therefore the Scriptures have added to Abraham's recognition of God as the Almighty, the Mosaic declaration that He is "a God of truth;" and the psalmist adds, "Thy law is the truth." Nevertheless, when these people had the law, and were delivered by the law, they was yet one thing needful, because they were continually breaking the covenant. They expected a final revelation that would make all things perfect, and to this end they were continually looking for Immanuel or "God with us."

The Jews have continued to look for Immanuel to this day, because they needed a final revelation, and expected one. This final interpretation was to bring the very presence of God to their understanding; and when Christ Jesus took up the thread of this progressive revelation and carried it on to completion, an unbroken highway to the Father's throne was established on earth, and also a new covenant.

"Be Old Testament might lead one to believe that God is an angry God, visiting all manner of affliction upon His people for their purification. This would lead them to fear God and keep His commandments, but whenever they transgressed more less fearful the laws were broken. Now, instead of afflicting the people with disease, the New Testament teaches that God heals them of those very diseases. This brings out a more loving sense of God. Spiritual affection has displaced fear. They are led to obey not only in the letter but in the spirit. They have added to their righteousness brotherly kindness. This is the result of the new covenant, by which God put His laws into their minds, and wrote them in their hearts, thereby uniting justice and affection in the gospel of Love.

The Scriptures imply that what the Israelites lacked was the Christ law teaching that "God is love," for suppose they did understand the fact of the divine power, and suppose they understood the further fact of how this power operates through law, even though they might understand all that the beloved disciple has said, "he that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." Moreover Paul declared that "love is the fulfilling of the law;" and must therefore fulfill the promises made to Abraham. Thus we learn that divine Love is the benign presence that heals the sick, reforms the sinner, and fulfills the law. It is this understanding of God as Divine Love that enables the Christian Scientist to heal the sick to-day.

Scientific Discovery

I have briefly outlined this idea of divine law, fulfilled in Love, by way of anticipating that frequent query, Is Christian Science a science? Is neither Christian nor scientific. What does it mean to have a science. You well know that a science implies classified understanding; it requires a law which must be present in its unity, order and system. This is precisely what Christian Science does. It presents this divine law in its unity, order and system with such precision and accuracy that Christian healing prevails by way of proof. It is therefore eminently scientific; moreover it is Christian because this law is not physical but divine, compassionate and helpful.

Everyone would enjoy to have the power for good that Jesus had; everyone would be glad to understand the divine law well enough to heal and reform men as did the primitive Christians, and when one does understand this law in its spiritual sense, he is indeed a Christian Scientist as truly as one who understands the mathematical law is a mathematical scientist. The ability to do the works of Jesus was lost through the obscurity and confusion of the dark ages, for this text to them that loving kindness as necessary to righteousness, and no further discovery of all that had gone before, including the works of healing. You remember that before Jesus went away, he promised to send us a further Comforter, who should guide into all truth; and this Comforter must necessarily bring a return of primitive Christian healing. When Mrs. Eddy rediscovered this Christian healing, she subsequently discovered its law of operation or Science, and called it Christian Science. Together with this discovery of its Science, she recognized that law must have a principle, and therefore Science declares that God is Divine Principle. This Christ-healing from Principle is indeed the "Spirit of truth" or Comforter, which opens the way to all Truth by revealing the practical Science of Christian healing, so that all may follow in the way of Christ Jesus. These successive stages of spiritual discovery have linked the ages into one progressive revelation of Truth until its spirit and power are now understood scientifically.

Spiritual Activity

When a man is suffering a burden of disease, he wants to know directly how this law operates to meet his particular need—how it is that he may have the assurance that God is indeed "a very present help in trouble." Now a student never prays to have his problem in mathematics work itself out, for it is would do away with the spirit of understanding. He has the problem and also the rule, but there must be a mental activity on his part. Moreover this mental activity must be guided, not by a mere belief or desire which would lead him into error, but this mental activity must be guided by the mathematical rule, and to that degree the correct solution is inevitable. In Christian science we have divine law. We also have these problems of sin and disease. Then we, too, must possess a mental activity which must be guided, not by a mere whim or supplicatory desire that might lead one into error; for this mental activity must be guided by the divine law, that is scientifically, and to that degree Christian healing is absolutely inevitable. Man's harmony is due as much to ignorance of the law as to wilful disobedience in sing of omission as well as sins of commission. He must first understand the law then obey it. When then is this obedient mind? It is not the human intellect, nor the carnal mind, but the eternal energy of man's spiritual consciousness. If man were as truly obedient to divine law as is manifested by the rythmic movements of the planetary system, he would be as harmonious and well in that obedience. Obedience is therefore an essential to true manhood—obedience to what is already true before God,—for this is to be spiritually minded.

The prophet Zachariah voiced this Christian idea when he said, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord." For "the lame cometh," said Jesus, "and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth." What then does this mean? Surely it must mean that they shall worship in understanding and not in man made doctrines or beliefs; for they "shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth." Truth is always spiritual sense, by which we worship God, is guided by the divine law—that is, scientifically—healing healing is inevitable. It is truly significant that Jesus opened his mission with Isaiah's prophecy, saying, "The spirit of the Lord is upon me." From that moment he began to above those notorious throughout the destruction of sin and disease. He healed the sick, cleansed the lepers, raised the dead, and cast out devils. Moreover he declared (according to the Revised Version) that "God is Spirit."

God is Principle

It is therefore evident to you that Christian Science presents no new God, but you have observed that the "Spirit of truth" or Comforter, which opens the way to all Truth by revealing the practical Science of Christian healing, so that all may follow in the way of Christ Jesus. These successive stages of spiritual discovery have linked the ages into one progressive revelation of Truth until its spirit and power are now understood scientifically.

Spiritual Activity

When a man is suffering a burden of disease, he wants to know directly how this law operates to meet his particular need—how it is that he may have the assurance that God is indeed "a very present help in trouble." Now a student never prays to have his problem in mathematics work itself out, for it is would do away with the spirit of understanding. He has the problem and also the rule, but there must be a mental activity on his part. Moreover this mental activity must be guided, not by a mere belief or desire which would lead him into error, but this mental activity must be guided by the mathematical rule, and to that degree the correct solution is inevitable. In Christian science we have divine law. We also have these problems of sin and disease. Then we, too, must possess a mental activity which must be guided, not by a mere whim or supplicatory desire that might lead one into error; for this mental activity must be guided by the divine law, that is scientifically, and to that degree Christian healing is absolutely inevitable. Man's harmony is due as much to ignorance of the law as to wilful disobedience in sing of omission as well as sins of commission. He must first understand the law then obey it. When then is this obedient mind? It is not the human intellect, nor the carnal mind, but the eternal energy of man's spiritual consciousness. If man were as truly obedient to divine law as is manifested by the rythmic movements of the planetary system, he would be as harmonious and well in that obedience. Obedience is therefore an essential to true manhood—obedience to what is already true before God,—for this is to be spiritually minded.

Method in Jesus' Teaching

Recognizing how essential it is, at some time, for all to claim their God-given right to be free, it may be interesting to observe the method by which Jesus taught this healing power to his disciples. Not gifted in learning, these disciples manifested no average intelligence and a certain familiarity with the Mosaic law. Doubtless they were as familiar with the Old Testament writings as the average individual of to-day. However, we may read in Luke's Gospel how that Jesus reproved them for their unbelief. "Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures." Then one might be thoroughly familiar with the Scripture lessons, and in his unbelief fail to understand them. For example: When Jesus healed the man with the withered hand all that he said was, "Stretch forth thine hand." It was restored whole like as the other." We all are familiar with those words, but suppose these same words were repeated to-day to one suffering from a withered hand would the mere repetition of these words heal him? It must be evident to you that not the words, but the spiritual understanding of the Master healed the sick. Why one might attempt to memorize the whole Bible from Genesis to Revelation, and be unable to heal a single disease, for it is the spiritual understanding that needs to be opened. "The letter killeth," says the Scripture, "but the spirit giveth life."

To present this spiritual understanding, it was necessary for Jesus to begin on their plane of thought where they could grasp the meaning of his teachings. He began with parables, and "without a parable spake he unto them." A little later he said, "I shall no more speak unto you in proverbs, but I shall show you plainly of the Father." That is, he could then teach them spiritual truths in spiritual terms and they would understand spiritually. From that time their healing was even more remarkable than before in proof of their positive understanding of spiritual law.

Disease Mental

When one turns to God for comfort or consolation it is commonly through prayer. Christians are taught to pray for deliverance from sickness and from sin. They continue their preaching against sin, but the Christian healing of sickness is apparently apathetic from unbelief The reason may be in the physical appearance of sickness, for if sickness were known to be as mental as sin, no longer would the mere mental prayer could control both. If disease were purely physical and could be reached only by physical or material means, there could be no such thing as Christian healing. One of the strongest arguments against the of Christian Science, and one which physicians are now admitting to be true, is the mental nature of disease.

We should look beyond the physical effects to their mental cause just as we would do, for when he withdrew his hand from his bosom white with leprosy he spoke to the mental nature of disease. Aaste tested his hand, turned his hand to his bosom, in obedience to the word of God, and withdrew it free from that dread disease, he learned of its mental cure, and that he was to be healed by obedience to the word of God.

It follows therefore that Christian prayer should be just as efficacious in healing disease which is mental as in casting out the belief in mental sin.

Even when a dentist administers anesthetics to suspend or divert the thought during the process of an operation, he is proceeding on the assumption that if a man can not think he can not be hurt; for during the time when pain should be suspended or diverted, his flesh and bones can of themselves experience no pain, sensation or mental sentience. Consequently, pain is all in the thinking. It is in the mental mind and not in the material mind. It follows therefore that even surgery may prove indirectly the mental nature of disease.

Various experiments are now being employed by our leading medical schools to prove the mental nature of disease, but all these experiments have nothing to do with Christian Science. They merely indicate what physicians themselves are coming to recognize concerning the mental nature of disease. From this they have reasoned logically that, to doctor physical effects, without removing the mental cause by the power of the divine Mind, removes both cause and effect. There have been taught to accomplish this same end by various mental methods, including human will power. Christian healing is not of this two types of mind. "To be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." Then how shall we distinguish between the carnal and the spiritual, "By their fruits ye shall know them." Some of the fruits of the carnal mind are envy, jealousy, greed, ingratitude, revenge and so forth, which lead to sin and death; but the fruits of the spirit are honesty, goodness, generosity, justice, loving kindness and so forth which make for life and ience. Then ask yourselves, which mind is governing you? Is it the carnal mind; with its rain of fear, pain and disease? or is it the spiritual mind; the same spiritual mind which demonstrates the divine law in health, peace and loving kindness? Just ask yourselves which mind is it that is governing you, the carnal or the spiritual?

Human Mind not Regenerative.

The observation that disease is mental has aroused the frequent remark: "Well, if pain is all in the thinking, just think you are well and you will be so." Now the same ignorant belief that causes disease can never cure it; for, if thinking pain is well is all that is necessary, and it could be so arranged at twelve o'clock to-night to have everybody think they are well, then all the pain and suffering of the world might be wiped out in a single night. But the least masterful logic of material philosophy can never convince a suffering man that his pain is not real, for the same mind that produces disease can never destroy it. Only the spiritual Mind as taught by Christ Jesus can uncover sin and disease and destroy them, and that the Mind which was in Christ Jesus has stood forth in bold relief throughout the Christian era as the pancea for the world's ills. Therefore "let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."

Christian Scientists do not go to the sick bed with the heartiest assertion, "Nothing ails you." Jesus said compassion for those who were bound. He never healed a man by ignoring his difficulties, but by recognizing in that bondage a problem which needed to be solved in obedience to divine law, and not from ignorant belief, for the spiritual understanding of this law exposes the illegalness of evil and dissolves it like dew before the sun.

Jesus Eschewed Human Will.

It is well to know that the supposed cause of disease obtains in the mental mind and that the understanding of the divine Mind will cure it; but human nature always finds somebody who wants to climb up by some other way. Such people hold that the spiritual Mind is for only our women and children, but for the man with a belief in personal magnetism the exercise of human will seems more manly. This materialistic belief in human will has been relied upon as a ready method of competing with Christian Science in casting out disease by a mental process. Various sinners have been used to designate these efforts as hypnotic therapeutics, psychotherapeutics or Christian psychology. They are admitted to be the opinion of the human will as carnal mind and may be operated by a wicked man, an infidel or a pagan and therefore must be the polar opposites of the Mind of Christ, for "the carnal mind is enmity against God."

Human will is an annual property which tries to dominate everything and seeks to exploit itself as some great thing, but if "the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness." This blind belief in animal will would commit murder and all manner of evil to satisfy its own desires. Its chief characteristics are lust and selfishness. As an educated system, its more hidden use is exploited in hypnotism and mesmerism, which are sportingly defined as animal magnetism called human will is the pancea for the world's ills?

Christian Science completely eschewed any use of the carnal will, well knowing that it possesses none of the joy and strength of divine love which regenerates both mind and body. Jesus said he understands the powerlessness of human will, for he said, "I can of mine own self do nothing," because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me. If I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true."

Paul declared that the unrighteous mammon rebuments the truth of God and is a lie and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator. Therefore the basis of all evil, sin, duality and disease is a lie, without mind intelligence or power. Therefore only all of this animal will and therapeutic suggestion is an abject God or Truth. This carnal mind being a lie, no one can ever obtain a lie at something; for "who can understand his errors," asked the psalmist? Truth and the world cannot always be understood, and the understanding of Truth casts out error as a few lashes the sun. We are learning in Christian Science to recover our divine inheritance of dominion over all the sickness and sin and in consequence we are learning to experience more of the joy of that Blessed Freedom from error by the understanding of Truth.

Mrs. Eddy's Discovery.

Before Mrs. Eddy discovered Christian Science, she had been searching for years along this line of mental causation. She had been studying homeopathy and learned the mental nature of disease, and that the higher attenuations of medicine which contained the least of the drug and the most mind was were the most potent and she conducted her investigations beyond homeopathy to a mental standpoint, with the question ever in her mind, whether matter of Mind heals the sick.

In her subsequent investigations she found that the effect of religion upon the animal will or magnetic healing was absolutely opposed to her own Christian ideal of healing as practiced by the inspired Christians, and she turned from it. She discussed it especially in regard to the claim that it is supposed to supercede. Surely God was ever then guiding her up to the right understanding of the divine Mind will cure it; but human nature always finds somebody who wants to climb up by some other way. Such people hold that the spiritual Mind is for only our women and children, but for the man with a belief in personal magnetism the exercise of human will seems more manly. This materialistic belief in human will has been relied upon as a ready method of competing with Christian Science in casting out disease by a mental process. THE DANGEROUS HOUSE FLY.

The city department of public health gives a timely and needed warning to those leaving the city for their vacations to avoid places where there are many flies. To this end, follow this advice will avoid places which are necessary, which allow food and garbage to be so exposed as to attract and feed the flies, says the Philadelphia Press. They will avoid places where stables and dwellings are in near vicinity, as the exposed manure is the choice breeding place of thousands and even millions of flies. In other words, to avoid disease-carrying flies avoid places where they permit flies to breed and feed. Formerly the conditions which multiply flies and the flies themselves were considered objectionable but endurable. Now the patient action of flies is known to be a heedless trifling with the health and life of human beings. Diseases germs are for the most part innocuous to man, until through some convenient medium they are conveyed to his system. This purveyor of disease is the fly. His guilt has been proved to a demonstration. Into countless fly-specimens of his feet from foul and putrescent sources he has been traced; disease has been recorded by potatoin plates on which he had been made to alight and have proven his guilt.

The raisin growers of Fresno county, California, are trying to promote the consumption of raisins by establishing "raisin days" on which all hotels who believe in patronizing home enterprise and consuming home productions are expected to indulge in raisin cakes and puddings, raisin bread, etc. The boys and girls will fall in line for such a raisin day, and the great consumers of raisins, it would seem to be good policy to awaken the enthusiasm of young eaters. Parents are now busy striving to get enough of things made sweet by this raisins, which would be adopted generally if they could be made to take the place of candy, cake and other products. Moreover, it is suspected that if all were to do so the raisin growers desire there would be a boom in the price as a result of the boom in the demand.

Inspector Dew Testifies Doctor Contemplated Self Destruction on Trip Across Ocean—Neither of Accused Plead to Charge.

London, Eng.—In the flow street police court Monday Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, the American dentist, and Miss Ethel Clare Leneve, his typist, were formally charged with the murder of Belle Elmore, the wife of Crippen. The proceedings were before Magistrate Marsham.

The woman was charged also with harboring and maintaining Crippen after the crime and while knowing that he committed it.

Inspector Dew, who brought the prisoners back from Canada, introduced evidence to show that Crippen contemplated suicide while at sea following his flight from this country. Crippen was quoted as declaring that his companion knew nothing of the trouble in which he was involved.

The fact that both were accused of the murder of the actress-wife of the doctor leads to the supposition that the mutilated body has been identified to the satisfaction of the authorities. It also suggests that the police believe they have further evidence concerning the Leneve woman's connection with the tragedy than they have made known.

Dew closed his testimony by repeating a conversation with Crippen when the latter was exercising on the deck of the steamer Megantic on the return to Liverpool August 24. Crippen said: "I want to ask a favor of you, but I will leave it until Friday." That day was the day preceding the arrival of the vessel at Liverpool. The inspector replied: "As well now as Friday." Crippen then said:

"When you took me off the ship at Quebec I did not see Miss Leneve. I do not know how things will go. Depending on my aid right; they may go all wrong. I may never see her again and I want to say one word to her. I won't speak to her. she has been my only comfort for the last three years." Crippen was allowed to see his companion in trouble.

After the introduction of evidence against the accused persons they were remanded until September 6. Other havirs pleaded.

DEATH THREAT IN I. C. CASE

Director of Ostermann Company Testifies to Intimidation to Prevent Car Fraud Narrative.

Chicago.—Hearing of the case against Frank E. Harriman, Charles L. Ewing and John M. Taylor, former Illinois Central officials charged with defrauding the company through car repairs, was resumed in Judge Brentano's court Monday.

Theodore Heinker, formerly a director of the Ostermann Manufacturing company, the first witness, testified that Henry C. Ostermann, president of the Ostermann company, had threatened to kill him if he (Heinker) told the story of the defrauding of the Illinois Central out of $1,000,000 through car repairs.

Heinker told of Ostermann's alleged attack upon him in the office of the company when he threatened to disclose the gigantic steal.

Thefts of valuable records, contracts, letters, reports and other proofs of frauds, together with copies of important documents, came to light in the graft was so great that it is thought $50,000 for repair a swindle.

Documents containing evidence against the new indictments in the fraud disappeared from the Illinois Central offices two months ago almost simultaneously with the discharge of an employee in the railroad's secret service department.

Nev. F. G. Hingley, an evangelist, who preaches in the women's quarters of the jail, testified that he had a conversation over in Marty Nelson, Jr., chief counsel for the Illinois Central, Monday.

"My boys, Paul, eleven years old, and Cecil, nine years old, found the papers floating in the river," said the evangelist.

RENEW RIOTING AT COLUMBUS

MOB OF 2,000 BATTLE WITH POLICE AND MILITIA.

Deputy Sheriff Probably Fatally Wounded, Four Other Persons Hurt—Fifty Rioters Arrested.

Columbus, O. — A mob of 2,000 people battled with the police and militia Monday night when street car rioting broke out with fresh fury.

Struck down by the clubs of policemen, four were seriously injured, among a deputy sheriff, mistaken for a rioter, may die. A chauffeur for a police automobile was struck unconscious with a brick. Four rioters were arrested and locked in the city prison.

The rioting started with the wrecking of a Leonard avenue car by dynamite at East Twentieth street. Following the explosion a large mob gathered about the car and assaulted the motorman crew with a volley of bricks and stones. Though the car had been thrown from the track, the windows shattered and the floor splintered, neither the motorman or conductor were injured. They stuck to the car amid the shower of missiles until Chief Carter arrived with an automobile load of police.

TAFT PLEADS FOR HARMONY

In Campaign Letter He Applauds Work of Congress and Tells Plan of Filing Tariff.

New York.—President Taft's keynote letter addressed to William H. McKinley of Illinois, chairman of the Republican congressional committee, and was given out by the New York headquarters of the committee.

In it the president defends the Payne tariff law, but acknowledges that there are parts of it which may be improved by change.

His plan for getting at the inequalities of the law is investigation by the tariff commission, and then revision by individual schedules. He thinks that by this means the statute may be adjusted properly without causing uneasiness in the business world.

"It seems to me," says Mr. Taft, "that all Republicans—conservative, progressive and radical—may well unite in the attempt to revise the tariff until evidence now being accumulated shall justify changes in the rates."

The letter is a straight from the shoulder defense of his administration and of the congress that aided him in the passage of the laws recently passed. These are termed the most progressive legislation in history.

Mr. Taft pleads for harmony in the Republican party and urges all factions to sink their differences and get together for defense against the common enemy. If this is not done, he says, the only alternative is Democratic success in the congressional campaign this fall, and he points to the difficulties which would be attendant upon an administration handicapped by an opposing legislative branch in its efforts to further redeem the pledges of the platform.

The president admits there are other promises to keep, but at the same time he asserts that the party has gone far for good under his guidance. He outlines the concessions which have been practiced during his administration in his connection declares that the present tariff, in contrast to its other enemies, has reduced far below those of the other two tariffs because of numerous stops for repairs and gasoline.

In addition to the numerous unexpected obstacles that were met in full view of the great throng of motor fans, demanding cool handling of rare and quick work on the part of the pilots, Livingstone was menaced by a danger of which none saw his mechanician and himself alone. He saw a crack in one place in a machine which carried two big cracks in its frame.

Only four machines were left before the judges stand the required number of times. All of the others, except two—either machines or men—were with accident from their lines out of the running before the entire distance had been covered.

PERJURY IN BROWNE CASE?

Special Grand Jury Is Ordered by Judge Brentano—Witness Tells of Orgy.

Chicago.—Judge Theodore Brentano Friday ordered a special grand jury impaneled on August 30 to undertake an investigation into charges of wholesale perjury in the Lola Lee O'Neil Browne, accused of giving a bribe for the release of Senator Lorimer.

There are two matters to be investigated, one of which is wholesale perjury by the defense in the Browne trial, and the other matter, said to be an important one, State's Attorney Wayman. Mo not divulge.

MULFORD IS VICTOR

PILOT OF LOZIER DRIVES AT ELGIN MOST SPECTACULAR AUTO RACE.

ONLY FOUR CROSS THE TAPE

Livingstone Is Second, Greiner Thirr—Winner Averages 62.5 Miles an Hour, Comes Close to Vanderbilt Cup Contest Time.

Elgin, Ill.—Ralph Mulford, driving a Lozier car, won the Elgin national trophy in a race of 305.62 miles Saturday at an average speed of 62.5 miles an hour before a crowd of 100,000 people. His driving was of the spectacular kind and when he finished he was cheered for fully five minutes.

Thirty-six times the blond driver circulated the rough course of country roads—a course of eight miles 2,499 feet, or, roughly, eight and one-half miles—with not a single stop.

The remarkable feature of Mulford's run lies in the fact that he approached within three-tenths of a mile the maximum average in the classic Vanderbilt cup event of a year ago. That such a run could be made on country roads, with practically no preparation and for a much greater distance than that of the Vanderbilt cup race, is looked upon by experts as little short of marvelous.

Close behind the victorious Lozier was "Al" Livingstone, driver of a Mercedes. It was announced that he had his achievement was that of one man and one car in two successive races run at more than a mile a minute, in two first of which he won, and, totaling more than 500 miles.

Livingstone's record as second in the goal was 62 miles an hour for the entire run of 305.62 miles.

The third man, another driver of a National, was A. W. Greiner. His average time was 61.5 miles an hour, reduced far below those of the other two winners because of numerous stops for repairs and gasoline.

In addition to the numerous unexpected obstacles that were met in full view of the great throng of motor fans, demanding cool handling of rare and quick work on the part of the pilots, Livingstone was menaced by a danger of which none saw his mechanician and himself alone. He saw a crack in one place in a machine which carried two big cracks in its frame.

Only four machines were left before the judges stand the required number of times. All of the others, except two—either machines or men—were with accident from their lines out of the running before the entire distance had been covered.

BIG CUT IN EXPRESS RATES

Illinois Railroad Commission Demands That Charges Be Reduced and Made Uniform.

Springfield, Ill.—Sweeping reductions in express rates within the state of Illinois were made here Saturday by the Illinois railroad and warehouse commission. Existing tariffs were slashed in from many instances from on small packages the reduction is in excess of 25 per cent.

The promulgation of "express tariff No. 1" by the commission brings to a fight of the state against the express companies to a crisis. The reduction is made effective October 15, and the companies are preparing for a fight. They dispute the authority of the commission to regulate their business within the state and assert that either they will ignore the new tariff schedule or go into court and get an injunction restraining the commission from carrying its order into effect.

In a lengthy statement which the commission made down with its tariff schedule the business methods of the express companies are severely criticized. The existing rates are declared to be unreasonable and unjust as well as discriminatory in character.

Among the reductions which have been made in some states of a flat rate of 25 per cent. the Illinois commission has prepared a complete graduated tariff schedule, based on the weight of packages and on the distance they are carried within the state.

RAIL AGENT SLAYS

GREAT NORTHERN OFFICIAL KILLS MAN WHO SEEKS HIS LIFE.

IS A DISMISSED EMPLOYE

A. G. Ray Fires Fatal Shot at C. P. Weisip After Latter's Five Bullets Had Missed Their Mark.

St. Paul, Minn.—C. P. Weisb, a discharged special agent of the Great Northern Railway company Tuesday, entered the office of Chief Special Agent Al G. Ray and fired five shots at the latter, missing him each time. Ray then shot and killed his assailant.

Weisb was about 45 years old and had been dismissed by Ray about two months ago for shooting a man at Duluth. Since that time Weisb had been expressing vindictive feelings to Ray.

Weisb was Special Officer John Lane of the Great Northern railway at the headquarters building and began to report "suspicious people" to him.

Lane told Weisb to keep quiet, as he would not allow Weisb to create disrespectfully of his superior officer. Whereupon Weisb drew a scarlatinful utterance against Lane, saying he would "fix" Lane also.

Before Ray appeared at his office Weisb waited in and hospitled of Chief Clerk Hess if there was any mail. On being told there was not, he ran for Hess, but said he would return in a day or two. Shortly afterward Ray came in from lunch and returned. As soon as he opened the door he drew a revolver from his pocket and began to fire at Ray. At the fifth shot Ray succeeded in drawing his revolver and fired back and with one shot killed Weisb.

WHITE'S STORY IS DENIED

New Witness in Browne Bribery Trial Contradicts Testimony Given by Accuser.

Chicago.—Charles A. White was recalled to the stand in the Lola O'Neil Browne trial Tuesday in an effort of the defense to lay the foundation for impeachment of his testimony. He was asked one question and was followed immediately by a witness who declared that White's reply was false.

Charles A. Simonson, a consulting engineer, who has been kept under cover by the defense, contradicted the testimony of White.

The one question asked of White when he took the stand was:

"Is it not true that the day you met Browne paid you that you went to the Briggs home and asked him for $50 and received that amount?"

"It is not," White replied.

Simonson testified that in his presence White approached Browne and received a sum of money that to him appeared to be made up of five five-dollar bills. He was positive there were only five bills of small denomination, and he could swear to it.

Frederick Zentner, a salesman, testified that in a conversation he had with White in the harmonic of the Briggs home White said that he "make the Lorimer bunch come across." He also quoted White as saying the same as that given at the first trial, that he told a friend in Muskegon with White and Browne.

W. A. Sterner, assistant manager of the Briggs home, took the stand and corroborated Zentner regarding the talk with Muskegon in the home of the Briggs house.

COL. ROOSEVELT IS ORATOR AT OSAWATOMIE CEREMONY

He Delivers the Chief Address at the Dedication of John Brown Park, Discoursing of the Present Day Struggle for Human Betterment.

Osawatomie, Kan., Aug. 31.—With elaborate ceremony, John Brown park, a tract of 52 acres on the ground where the battle of Osawatomie was fought 44 years ago yesterday, was dedicated today and presented to the state of Kansas. The ceremonies of the affair was the dedicatory address, which was delivered by Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

Preliminary exercises were held yesterday, and the program for the assumed at 10:30 this morning with a concert by the Thirteenth Regiment band, followed by a drill by troops of the Kansas National guard and the regular army. Meanwhile C.J. Roosevelt's train had arrived and all the thousands of people assembled to see and hear the orator.

After dinner all gathered in the new park, where there was a parade by the soldiery, the Grand Army, Woman's Relief corps and civic societies and another band concert. Then, after a special call by the president, Col. and an invocation, the president of the day, Judge Theodore Cora M. Dupuy, formally presented the park to the state on behalf of the Woman's Relief corps, of Kansas, which bought the ground. Governor Stubbs, responded for the people of the state, and then the chairman, J. B. Remington, introduced the distinguished orator of the day, former President Roosevelt.

Oration by Colonel Roosevelt.

Col. Roosevelt stood silent and still, ing until the storm of applause had died out, then began his address.

There have been two great crises in our country, one when the Union was formed, and then again when it was perpetuated. Now we do not fight battles, nor merely the Revolutionary war, but the creation and salvaging of the Union under it. Then, came sixty years during which the debate on the question of slavery was the all-absorbing one in our history, rather than growth within. Then came the time of storm and wide-spread calamity, the time of the period of terrible struggle which finally decided the justification of all that we had done during the preceding period, which marked the second great period of growth and development. In the years that followed the Civil war, the nation, with its second period of growth, was the second period of the Nation's history, and it was during this period that the first set of the second of our great leaders came into prominence. It was the result of the struggle in Kansas that Lincoln came to the position he should be in order to do his work in the world. It was given to him to be President at the critical period when the government was founded, and it was the result of the struggle in Kansas that gave him the chance to do his work. Lincoln stands for the union, and to get for himself the union he was willing to do anything, to endure anything, to suffer anything, to make any sacrifice of himself or of others. He was willing to see his country drenched in blood, rather than see the union split. He was willing to see the country drenched in blood, rather than see the union split. He was willing to see the country drenched in blood, rather than see the union split. He was willing to see the

THE STEEPLE JACK.

He Must Conquer Many Difficulties In His Dangerous Work.

The successful steeple jack must possess determination, perseverance and ingenuity. He must solve many a practical problem in hoisting great bodies aloft. He must know how to throw a hook over the summit of a skyscraping chimney. He must have the nerve to paint a steeple that sways like a pendulum at the slender top. He must be able to tear down, build up, paint, place electric wires and do many another job that would be difficult enough on the solid earth.

There are many ways of getting up on a steeple, and when all others fail the man will tie a rope around it and then, with a coil on his back, walk around and around it, until the entire steeple is covered with rope, and in much case he has probably been round it fully 200 times.

But a steeple is not the most difficult height to climb. Straight, tall chimneys are the hardest of all. There is man who climbed one 500 feet high, using to lift himself inch by inch from the ground to the top. Sometimes the top is 300 feet high. When it is reached a seat is placed over the edge, pulley is made fast, the swinging chair is hauled up and work begins.

When the chair is near the top it is easier to work, because the ropes are short, and when they hoisting as the ground is approached there is a tendency to swing, and the wind gives impetus.

The steeple jack's safety depends upon the hook, and until he has raised himself almost to the top it is impossible for him to see whether or not the hook has been properly adjusted. More than once a steeple climber has seen when within six feet of the top that corrosion of the iron and the collection of soot have so thickened the wall that the hook is merely balancing in the top, so that the slightest pull in the wrong direction would drag it off. Again, the bricks are often loose at the top, and the hook is likely to rent them away.

One of the natural difficulties to conquer is the swaying of all high steeples and chimneys. In a gale a steeple point will sway a foot and a half. Usually it swings from side to side. Before entering it means rebellion for a spot on the right side, and finding it on the left, and, when making a dive for it on the left, to see it sway back to the right. Yet in spite of the constant danger a born steeple jack exults in his work and is at home like the tenderfoot on the skyscraper, only when high above the world. He can stand triumphantly at any height. If he can have two and one-half square inches to bear his weight.—Harper's Weekly.

And He Wasn't.

The Charlevoix County Normal

Some of the last teachers of Charlevoix and adjoining counties are numbered among the alumni of the Charlevoix County Normal.

The County Normal system of Michigan has passed beyond the experimental stage and is doing excellent service for the betterment of rural school conditions.

The inexperienced teacher with County Normal training can go into the rural school with a good deal of confidence and self-possession that otherwise would be impossible.

A one year's course is offered including the study of Psychology, Public School Methods, Elementary Agriculture, Nature Study, Domestic Science, Reviews and Practice Teaching, under the supervision of a critic teacher.

This course thoroughly prepares one to teach in the rural schools and upon its completion the student is granted a certificate valid in the rural schools of the county for a period of three years.

During the year the Normal Class takes excursions in the country, visiting rural schools and getting in touch with rural school problems.

The course in elementary agriculture is made as practical as possible with the aid of Government bulletins, school gardens, and attendance at Grange meetings and farmers institutes.

Students will be admitted to the County Normal if they have completed the work of the tenth grade or its equivalent, or have taught successfully in the rural schools of the county.

Board and room may be had at $3 to $4 per week. Some families of position classes have found it quite satisfactory to board themselves. Some may be able to work for all or part of their board.

Students expecting to attend the Normal are requested to bring any books they may have on the subjects outlined in the course.

The County Normal begins the same time as the Public schools Sept. 19. Any one wishing information may write to Supt. I. M. DEVOE, Charlevoix, Michigan.

Northern Michigan

The storm of last week played havoc with the track of the Pere Marquette Railroad Company. The track this side of Alden was washed out in several places. One washout being 100 feet long and 2 to 10 feet deep, another 60 feet long and 10 to 20 feet deep and another one 35 feet long and 10 to 20 feet deep. All the track between Acme and Traverse City was washed out.

The tern gull, a species that has never before been known in this vicinity, have been seen at East Jay during the last couple of days. Fred Curtis was the first to notice the birds as they appeared flying over the water, and recognized them at once as being the same as he saw in large numbers in Alaska during his stay there. The tern is much smaller than the common gull, but are white in color. Their tail is swallow dipped, similar to the common swallow, only with the indentation much deeper, and have the tip of the tail streaked with white. They have a peculiar habit of flying over the water then capping a fish or some other article of food, to cut their course and dive at right angles into the water, with a big splash. Then they emerge with the fish in their mouth, if success ful in their dive. The tern will fly straight at a fisherman on the water, and Mr. Curtis says that many times they are almost dangerous in their heading, flight forcing a man to raise his arm in defense. They come in flocks and are a migratory bird.

Lambeth (Eng.) "Old" Church has numerous historic monuments, and in one of the windows is the full length figure of a pedler with his pack, staff and dog. —An entertainment for the benefit of the M. E. church will be given by Miss Mae Kirby, of Boston, dramatic reader, assisted by the Charlevoix band and male quartette, at the church, Wednesday evening, September 14th.

—Old Northern was visited Tuesday of the arrival of his brother, Capt. John Nordrum, at Albany, with the Charlevoix gasoline fishing footlin, en route to Gloucester. They went via the Erie canal. They are now probably on their way down the beautiful Hudson river. All were well.

—The trespass case of Judge Mayne vs. the City of Charlevoix, involving the right of the city to trim shade trees, resulted, last week, in a verdict giving complainant six cents damages with costs. The joke of it is that, by mutual consent, two members of the common council were on the jury.

—The sixth semi-annual convention of Rural Letters Carriers of Charlevoix, Antrim and Kalkaska counties was held at Vorlula Hall last Monday and was well attended notwithstanding the stormy weather. President H. A. Brintnall called the assemblage to order and the program opened by the song "America," followed by prayer, invocation, and Postmaster Kenyon gave the address of welcome which was responded to by F. H. Tompkins of Mancelona. "Carriers' Kicks" was the subject assigned to E. McLain of Central Lake and he made some very pertinent kicks on our rural patrons should profit by. Hon. H. S. Earle of Detroit—"Good Roads Earle"—took for his subject, "How to Get Good Roads Cheaper." Mr. Earle devoted part of his talk to the construction of roads and the balance in making suggestions as to plans of getting them at a minimum cost. The next meeting will be held at Central Lake, February 22, 1911.

—The skunk season rapidly approaches. While there is yet no atmospheric disturbance to denote immediate danger, the calendar, always reliable, warns us that the festive pole cat is about now rolling over in his lair with thoughts of the autumn campaign of 1910. Then it is. We no sooner emerge from one soul-harrowing season of turmoil than we are forced into another. But there are abundant means of grace with which to strengthen the soul against the day when wicked language bubbles from the mouth of the sufferer as the water slops over from the water-tower. Be calm, brother; skunk pelts are quoted 75 cents to $2.00.

—Paul Thompson & Co. is the firm which holds benevolent sway on big and little Fox Island, which can be seen from Charlevoix on any clear day. Paul Thompson and our own J. O. Plank comprise the firm, and they were both here over Sunday to buy sheep for the estate. They own 1,000 acres on South Fox and Mr. Planks owns every inch of the north island, which embraces 800 acres. They have a large area of land under cultivation on South Fox, and extensive grass land and pasturage, and they are starting a sheep ranch with two hundred head. They are farming quite extensively and have twenty acres of potatoes. Mr. Plank proposes to make a game preserve of north island, and has already turned several young deer loose there.

—Elk Rapids Progress: The argument is made in local option campaigns that if the saloons are banished from a county business will be seriously injured and the population will be decreased. If the argument is true, then saloons should increase population and improve business. Well, did you ever hear of the Western Michigan Development Bureau or the board of trade of any prohibition city even attempting to induce saloons to locate in their cities or the territory they are working to improve? And yet the only reason for their organization is to induce factories and industries to locate in their midst and they are doing everything possible to improve the business and moral conditions of their municipalities and the counties embraced within their organization; but no man, no matter how radical, ever suggested the offering of a bonus for more saloons to locate, claiming that they will improve business, increase the population or better the morals of the people. But to get to the point: During the ten-year period covered by the late census Antrim county had her full quota of saloons,—10 most of the time,—but they did not increase our population, nor did they even hold it level, for Antrim county's population fell of 872 during the ten years. How do you account for it, and that with plenty of glucerine as an attraction to induce desirable citizens to locate in one of the most fertile and most favored counties in the north? Stand up you grumbling at present conditions and explain this.

The Primary Strategists

The Soo Achates of Chase, S. Osborn in the recent primary campaign was Mr. Knox, editor of the Soo News, at Saint Ignace. Mr. Knox is a full general with four stars. One of the strongest elements of strength in his work was the fact that he knew his man, and knew he was a winner in a fair fight. He knew that mold would not stick to the raiment of his chief because he was mud-proof. Here's hoping that Mr. Knox will retain his masterly grip on the helm until the night of the November election. Knox is a field marshal.

He had able and loyal lieutenants throughout the State, and none more efficient or loyal than Hon. C. A. Palmer, of Manistee, who was at the front leading the 11th congressional district forces. Mr. Palmer did yeoman's service, and may well congratulate himself on results in his field of supervision.

The loyal personal friends of Mr. Osborn throughout the State—and their name is legion—were a power in the contest, because they knew their man.

DISTINGUISHED TESTIMONY.

What Former Governor Pifer Thinks of Charlevoix—Will Hereafter Spend Six Months of the Year in Charlevoix.

Among the distinguished summer residents of Charlevoix and we have several—is former Governor Joseph W. Fifer, of Illinois. Governor Pifer has summered here several years. Two years ago and last year the governor was very badly out of health—indeed, many expressed the opinion last year that his return here was doubtful.

And now appears Joseph W. Fifer, of Illinois, who deposes and says that he was never better in his life, and that he attributes his return to his present vigorous health to the magnificent climate, unrivaled attractions and good people of Charlevoix.

The Governor is enthusiastic in reclaiming the wonderful health-giving attributes of Charlevoix, and says it is his purpose to come early and stay late, pulling in half the year here.

The old veteran—"Private Joe"—walks five or six miles every day, and puts in much of his time in a motor cycoping it, and from all I hear they are making good. One of the newcomers into the district is D. D. Gillies, who used to have a big sheep ranch in Wyoming. He sold his western holdings and bought 1,000 acres at Nelsion or at the lighthridge, and based a lot of more land around there. Then he brought on 1,000 sheep that he had left in Wyoming. He is a sheep farmer in Michigan just as he was on the west, and I understand is having fine success. He has 1,600 or 1,800 sheep and lambs and they seem to be thriving as well as could be hoped for. Mr. Gillies is experimenting with clover and alfalfa, with 50 acres planted to each, and I understand has done very well."

Terrible Marine Disaster

The most spalling marine disaster of the season thus far was the foundering, early last Tuesday morning of the big Pere Marquette car ferry No. 18, off Sheboygan, with a loss of 28 lives, including every officer.

The cause of the disaster is a mystery. She was found to be leaking and settling rapidly by the stern. Several of the 24 cars were run off astern, which raised her bow, but she continued to settle.

Wireless messages were sent out and distress signals displayed, and the No. 17 came to her assistance, lowering her boats, but the big craft suddenly went down stern first. But four people were rescued.

Her commander was Capt. Peter Kilty, a brother of Mrs. M. J. Bonner, of St. James. His body, with several others, were recovered and taken to Ludington. Mrs. Bonner has come over Friday, on her way to that place.

School Attendance and Physical Examination.

The legal age at which children may attend school is placed at six years. Past experience has proven that many children are totally unprepared, both mentally and physically for the work of the first year. Pupils who require two years for the first year's work are discouraged at the start and many of them never make a success of their school life often dropping out before completing even the eighth grade. In view of this, many educators advocate six years as the age at which they may begin regular school work. Many children would be much better if not allowed to attend until the age of seven. If there is a regular kindergarten, they may attend this earlier.

Before starting your child in school consider his physical condition, nervous temperment, and general ability. It would be best to consult the family physician. Talk the matter over with the Superintendent. Remember the child's health and success in the future depend a good deal on the "start" he makes in his first year's schooling. "Well begun is half done," is applicable in this case.

As a general principle would it not be better for you to consider carefully the health of all of your children before beginning of school, no matter at what age, or in what grade they may be in. Consult your physician, have the eyes, ears and throat examined, in that the teeth are in good condition. Good mastication means good digestion. This means a clear head and a cheerful disposition.

If this cannot be done before school, have it looked after as soon as possible. Give your boy or girl a good start for a successful year.

BRINGS SETTLERS

West Michigan Development Bureau Successful, Says Freight Agent.

"The efforts of the West Michigan Development bureau to attract settlers to western and northern Michigan certainly have been effective, although I can give no absolute statistics on the subject," said Fred M. Briggs, general freight agent of the Pere Marquette, yesterday.

"I know we have carried a lot of household effects into this district the past season, representing families moving in. We have also brought some goods of this kind out, but the tugoing freight has been largely in the majority.

"Another evidence of the better settlement of the country is the growing volume of groceries and supplies going in and the increased outward flow of fruit, vegetables and other products. I have no figures on the traffic, but in a general way there has been a marked increase in recent years.

"The settlers moving into western and northern Michigan for the most part are taking new land—land that costs around $10 an acre—and are developing it, and from all I hear they are making good. One of the newcomers into the district is D. D. Gillies, who used to have a big sheep ranch in Wyoming. He sold his western holdings and bought 1,000 acres at Nelsion or at the lighbridge, and based a lot of more land around there. Then he brought on 1,000 sheep that he had left in Wyoming. He is a sheep farmer in Michigan just as he was on the west, and I understand is having fine success. He has 1,600 or 1,800 sheep and lambs and they seem to be thriving as well as could be hoped for. Mr. Gillies is experimenting with clover and alfalfa, with 50 acres planted to each, and I understand has done very well."

THE ROUND UP

The Sentinel's Figures Last Week Substantially—Osborn's Nomination Insures Republican Success in November Election.

Osborn for governor and Townsend for senator carried the state by about the same figures—50,000. There are those who allege that the nominations are a victory for progressive republicanism.

The one big surprise of the election was the fact that Mr. Kelly was the low man on the ticket—Mr. Musselman coming under the wire a neck ahead of the Lieutenant Governor. John Q. Ross was the lieutenant governor by a handsome majority. No one now has any doubt of the result in November. Mr. Osborn's campaign will be vigorous and brilliant, and the ticket will sweep the state. Both defeated candidates for governor accept the result complacently, and harmony is assured.

Mr. Scott, of Alpena, for state senator, made a splendid run, receiving a large majority. Mr. Scott both in ability and personal character measures up to a high standard, and will be an honor to the district.

The county ticket, on which our forces were given last week, is as follows: Representative, W. J. Pearson; Sheriff, Ford Robbins; clerk, D. S. Payton; register, R. A. Emery; treasurer, Richard Lewis; prosecutor, D. H. Fitch; surveyor, Robinson; coroner, A. M. Wiskinson.

There is no need to particularize on the county ticket as it is an excellent one from top to bottom. Every candidate is well known throughout the county. For the republicans it will be a defensive campaign, for every man on the ticket is eminently well qualified, and every one of them will be elected by good majorities.

We have had our shake down in the primaries, now let us gird our loins for the final fray with "Osborn and good government" as our battlecry.

A Splendid Tribute

Grand Rapids Herald: The nomination of Chase S. Osborn of the Soo for Governor rebs Democracy of the slight hope of gubernatorial victory. There can now be no reason why Democracy should not. Hence probably nothing by way of progress and probity in state affairs which Mr. Osborn himself has not already preached up and down the state of Michigan for three busy months. We prophesy that Governor Osborn will give Michigan an administration which will go back so far as the great Austin Blair for any equal in brilliancy and substance. He is a scholar and a traveler, an orator of fascinating eloquence and a writer of extraordinary genius, a business man of experience and large affairs. Withal he possesses the courage, the capacity, and the sterling integrity which property good things for his commonwealth. Governor Osborn will be an unqualified success.

THE REED PLAYER.

By a dim shore, where water darkens
Toss the last light of spring,
I went beyond the twilight darkening
For some diviner thing.

I saw the reeds's shine below the wood,
Above the shallows dank,
As Uriel, from some great altitude,
The planets on rank.

And new unseen along the shrouded mend
One work under the hill,
He blew a cadence on his mellow reed,
That trembled and was still.

It seemed as if a line of amber fire
Had shot the untthered dusk,
As if had blown a wind from ancient Tyre
Laden with myrrh and musk.

He gave his lurking note amid the fern:
His enigmatic call
Hesitated the hollow dusk with golden turn
And argent interval.

I could not know the message that he bore,
Who spring of life from me
Hid in incommensurable tone
Such a mystery.

And, as I followed for the magic player,
He passed the magic wind,
And when I reached the place there lived river
Horse
And there was solitude.

A Gentleman of The Old School

Sir Lemon Cowper resigned out of the French window on to the hotel verandah, looked to the left and to the right; then, emptied his glass and advanced on rather tottery legs toward Sir Ella. He was doubtful, had he could hardly have been less than 60, despite his well preserved figure, his mobile expressive countenance, his keen, bright eyes.

"You have spoken to her?" asked Mrs. Stephany.

He nodded. "Yes."

"What did she say?"

"Nothing."

"Nothing?" Mrs. Stephany's eyebrows climbed her forehead. "Which did she do, then?" she inquired with a sigh.

"Laughed," answered Sir Lemon ruefully. "I had looked for a little tender regret, at least, and — she laughed."

"She is very young," murmured Mrs. Stephany consolingly.

Meanwhile, in a distant part of the hotel gardens, Ella Stephany was cool, she was all sweet, decidedly troublesome.

Presently they sat down and Dick seized on this opportunity to come up and accost them.

"Good evening, Mrs. Stephany," he said in a strained, husky voice, to the apprehensive mother. Ella he ignored pointedly. "Sir Deans, may I have a word with you?"

"It is—ah—very important, Sir. Illavera?" he inquired.

"Very," said Dick.

The old gentleman lifted appealing eyes. "The matter could not, I suppose—ah—wait?" he suggested.

"Not an instant," was the inflexible reply.

"In that case," quavered Sir Deans "if the ladies will pardon my defection—"

Then the two men strolled away.

"No doubt," began Dick tempestuously, "you think me an awful young ass, Sir Deans."

"I—ah—not yet," was the guarded reply.

"You're an old man. I am a young one," Dick went on heedlessly.

"Ah—very young, I should say," said Sir Deans, smiling at him.

Dick gulped down something that seemed to rise in his throat. "In plain English, I'm in love — ⁎ ⁎ ⁎ with Miss Stephany," he announced gruffly.

"With a mutual friend, I trust, I hope, please, I've loved her ever since I first set eyes on her. And I am convinced she needs to believe that—in a woman's way—she—she likes me, too.

"Do you think it fair, sir, with your advantages of wealth and position, to try to cut me out with the girl, when you know you don't really love her yourself? ⁎ ⁎ ⁎ and I do?—I, who is prepared to resign—she can't possibly feel my genuine—"

"Pardon me," interposed Sir Deans, blinking rapidly. "I have no desire to hide your confidence. But surely you must see more than I can see. It is indiscreet to be so much in earnest after dinner! I am not put in a very, as a man of the world, that it would be wiser for us to return to the ladies at once."

"I don't want to be wise; I want to be happy!" Dick announced petulantly. "Sir, give me a chance. Don't dazzle Ella. She is only a child, hardly out of the convent, to act unworthily, to behave in a way that she would be sure to regret—regret very bitterly, maybe, years in the future. I'm not rich, as you are. I cannot make her my wife, as you can. But I—God, how I love her!" And the boy's eyes filled with tears.

"You have spoken to her?" asked Mrs. Stephany.

He nodded. "Yes."

"What did she say?"

"Nothing."

"Nothing?" Mrs. Stephany's eyebrows climbed her forehead. "Which did she do, then?" she inquired with a sigh.

"Laughed," answered Sir Deans ruefully. "I had looked for a little tender regret, at least, and — she laughed."

"She is very young," murmured Mrs. Stephany consolingly.

Meanwhile, in a distant part of the hotel gardens, Ella Stephany was talking with a tall, erect young man, named Richard Haven. "That they were perfectly near the verge of a quarrel was plain from the ugly scowl on the young man's face and from the girl's look of flushed expostulation.

"How can I help it?" she was saying.

"It seems to me," he said morosely, "you might try to make him go. Of course, he's a baronet and rich and all that. And I—"

"You are a most disagreeable boy," she pouted. "And unreasonable, too," she added.

"I'm not disagreeable," he protested, "or unreasonable. I'm hard on that's all. Why, he wears stays! He is old enough to be your grandfather. He doubtless is thinking of the advisability of marriage. Fatuous dotard!"

"He has not really did so at all," said Ella. "And Conway Park is a paradise, simply!"

"Is being the old serpent in it," muttered Dick. He faced her, frowning darkly. "Just I will not stand it, Ella. I will go straight to your mother—she at least likes me—and tell her just how I feel about you. She was young herself once. She—

"It doesn't begin to saying that to her," said Ella. "Don't be cross, Dick. Have I refused him?"

"Not you don't send him away."

"How can I send him away? The hotel is full of people. I'm not so rude as that." she went on, with a sudden distinct recollection of Ella. "I don't see why I should send him away, even if I could. He amuses me. He talks about the world. And he says he has most delightful compliments."

"Ah!"

"That night she flirted shamelessly with Sir Deans.

"There was an open air promenade concert held among the hills, 500 feet above the gleaming lake in the wooded valley far below. The air was hot and still. The moon hung in the hazy sky a lamp of pearl. There were a few torn scraps of silver-edged cloud in the nocturnal blue, wound mistily about the higher peaks. The scented softness of the air, throbbing with poignant strains of music, seemed to weave a spell of enchantment over the scene. Ella's bosom responed to Dick, whom she passed and repassed again and again in the distance, dancing, but she clung to Sir Deans's arm and only vouchsafed a frigid acknowledgment of chilly nods upon her black-browed young lover, whilst to the elderly baronet she was all sweet, suitably tow ardly—a

Waitresses Must Unhappy.

There's the law ordering that no women shall work more than nine hours a day, fifty-four a week, and that no female shall be employed in a place where intoxicating liquor is sold.

Thirty-two waitresses are employed in Compton's "White Kitchen," where a man cannot get a drink stronger than ginger pop if his life depends on it. These fair waitresses are paid by the hour and have been working eighty-four hours a week, earning good wages and receiving many tips also earned by their engaging manners.

Compton posted the new schedule of work hours in the "White Kitchen" the same afternoon rebelled.

"We want our old hours," declared the girls, who are known to their employer by numbers only.

"I would be pleased to accommodate you," said Compton, "but the law says fifty-hours and that is all you can work."

"It's none of the law's business, it we are willing," said No. 23, who was spokesman.

"A pretty law!" sniffed No. 2, who is head waitress and wants everybody to work. "I'd like to serve bath to the fellows who passed it. They would get mighty little bath."

"It's an uplift movement," Compton overhead. "The women had this law passed to benefit you girls. It's like suffrage; some women want to vote but if they gain the suffrage and are compelled to vote, they will protest. Women want to be the law until they have had one."

Another of the new laws makes it illegal to steal a log. Holders, york shops and ham and eggs are very cheap.

A new statute relating to carrying concealed weapons grieves chivalrous Missourians. This law deprives the accused of trial by police and justice of the peace and gives him a trial by jury in a circuit or criminal court. The penalty fixed by the statute is heavier.

Gas Fitters and Sour Milkers Made Unhappy.

All of Missouri's new laws do not work smoothly—to start with, antiquated Blue Laws.

There's the law ordering that no women shall work more than nine hours a day, fifty-four a week, and that no female shall be employed in a place where intoxicating liquor is sold.

DRAINING MISSOURI SWAMPS.

In Southeastern Counties Called "the Little Panama Canal."

It was fifteen years ago that the first drainage and clearing operations in southeast Missouri, and the first ditch dug was in New Madrid County. It being forty feet wide and twenty-nine miles long, the Memphis Commercial Appeal says. This ditch drained the big tahes of water which stood in that county the year round. The next several years but little work was done in this line. However, about eight years ago the work was again started in several of the seven counties, and since that time more than one thousand miles of drainage ditches have been constructed in seven of the counties. The ditches are from twenty to seventy feet in width, ten feet deep and were constructed by means of steam dipper dredges. All this work was done by small county drainage districts at a cost of from $3 to $4 an acre.

Now the most elaborate system of drainage ever undertaken is that just planned by the Little River Drainage District, which will undertake to convert about 500,000 acres of lowlands into the richest and most productive farming section of the state. They estimate an expenditure of nearly $1,000,000 in the work. Within a short time work will be commenced on a diversion channel which will start near the lines of Bollinger and Cape Girardeau counties. It will be nearly fifty miles in length and will divert the six streams flowing into the lowlands and conduct their waters into the Mississippi river about three miles south of the town of Cape Girardeau.

The drainage enterprise of southeast Missouri has reached such a condition that it has quite often been referred to as the "Little Panama Canal." Its successful completion means the opening up of one of the greatest and most productive farming sections of the entire country. The government is also lending valuable assistance toward protecting the country from overflow water. An immense levee is now under way of construction. This levee starts in just south of Cape Girardeau and borders the lowlands on the east, following the river at a varied distance of from one to three miles, passing through the eastern boundary of the big swamp. The right of way, which is covered with large timber, is being cleared and the levee constructors are following closely behind throwing up the dump. This levee will terminate at the foot of the hills in Scott county. The section through which this levee is being built has for many years been the pathway for waters of the Mississippi when it overflowed its banks, and through this channel some half of the lower country is annually covered to a depth of several feet. Several months will elapse yet before the completion of the work will be completed beforeanother spring rise comes.

Ancient Egyptian Invention.

There has been in Egypt a system of hatching eggs by artificial heat from time immemorial. One establishment was constructed of sun-dried bricks, mortar and earth. It was provided with twelve compartments or incubators, each capable of hatching 7,500 eggs, or altogether 90,000 at a time. The season begins in March and lasts until May, and three batches of eggs are hatched in this time, each taking an average of three weeks. The number of eggs treated at this establishment in a single season was 270,000, from which 234,000 chickens are usually obtained. The price of eggs is twopence-halfpenny per dozen, and chickens just hatched are sold at sevenpence-halfpenny per dozen. The number of chickens hatched in this manner yearly throughout Egypt is estimated at 75,000,000, and would, under ordinary circumstances, require 1,400,000 mothers.

BIG CAVES IN LAVA BEDS.

Interesting Discoveries in a Land of Hidden Volcanoes.

The Modoc lava beds in California, near the Klamath County line, long a place of historic as well as scenic interest, have grown more prominent lately from reports of new discoveries, especially as to the caves, of which there are a great many in this region, and among them the ruggedness, by description, says the Klamath Falls Herald and News, of the Dantesque genius.

As one traverses Tule Lake, the southern margin of which rests on the lava field, about forty extinct volcanoes can be counted in the region of the lake. Many of these are washed and worn, covered with shrubs and trees, and others are absolutely bare and seem like lava about they'd just cooled off.

Following the lava flows from these cinder cones are vast crevices and pinkeled ridges of lava and caves of great extent and of various forms. Water has run in this region and wind has spent thirty years as a cowpasture. Water has formed over a few many miles in extent, which he calls the Mammoth cave of California, and steps are being taken to make a thorough exploration of its vast subterranean recesses.

A party of three persons from Klamath Falls has just returned from a four days' outing in the lava beds and reports a most interesting outing in that land of dead volcanoes.

Several new caves were discovered by the party, one of which is some two hundred feet in length, fifty in width and with a vaulted ceiling forty feet above the floor. The most interesting discovery made by the party, however, was of a two-story cave, which is the second one of the kind marvels. A hole was found some ten feet in width in the bottom of a large cave, and upon descending into the cavern on the lower floor and by it the party descended into a subterranean cave of forty feet wide, extending apparently parallel with the upper cave, and both differ materially from the point of density. The corridor is not less than 100 feet in extent and is adorned at the ends by loose material fallen from the roof. No instrumentes was at hand to determine the temperature, but it is cool enough to comfort anything with the desire above ground, and tickles five to six feet in length depend from the ceiling in many places.

Feeding the Soldier.

"That an army travels on its stomach has come to be accepted as the last word in practical military preparation," says Leslie's Weekly. Accordingly, when hitherto the working of the commissariat was a question more of quantity than quality, such views no longer obtain. The dietary scales are now subjected to the most rigid experimental scrutiny. The following statement shows that the soldier on the march is fed neither by much nor too little—the fare meets his needs, no more.

The Japanese dietary scale is the most frugal. It consists of meat, 156 ounces; vegetables, 320 ounces; rice, 5.64 ounces; biscuit, 20 ounces; tea, 0.71 ounces. Great Britain's scale allows in one day: Meat, 14¼ pounds; bread, 14¼ pounds; tea, ⅝ of an ounce; sugar, 2 ounces; salt and pepper, 1.33 ounces; vegetables, ½ pound; rum, ¼ gill. The French soldier on march gets per day: Meat, 8.40 ounces; bread, 35.30 ounces; vegetables, 2.11 ounces; rice, 0.70 ounces; coffee, 0.60 ounces; salt, 0.50 ounces.

PASSING OF WOOD ENGRAVING.

How a Hurry-Up Call for an Illustration Was Formerly Met.

In my young days, writes Harry Fenn in Palette and Bench, I was connected with an illustrated paper. Should there occur a railway accident, a shipwreck or fire, it it was of sufficient importance to be depicted in black and white water-color upon a twopage boxwood block made up of a number of small pieces bolted together.

The engraving is to go to press in the early morning; the drawing is laid on its face and with hammer and cold chisel the big block is knocked into twenty pieces. Twenty men go to work on it, and work the night through—imagine the result.

To-day the design may be in oil or water-color and as big as the side of a house; the camera will reduce it to the required size and the half-tone process will reproduce it.

Time has come in touch with the craft an illustrator needed to be an expert. He had to know how to prepare the smooth hard surface of the boxwood block so that it would have no knots, no pitch, no hard or soft marks clearly.

This was usually done by rubbing a fine piece of pumice stone with plenty of water upon the block, then a preparation of finely powdered bath brick and chalmoe or flake white in a proportion of about one of bath brick to ten of white was rubbed over the surface, the block was held fire palm of the hand and allowed to dry. Then a delicate drawing of India ink or brightness was made upon this prepared surface, the forms incented when dry with bad pencil and chinese white to accent the high lights, etc.

One of my earliest experiences will give an idea of the current change in methods. Take for example the first edition of Whittier's "Snow Bound." All the drawings were made in water-color on boxwood blocks, many of them not more than two inches square containing a dozen figures, all doing their various duties with their hands, so that they should come right when reversed in printing, and hence they could go to press the slow process of wood engraving was the only means of reproduction.

Looked Like a Possum.

"I don't suppose that there are many men left who, in the old days, when I lived in Western Texas, made a business out of the commonest animals of the plains," remarked Col. W. W. Putnam of Kansas City at the Baldwin to a Baltimore American correspondent. "Civilization, no doubt, has caused his disappearance, just as it has extinguished many a species that used to be like the sands of the seashore.

"The armadillo is a funny-looking little creature that looks for all the world like an opossum with a shell on his back. How did he come by that shell which is also a shield or piece of protective armor? In the prettiest way imaginable. According to the old Mexican legend the armadillo was sent by the great maker of the prayers of the devout people who long ago readed, and in a part of Mexico which was badly infested with venomous snakes. The inhabitants so beseeched the Almighty for relief that suddenly all the serpents seemed to have vanished from the earth. In spite of the fact that the region once so badly plagued the natives could find no more possum, big enough for an animal that seemed to be one except that on his back was a shell. This was his armor which brought immunity from the bite of a snake and therefore the armadillo began to make unrelenting warfare on all poisonous reptiles. He is still true to his reputation, and wherever there is on the job of snake killing, as he was centuries ago in old Mexico.

Little Laughs

The Little Boy's Nightmare.

I had a nawful dream last night; I dreamed th' schoolhouse gang I chose rounds' after me an' give a nawful beatin' th' schoolmaster.

An' that it chased me through the lawn an' out across th' crick.

An' then it stopped an' yelled at me; "You think you're mighty skiff, but I'll be comin' after you another day fore long."

An' when I do I think that you will sling another song."

I dreamt the schoolhouse glared at me an' the windows looked like eyes An' that the big doors was a mouth of most tremendous size.

An' that it rolled its window eyes an' showed its big door teeth

An' shook its front-stair chin that waving an' wobbled underneath

An' growled: "All right for you, my boy. But you can't get away.

I'll have you back inside of me fore long you know anyway."

An' all the words in all the world

Jumped out of all the books

An' chased after me with most bloodthirsty looks

All them bad their letters wrong, which made them look real wrong

Th' big five-syllabul ones, too, was scattered far an' near

An' all of them kept clatterin' as long as they could hear

You get to come back to th' school an' learn to spell th' right!

An' then a lot of Indian-Zs come from th' schoolhouse door

Kept a-singin' all th' time about

An' Long Division hobbled up an' joined in th' chorus, too

An' some one kept a-crying: "Can't you find that G. C. D.?"

Th' geography jumped up at me and th' spellin' book hit me

Fly tellin' me to bound th' lands an' th' capitals for Texas.

So I woke up an' pinched myself to see if I was here.

But all th' things that went around an' felt extremely queer,

Th' schoolhouse an' th' schoolhouse an' it looked about th' same.

But somehow I felt mighty mattered, an' I thought it called my name:

An' when I woke I felt th' same, an' I wasn't any Happier at all for thinkin' I'd got to go to school some day.

The Organ-Grinder.

"O mother!" cried Lucy, jumping up from the upper table as the hand-organ in the alley, "My old organ-grinder man and the dear monkey. Have come."

Mother went to the window, and sure enough, there was the organ-grinder man who used to come the summer before, and while mother was looking at him the monkey climbed to the perch. He wore a little blue jacket, red breeches and a tiny red cap.

Mother and Lucy went out on the porch and gave the monkey a piece of bread. He nibbled at it happily enough and then put it down on a handkerchief to bring; then he carefully laid the bread on the handkerchief, folded it in the middle, and after he had finished the cookey he became the most polite little Turk, in a solemn manner, as if to say, "Now I have eaten it myself, but was still thinking of you."

Lucy ran into the house and brought out a handful of cookies, which she gave to the organ-grinder. He stopped right in the middle of a tune to take them, which made the music chase to a group. Then Lucy wanted the money to give to the little Turkish boy but the man said, "No, Monk' work hard all day—he tired," and patted the little monkey kindly; "too tired," repeated the man, and the monkey sprang up on the organ grinder's shoulder, put both arms round his neck, and blinked sleepily from under his cap. The man nodded and smiled and started off.

Then he came to a turn in the road the organ-grinder stopped for a moment, and the monkey sat up, red cap and waved it toward Lucy.—Youth's Companion.

TAKING VACATIONS APART.

Has a Short Separation a Salutary Effect on Married Couples?

"Tim and I always take our holiday next week," said the woman who had been married ten years, according to the New York Sun, "I go down to the Adirondacks to hunt and fish for a month and I'm going to be happy there.

"You're going to spend your vacation in different places from the woman who had been married ten years.

"Tim and I have been talking about vacations and hunting. I think a camp in the woods is the most delightful place for me and the sight of a gun spoils my vacation. I love the seashore; the shore home is the place for me. I can go up what I like and pretend to enjoy things I don't enjoy, or why should I be sacrifice his one good time in the year on the altar of devotion to my husband? Tim and I have been married ten years' wife, "after being away from me for a month I'm appreciative as better."

"I'll wager you don't make him write to you oftener than once a week Tim and I write at least twice a week and dropped in for tea. "No man's idea of a good time is to be tied to his wife a daily letter, except, of course, when he is in the penitentiary.

"When I was a young wife," laughed the white-haired woman, "I went to stay with my mother for a fortnight and got a most affectionate letter from Tom every day. I returned on Saturday and found Tom laid up with a sprained ankle, received in his office. The vacant hall to confess that he wrote the letters the week on Sunday and gave them to his clerk to be mailed as the dates indicate."

"Didn't you feel dreadfully?" asked the two very young wives.

"I cried then, but I've learned now that men aren't to be judged by the rules that the rest of us use. Tom's turned out a good husband," said the white-haired woman with a peaceful smile.

"I tell Ben to write to me just when he feels like it and he does it."

"And are and as a hornet, probably, if he doesn't write every day," chuckled the college graduate. Ever since I've better once each day she was hoping—telegraphed to know what the matter was.

"But I don't see," said the two years' wife to the ten years' wife, "how you and Ben can enjoy your vacation apart. Why, half our fun—Tim's and mine—is being there together. Even if we didn't care for the time, knowing that we're close to like them, because of liking to be with each other."

"Well, if you've been married a long time," said the unmarried nineteen-year-old, "I guess he won't be happy if he isn't with you all the time. Husbands don't like to be with their wives every now and then for a little while on principle. They married people because they like to be together.

"My husband's such a baby he wouldn't know what to do if I didn't never leave him," said the little woman in pink.

The husband gets along beautifully without me," said the big woman in blue. "That's why I never leave him."

"Do you really believe husbands and wives are happier for being separated the time—that they grow to love each other?" asked the engaged girl, wistfully.

"My child," said the spinster in the corner, "you that wear stand the test of constant companionship isn't love. And love that won't stand the test of constant companionship isn't love. And that when two people are rightly matched each enjoys a thing the more for the other's being there and they aren't really content apart."

Hair Trust Is Formed.

The human hair market is constantly rising, a Paris correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger says. The demand for hair is so great that it is just over. That section of France has been noted for centuries for the luxuriant hair of its peasant women and the commission dealers formed a combination and cornered all their sales, making contracts years ahead.

The hair trust has not, in the also to the increasing reluctance of the peasant girls to lose that which is the pride of their sex. The spirit of opposite coquetry has invaded the rural districts and the popularity of the blonde hair has advanced the prices paid for brunette locks.

The small quantity of silver-white hair, however, commanded the highest figure paid at Limoges, one consignment bringing $30 a pound. Ordinary brown and dark hair ranges from $9 to $11 a pound, whereas the same quality brought only $6 five years ago.

"Thank you, mum," responded the grateful English tramp. "Couldn't you make it a sixpenny piece instead of a shilling?"—Washington Star.

EATING IN THE OLD DAYS.

Guests at Banquets Used Their own Knives and Forks.

Even as late as the time of the restoration, in 1666, the London Chronicle says, the guests at banquets used to take their own knives and forks to an English banquet. Pepys records that Charles II. was so worn in the lord mayor's feast in the guildhall, in the previous year, that his own knives and forks had found it necessary to leave behind them, and he was obliged to borrow one of the royal table. They were required to wear clean shirts and ruffles for the occasion, and it was considered a great honor to be invited to dine at

Career of Chase S. Osborn

Chase Salmon Osborn, the republican nominee for governor, was born in Huntington county, Indiana, January 22, 1860. His father was one of the early pioneers of Indiana and a leading abolitionist during the agitation of that question. Mr. Osborn's grandfather, Captain Isaac Osborn, was an early navigator of the Ohio river and was one of the pioneers of the Ohio valley while his great grandfather, John Osborn, was a doctor and chaplain of the Continental army from 1776 to 1783.

Chase Osborn, like many of the men of prominence of this day, began his education in the little red school house, and from the age of 10 to 14 was a pupil in the schools of Lafayette, Ind. He then took a three years course in the Purdue university.

His first business venture was picking up old bones, rags and iron, which he sold to junk dealers. During his vacation while attending school, he learned to set type and he found a job in a newspaper office setting type out of school hours and turning a press at $2 per week, working Saturdays. He also peddled papers and at one time had a monopoly of the sale of Chicago papers in Lafayette. He went to Chicago and began as a reporter on a Chicago daily paper. Later he went to Milwaukee, where, newspaper jobs not being plenty, he went to work as a roustabout in a lumber yard. Later opportunity presented itself and he began his newspaper career, in which he has continued since. His first investment was in a paper at Florence, Wis.

Mr. Osborn's physique, being six feet in his stocking, with the frame of an athlete, has stood him in good stead during the recent campaign, for he has made a most strenuous campaign into the remotest corners of Michigan and his eloquence has been heard at nearly every cross-road in the Wolverine state. He began his campaign some months ago.

He has many times been compared physically and mentally to Theodore Roosevelt. His endurance is remarkable and his oratory is such as stirs the blood of his hearers. He has found time to acquaint himself with the needs of his state and of its natural resources. Through explorations of his own and because of a thorough study of rock formations, he discovered one of the largest deposits of iron in the dominion of Canada, uncovering an entirely new iron range.

Early in his life in Michigan Mr. Osborn began his political career and his influence was felt everywhere he turned. Always going to the bottom of every subject, he informed himself thoroughly and has been able to push his convictions with such force that he has been unusually successful.

In public life Mr. Osborn has shown the same aggressiveness as in his own business. He was appointed state fish and game warden February 1, 1895, and immediately drove violators "out of the woods." He was game and fish warden for two years and following this was appointed state railroad commissioner by Governor Pingree. He immediately plunged into this subject with his usual vigor. While railroad commissioner he helped to make the Michigan commission what it is, one of the best and most efficient in the entire United States. It was a remarkable insight in this subject and it was through his efforts that many of the evils and abuses of privileges by railroad corporations were stopped and corrected.

Mr. Osborn was a delegate to the last national republican convention and was chairman of the Michigan delegation. He is an enthusiastic supporter of President Taft and Colonel Roosevelt, and his campaign throughout has been made on the lines of progress and reform and the correction of evils wherever they may exist.

Mr. Osborn was married in 1881 to Miss Lillian G. Jones, daughter of Edward Jones of Milwaukee. He is a thirty second degree Mason, a Knight Templar a member of the I. O. O. F., Knights of Pythias and B. P. O. E.

Mr. Osborn's success in the present campaign is due principally to his strong personality and his ability to convince his hearers and of the reforms he advocated and promised to inaugurate, should he be nominated and elected.

He is a man of most striking personality and will do his own thinking as chief executive of the state of Michigan and drive his theories home by deeds.

FORCE OF GRAVITY.

How It Would Affect Man's Weight on the Celestial Bodies.

If the planet Mars be really inhabited the people who live there must be an exceedingly agile race. The average weight of a man is about 140 pounds, but the force of gravity on Mars is so much less than on the earth that the 140 pound man would weigh only fifty-three pounds if he were transported thither. With such light weight, and still retaining the same strength, an individual would be able to run with the speed of an express train, go skipping over ten foot walls and do various other extraordinary things. On the moon a man would be even lighter.

But on the sun our 140 pounder would have his troubles. Instead of being as airy individual he would weigh in the neighborhood of a ton and three-quarters. He would probably have the greatest difficulty in raising his hand, for that member would weigh about 300 pounds.

According to scientific computation, a man who on earth weighs 140 pounds would on the other celestial bodies weigh as follows:

The moon, 23 pounds; Mars, 53 pounds; Venus, 114 pounds; Mercury, 119 pounds; Neptune, 123 pounds; Uranus, 127 pounds; Saturn, 305 pounds; Jupiter, 371 pounds, and the sun, 2,871 pounds.—Chicago Tribune.

A SAD STORY.

The Misfortune That Came With a Terrible Tumble.

Fowling is now very little practiced in the Shetland islands, although many eyas are secured annually. Many thrilling stories of fowling adventure are told by the Shetlanders. A man who had undertaken to climb a certain sea cliff was neither very experienced nor very brave, although he boasted of being both. He pushed upward, however, totally without looking behind until he had got up about 150 feet, when he stopped to breathe. The pause was fatal to his w if possession, and he called out in terrors of terror, "Men, men, I am going—I am going." But he still held on for a little, and it was not till he had shrieked many times "I am going" that he did fall headlong.

His comrades, having thus been warned, moved the best out of the way so that the poor fellow came short down into the deep water. Mighty was the plunge, but at long ph he rose to the surface, when of course he was instantly caught hold of and dragged into the boat. After many gasps and much spluttering of sea water from his mouth, his only remark was: "Eh, men, this is a sad story. I have lost my snuffbox."—"Sketches and Tales of Shetland."

Different Style.

Edward, aged six, was sent to a barber shop to get his hair cut. The barber who was assigned to the job had red hair.

"Would you like to have your hair cut like mine?" asked the barber.

"No, sir," answered Edward. "Cut it some other color, please."—Chicago News.

FULL OF GRATITUDE.

But the Little One Had a Queer Way of Expressing It.

Mr. Brown's business kept him so occupied during the daytime that he had little opportunity to enjoy the society of his own children. When some national holiday gave him a day of leisure his young son was usually his chosen companion. One day, however, Mr. Brown, represented by the wistful eyes of his seven-year-old daughter, reversed the order of things and invited the little girl to go with him for a long walk.

She was a shy, silent, small person, and during the two hours' stroll not a single word could Mr. Brown induce the little maid to speak, but her shining eyes assured that she appreciated his efforts to amuse her—indeed, she fairly glowed with suppressed happiness.

Just before they reached home, however the child suddenly, but only after a tremendous struggle with her inherent timidity, to find words to express her gratitude.

"Papa, what flower do you like best?"—Chicago Tribune.

Prompt Treatment for Colds.

A child's cold should be treated directly it makes an appearance, and in this way it will be prevented very often from becoming really bad. Give the little one a hot bath, dry him quickly and put him into bed, and then let him have some hot milk to sip; see that he does not throw the bed clothes off while he is perspiring after this treatment. Rub his chest and back with camphorated oil in the morning and at night.

The Worth to God.

It is by what we each have wrought,
We are measured by human thought;
But what we hoped and strove to be,
Men do not see—but they cannot see.

Not so with God, He knows the heart,
And looks upon the inward part,
He knows the motive of each mind,
Each noble will, and purpose kind.

If here we only can begin
The good that we conceived within,
Can only poorly bring to pass,
Can only try to do, alas,

Why things our hearts aspired to do,
Our God, who sees and credits, too,
The pure intentions of the mind,
Accepts the partial for the whole.

Our Responsibility to Christ.

As all real character is produced by the sense of responsibility, so all the Christian character is produced by the sense of responsibility to Christ, the responsibility to God, responsibility to Christ makes saints. It makes men who, in the world, are simply only individuals in the position in which the call of God has come to them. The individual is too often lost in his heredity and environment; but when he comes to God he has been sought in nature and in history, and in the living God and the living soul. It is vain to look for saints along this line. They are not the product of heredity and environment; they are produced one by one, free, original, unparalleled phenomena, as individuals responsible for their obligations to God. Since their life from no ancestor to descend, their life from no parent to succeed, in the scene of what they owe to Him.

The Life of Trust.

What a vast portion of our lives is spent in anxious and useless forebodings concerning the future, either our own or that of our dear ones! Present joys, present blessings, slip by and we miss half their sweetness, simply for want of faith in Him who provides for the humblest lower in the creation. Oh, when shall we learn the sweet trust in God our little children teach us every day by their confiding faith in us? We who are so mutable, so fast, so fickle, so unjust, and he who is so watchful, so pitiful, so loving, so forgiving! Why cannot we, slipping our hand into God's each day, walk trustingly over that day's appointed path—never looking forward, or straight, knowing that evening will bring us safe home, peace and house?—Phillips Brooks, D. D.

Four centuries since Calvin.

This remarkable year of centennials of Christian men is made more notable by the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Calvin, who was born at Noyon, in France, July 10, 1509.

Few names of the sixteenth century stand out in better relief than his. The statesmanship of his dedication and the chief of those who defend him alike testify to the strength of character of Calvin.

Few men now accept in full the doctrines which he taught, and still feel justify all that he did. Yet even those who least believe his teachings and who most disagree with his most severe and arbitrary acts pay tribute to the greatness of his character and the lasting value of his influence.

It is remarkable to be remembered, as the years roll, that the famous tenets that contain his "institutes," that John Calvin produced this standard world when he was only twenty-six years of age. The reign of young sons in the world of thought and action is no new thing.

It is also to be remembered that besides being a theologian, he was a commonwealth builder. Although Geneva reacted against the severity of his government and banished him, it found itself unable to get on well without him, and recalled him to administer its affairs. On the whole he ruled wisely, even though with severity. And the time was ripe for some severity. He who brought order out of chaos, and applied the principles of Christian faith to the government of a commonwealth, deserves well at the hands of posterity and has profited by his mistakes as well as by his successes.

This is not the place for an extended discussion of the theology of John Calvin. He emphasized the sovereignty of God until it seemed to leave no room for human freedom, and that brought its inevitable reaction. Modern science is doing something to give new emphasis to those conditions of heredity and environment that act as limitations to human freedom, and in some respects men of today by the well settle hand set Calvin in their sincerest regard.

Even man's consciousness that he is master of his own will keep the world from going wholly over to the new, or back to the old theory, but the trend of modern thought, although it proceeds more along scientific lines than that of Calvin, is not such as to disparage the virile and forceful logic of Calvin.

Henry Ward Beecher, when asked whether he were a Calvinist, replied, "Yes, that is, I believe what Calvin would believe if he were now living."

It is in some such way we should follow all great men who has lived in other days, honoring them in proportion as they took bravely and consistently the needs of their own generation, and following them in so far as their thought and life may inspire us to meet the demands of our own.

"All things are yours," said Paul, and among those "all things" he definitely included all great men, "Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas," or Calvin, or Arminius or Servetus.

We are debtors to the whole past, not to follow it blindly, nor to scorn its mistakes indiscriminately, but to learn from it and improve upon it.—Youth's Companion.

The Cardinalness of Love.

There is no loneliness so deep and so sure as that of the person who does nothing for others. The good neighbor is never lonely, the good Samaritan was not lonely, even when he was far from home, on the road to Jericho. Love is never lonely, for love searches out others, and pours their needs and supplies them. It is only he who thinks chiefly of himself and his own interests who is sure to be lonely, even in the midst of teeming life. Let us make the impossible prayer our own: "Deliver me from the loneliness of selfishness."

Fullness of Life.

The way to fullness of life is through death. We may see examples from nature. If we will, we may refuse to make the self-doubts which love demands of us, we may indulge ourselves, and decline to do the things for others which we are required to do and which would require toil and pain. It will seem that we are saving our life, but pretty soon we find that we must die to live; we must lose to gain.

MAN WHO BUILDS TUNNELS.

Showed the Shell He Was Made of When the Was a Cub Reporter.

It isn't any wonder that Mr. Mc-Adoo can build tunnels under the East river, for he has been a pretty sort of a cuss he is. Drop him down in a city filled blind, and he'd successfully tunnel out of it. Once he was a French colonial soldier, and he got successfully out of the scrape he was in. Drop him down in a city of 2,000,000 souls, and he'd successfully tunnel out of it. Once he was a newspaper man, and he got successfully out of the hole he had dug himself into. Drop him down in a city of 2,000,000 souls, and he'd successfully tunnel out of it. Once he was a Tammany Democrat, and he got successfully out of the Democratic party. Drop him down in a city of 2,000,000 souls, and he'd successfully tunnel out of it. Once he was a cub reporter, and he got successfully out of the Tribune office. Drop him down in a city of 2,000,000 souls, and he'd successfully tunnel out of it. Once he was a Democrat, and he got successfully out of the Democratic party

SHADOW LEGENDS

Zulus Believe the Bodily Shade Is the Future Spirit.

TAKING AWAY ONE'S SHADOW.

Why Some Races Are Forbidden to Look Into a Dark Pool of Water. The Way Donald McKay Managed to Escape the Clutches of the Devil.

That mysterious counterpart of a human being which lengthens with the day and disappears with the sun, to reappear more faintly with the rising of the moon, which we call a shadow, has always struck the imagination of man. It has played a prominent part in primitive superstition and in later folklore. Shadows or shades were the classical name or figure for the spirits of the departed which still remains in use.

This idea is not confined to civilized races. Among the Zulus the spirit is the shade, Bishop Callaway, whose knowledge of Zulu beliefs and modes of thought was unrivaled, says that the Zulus connect the bodily shade with the future disembodied spirit. They believe that the shadow cast by the body will ultimately become the "tongo," or spirit, when the body dies, and they say that the long shadow shortens "as a man approaches his end and contracts into a very little thing. When they see the shadow of a man thus contracting, they know he will die. The long shadow goes away when a man is dead, and it is that which is usual when it is said, 'the shadow has departed.' There is, however, a short shadow which remains with the body and is buried with it. The long shadow becomes an ancestral spirit."

Identification of the shadow in any mysterious or spiritual way with the person whose body casts it, naturally leads to respect for the strings second self. To tread on the shadow of a chief is an insult to the chief himself. In the institutes of Manu, the ancient Hindu law giver, the law runs:

"Let him not intentionally piss over the shadow of sacred images, of a mortal or spiritual father, of a king, of a Brahmin who keeps houses, or of any reverend personage, nor of one who has just performed a sacrifice."

There are traces of the survival of these primitive ways of regarding a man's shadow in the English country feeling that it is unlucky to cross the path of a newly married man as he leaves the altar; and in another rural belief that it is unlucky to cross the path of horses ploughing when the sun is sinking behind them.

Association between shadows and inferior representations of the human form is obviously natural, so it is not surprising to find superstitious about the shadow mingled with widely scattered versions of the Narcissus legend. The style of the beautiful youth who became enamored of his own image, as he saw it represented in the water, and languished therefor till he died, has its origin in the belief that trouble follows from beholding the watery image.

"Let him not look at his own image in water; that is a settled rule," commence Manu, the Hindu law giver.

The reason for the prohibition is so to found in the beliefs of man in a primitive state of civilization. The Mamaquam of the Pacific, says a learned observer, say: "There is a stream in Sooke Island, or, rather, a pool in a stream, into which if any one looks he dies; the malignant spirit takes hold upon his life by means of his reflection in the water." Some such idea as this was certainly the root of the Narcissus legend.

The Zulus explain why it is ill to look into the water of a pool by a story of a great beast in the water which can seize the shadow of a man and when his shadow is gone a man no longer wishes to turn back, but desires to come to the water. He goes in, dies, and is eaten by the great beast which inhabits it. So, says Bishop Callaway, "men are forbidden to lean over and look into a dark pool, lest being feared that their shadow should be taken away."

There are other ways in which a man may lose his shadow. There was a temple of Jupiter in Arcadia which, if entered by those who were forbidden to do so, robbed them of their shadows.

In the north of Scotland there are some similar legends of folk who lost their usual attendant. In Sutherland they tell more than one story of a wizard named Donald-Duival McKay. Donald went on a school in Italy where the black art was taught by the devil, who sat in the professor's chair, and at the end of each term claimed as his own the last scholar to depart. Breaking as a rule scandalous was naturally a scramble, none wishing to be last.

On one occasion Donald was the last, but just as the devil was about to seize him, the resourceful Donald jumped to his own shadow, which fell behind him, saying, "Take thou the hindmost!" Accordingly, his shadow was seized, while he himself escaped, and after his return to Scotland was heard no more of his shadow!

A companion illustration of "deil tak the hindmost" from Aberdeenshire, is a story of a witch helped into a boat by his reapers, whose shadow was seized by Satan, and who was ever after shadowless. In Hawthorne Dennison's famous tale of "Peter Schlemihl" is a well-known example of the stories of the shadowless.—New York American.

Probably.

"But," pouted Mrs. Shagroom, "if you never go out with me how are people to know that I am married?"

"Well, if you take the baby with you," replied Shagroom, carelessly, "they may suspect it."

WHISTLER TALES.

Some Amusing Peculiarities of the Eccentric Artist.

BARRING OUT BILL BEARERS.

He Knew the Knock of Each Collector and the Amount It Represented. London Cabbies Had Good Reason to Fight Shy of the Erratic Genius.

There was a steady stream of creditors at the Kling street studio in those days, says a writer in the Century. Whistler made no effort to conceal the fact that he was deeply in debt. One may see were busily and silently working there came a loud businesslike rap at the door. Whistler listened attentively.

"Tuit!" said he. "That's one and one."

Within half an hour there was another rap, not quite so loud.

"Two and six," said Whistler. "Tuit!"

"What on earth do you mean?" I asked after a time.

"One pound ten shillings: two pounds six shillings. Vulgar tradesmen with their bills, colonel. They want payment. Ah, well!" he sighed with an exaggerated air of sadness and returned to his canvas.

Then came another knock, a most gentle, insinuating rap.

"Dear me," said Whistler, "that must be all of twenty! Poor fellow, I really must do something for him! So sorry I'm not in."

I could not take the situation so quickly and seized eagerly the first opportunity of financial aid that presented itself. A rich American, sojourning in London, asked me what he could purchase and take back with him in the way of art.

"By all means get a set of Whistler's etchings. Unquestionably he will make for you a selection. I'll speak to him." I told him, and hurried back with the good news.

Whistler was delighted, and for a day worked busily, overhauling and sorting his proofs. The selection was a splendid one and called for a substantial payment. It was arranged that Whistler should meet the purchaser at a bank in Queen street the following morning and receive his check.

Most men under the circumstances would have thought of little else, but by the next morning Whistler had wholly forgotten his engagement. He had begun a new canvas, and was completely absorbed in it. For a while I expostulated in vain.

"Come, Whistler," I said finally, "you have been away from America so long that you don't appreciate the value of time to the traveler, particularly the American traveler. You must not keep the man waiting."

"Very well," said he, laying down his brush, with a sigh. "Now we'll go."

"Why we?" I replied. "I don't want to go." I protested firmly. To tell the truth, I was looking forward with a great deal of comfort to a morning all to myself.

"Oh, but you must," he said calmly, flinging my coat and hat, and suddenly I stood in front of the house sighting a cab.

One came up readily enough, but, after one scrutinizing look upon the cadaverous pair, drove swiftly by another seat, through the same strange proceedings. I looked questioningly at Whistler—this odd circumstance had happened before, we were together—but Whistler was calmly signaling Atlength a cabby took us in.

Whistler always carried as a walking stick a long, slender wand, a sort of a mahlstick, nearly three-quarters of his own height. We were no sooner seated than he began poking his stick in all the holes. The animal rushed plunged wildly and started down the street in a breakneck gallop, while the astonished cabby swore freely and cursed desperately at the reins. Whistler looked calmly ahead and kept poking.

Butcher boys and grocer boys made wild leaps for safety; outraged cabbies whipped their horses out of the way just to time; burly dragsmen hawled curses after us, and still we went merrily on. Little wonder, though I, in the midst of my amazement and resentment, that Whistler never gave the same cab twice.

Suddenly he began waving his cane and shouting "Whoa!" He took the astonished cabby savagely to task for driving so fast upon the public highway and ordered him back to a corner we had just passed.

Here a greengrocer's shop, with its orderly and colorful array of fruits and vegetables, had caught Whistler's eye as we whirled by. He surveyed it critically now from two different positions, the cabby merely obeying his orders, "drat the fellah! I presume that it was policy to humor a lunatic.

"Isn't it beautiful?" exclaimed Whistler. He pointed at his prize from a corner. "I believe I'll have that crate of oranges moved over the—against that background of green. Yes, that's better," he added contentedly.

We drove on to the bank where we found the American pacing up and down in his peculiar fraze of mind; but Whistler soon had him pacified, and he left him waving and calling adieus at us.

The incident at the greengrocer's shop rather like an errant affectation. It was not, however. Whistler, as usual, was merely most natural. The following morning he posted his easel in the corner and painted the shop that pleased him.

Daily Thought.

To have a friend is to have one of the sweetest gifts that life can bring; to be a friend is to have a solemn and tender discussion of soul from day to day.—Anna Robertson Brown.

TESTING FIRE CLAY.

The Most Practical Method is to Literally Eat It.

Fire clay has been in use for centuries, and yet I believe the industry is one which lacks definite tests more than any other, including those which are either modern or ancient and of less prominence. You can go to a manufacturer of steel and specify what you want by actual figures or statements and you can check the product by chemical analysis or mechanical tests and thus make sure you get what you need. The producer knows how to combine certain elements and what quantities of various kinds to combine in order to get a result at least very closely approaching what you call for, but not so in the fire clay business. In the past the most skilled and highest salaried chemists have been employed to make tests, to promote and carry through investigations on the natural product and to study the workings of certain manufactured and elaborated articles derived therefrom. The result has been, generally speaking, confusion worse confounded. Two professors, working at similar times on brick or clay obtained from the same source and manufactured under exactly equal conditions, have recorded diametrically opposed conclusions! The same scientists at different periods have reached vastly varying conclusions when testing identical qualities and shapes of bricks, so can you wonder if a prominent fire clay manufacturer should exclaim, as I heard one on an occasion after having the above experience, "Just one of the clay are empirical, and I would sooner trust our superintendent to pick and select his clays in the old fashioned way than pay a high fee for a highbrow's recommendations?" The chief method of testing fire clay by a practical man is literally to eat it. He can detect grit and sand hard by that method, and a good fire clay (free from silica, quartzite or flint clay) is free from grit. His only other personal test is by experiment.—Engineering Magazine.

A CHINESE BANQUET.

Culinary Mysteries That Bewildered an Englishwoman.

One moment we were eating dockey eggs whose blackened, lime flavored white indicated that their age was unimpeachable; the next we were grappling with sea weeds, cucumber and the slippery slarks' fins that eluded our clumsily manipulated sticks. Now we tackled—and without fear—unknown meats and vegetables cooked in sugar, fresh shrimps, mushrooms from Mongolia, young bamboo sprouts, pigeons' eggs and a hundred different foreign tasting messes. Then clean plates were given to us, and bowls of sickly pink sirup, sweet potato and Indian corn cakes of dusky hue were set before each one. There were only crevice fillers and concluded the first and lighter portion of the repast. Now came the real substantial meal, where in every dish had an accompaniment of another course, containing gravies, etc., in which to dip the morsel taken from the central bowl.

There was stewed duck cooked without salt, roast sucking pig, fermented beans and chicken; there were soups of birds' nest, of mushrooms, of vegetables of sea slugs. There was grilled fresh water fish, which, according to custom, was served from the top side only, for the Chinese remembers his ancestors. And, finally, at the conclusion the inevitable small bowl of rice and rice water was set before each person.

After some three hours, with a feeling of dissatisfaction that all was over, pipes, cigarettes and tea were served, and it seemed to me that the delicious aroma which rose from the bowl soothed our senses and almost dispelled the antipathy that had been growing on us for all things Chinese.—Mary Moore in London Express.

The Kind Needed.

"Dear me," said the first young woman, taking her infant lesson in golf, "what shall I do now. This ball is in a hole?"

"Well, let me see," said her companion, thoughtfully plucking the leaves of a book of instructions, "I presume you will have to take a stick of the right shape to get it out."

"Oh, yes, of course," was the somewhat cynical reply. "Well, see if you can find one shaped like a dustpan and brush."—New York Tribune.

Kissing in Ireland.

Among old time laws against kissing those of Ireland appear to have been the most severe. Banishment was the penalty laid down for kissing another man's wife, either with or without her consent. The same punishment was enforced for kissing an unmarried woman against her will; if it could be proved that she had consented to be kissed the offender was still liable to a fine of a great quantity of cloth for each offense.

Local Option Matters

A little over one and one-half years ago a large number of the voters of Charlevoix County petitioned the Board of Supervisors for the privilege of voting on the question of the Prohibition of the Liquor traffic under the Local Option Law in this county. This movement was the result of a wide spread desire to do away with the open saloon. The destructive nature of this institution had long been recognized. Its ravages were too evident to admit denial. The saloon is, and always has been, the enemy of the church, the home, the school and the state. To sign a paper to drive out such a foe placed the signer on record in favor of the common good, the safe guarding of the morals of the youth and the promoting of good citizenship in our land. The best citizens had no hesitancy in taking this position. They were quite willing to have their names posted in public places when it clearly meant that they stood for those things in the support of which every right minded person could justly take pride.

Now the Liquor Traffic asks you to take the opposite position. The wholesalers and retailers want the open saloon for the reason that the open saloon greatly increases the sale of liquor. They would not care to pay the license if this were not true. Because they want the open saloon, they ask you to sign a paper to secure the privilege of again voting on the question of the prohibition of the liquor traffic. Every one who signs their petition will thereby consent to have his name used to help make drunkards of our boys, to rob womanhood of virtue and to corrupt the body pollitic.

The law requires copies of the petitions with the signatures thereon to be posted for ten days, at least, in three public places in the Township or City where the signers reside (See Section 5455 of the Compiled Laws of Michigan 1897, Vol. 2, Page 1710) We do not believe that you want your name to appear in public with the names of drunkards, gamblers and saloonists. You do not care to have it understood that you stand for the things which every one knows the saloon produces. The great majority of the citizens of Charlevoix County believe in protecting the home and its surroundings by good and helpful institutions. If it were necessary they would lay down their lives in a conflict that involved the integrity of their homes and the future of their children against an open enemy. The foe now faces us, not in the open, but under cover of an appeal for the right of franchise for the purpose of bringing back an institution, the success of which is absolutely dependent upon its ability to mid boys for life and finally to cast them off the wrecks of humanity. Let us not be deceived by any pretended patriotism that has this nefarious object in view. The man who approaches you with this object is from the enemy's forces. A little scarching of the fields beyond will reveal the assembling army. Let us not sign a paper that may permit this foe to pitch his camp in our dooryard.

How the Cat Does It.

My method of producing literature is to think about the document desired and resembles a cat having a fit. A cat hardly ever plans out a fit very elaborately. The cat gets ready to have a fit it goes ahead and has it; sometimes it has a fit in a tree, sometimes it turns out to be a mere fizzle, and sometimes it cut shaks it is having one of the best fits it ever had, and then the fit settles say it is a mighty fine fit.—Ella Parker Butler, in New York Times.

"If That Be Treason."

It was during the Parnell agitation in Ireland that an Irishman was criticising the ways of tenants in treating absentee landlords, excoriated to Archbishop Ireland of Minnesota: "Why, it looks very much like treason." Instantly came the answer in the archbishop's best brogue: "Sure, treason is treason when there's an absent lot."—Everybody's Magazine.

Charity Not There.

Our kind, our enthusiastic, our open-hearted acts should be instinctive, impulsive, sudden. When we begin to look at—ah, and ask ourselves the consequences of a good deed, our little frightened spirit of charity flies out of the window.—Edmund Gosse.

In Some Instances.

"I see by the papers," says the man with the difficult whiskers, "that it is claimed to be an offense to pay a legislator for voting for a United States senator." "Well," replied the man with the double chin, "when you size up some of those senators it seems as if a man was entitled to good pay for voting for them, doesn't it?"—Life.

Best and Nearest.

The best things are nearest: breath in your nose, light in your eyes, flowers at you, feet, duties at your hand, the path of God just before you. Then do not grasp at the stars but do life's plain, common work as it comes, certain that daily duties and daily bread are the sweetest things of life.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Wicked Editor Punished

Charged with criminal libel in having assailed the character and reputation of Chas. S. Osborn, of Sault Ste. Marie, in the publication of a campaign article in the Escanaba Journal, of which weekly newspaper he is the editor and publisher, F. L. Baldwin was tried before a jury in the court of Police Judge Emil Glaser last week. The jury returned a verdict of guilty, whereupon the defendant was sentenced to 90 days in jail and was fined $100.

The article upon which the charge was based aroused the ire of the representative press of the state and was resented even by friends of the author. It was published during the height of the struggle for the republican nomination for governor, and rather than injuring the candidacy of Mr. Osborn it is felt that it had no small part in rolling up the Soo man's remarkable plurality. Mr. Baldwin was made deeply by the unwarranted attack upon him, and he at once took steps to bring the Escanaba publisher before the bar of justice. The gubernatorial incident was in court.

Chase S. Osborn's Statement to the Republican Party of Michigan.

I feel no sense of personal slighting, but rather a sacred gratefulness for the opportunity to the renewal of the republican party in Michigan My sole aim will be to dutifully fulfill every preliminary promise if my nomination is followed by election to the governorship. The campaign was an earnest one and should make every republican a fighting veteran in the army of progressive government.

Naturally I deeply appreciate the action of those who were for me, but as the candidate of the republican party, there is no distinction in my mind between those who were for me and those were fairly against me.

No matter what my personal views may be, they will be properly subordinated to the platform that will be adopted by the republican state convention at Detroit, October 5th. The platform will, no doubt reflect the party attitude more accurately and should be in more perfect sympathy with the desires of the people of Michigan than is any individual.

My public work is before me and I hope to be given the great light to see and the strength for the issues.

CHASE S. OSBORN.

—Here is an item for the benefit of those who think that Northern Michigan can raise nothing but bears and wood chucks. Sept. 13, R. K. Chew of Hayes township, thresched 111 bushels of good plump winter wheat from 3 acres of stumping, new ground, leaded a big load of stakings that would have fetched out 10 bushels, but which he fed to his chickens and pigs, making a total of 121 bushels, or 40 bushels per acre. He also threshed 92 bushels rye from 3½ acres.

—Charlevoix people will be pleased to learn of a bit of good fortune that has come to Mr. Frank W. Howe, formerly superintendent of the Charlevoix public schools. He has been recently elected Superintendent of Agriculture of the public schools of the state of New York, at a salary of $2,500 per year. A Syracuse paper publishes the following concerning him: "This is a new position, created in order to establish work in agriculture upon the same basis as the mechanical work in the schools of the state, and particularly with reference to introducing it into existing high schools, so far as is practicable. Mr. Howe is especially qualified for this work. He is about 45 years of age, was born in Kent county Michigan; graduated from Battle Creek, college in 1890 with the degree of B. S. He taught in the University of Michigan in 1903 with the degree of A. B. and received from Michigan Agricultural college the degree of M. S. in 1909. He has had much experience in teaching, having taught in the rural schools of Michigan and California previous to 1900, and afterward serving as principal of the High school at Petoskey, Michigan, 1900-1902; superintendent of schools of Manistee, Michigan, 1902-'03, of Charlevoix, Michigan, 1903-'05 and of Maumee, Ohio, 1905-'06. He was instructor in agriculture in Bay Lanning Michigan, 1907-'09, when he went to Washington, D. C., to act as assistant in agricultural education in the State department of agriculture, which position he now holds. He is married and has a family of five children."

The Question of Re-Submission.

It seems quite evident from visible signs that the wets and dys of Charlevoix county are lining up for another battle. We are given to understand that petitions are in circulation for a re-submission of the local option question, and the publicity committee have issued an appeal to the people of the county.

It goes without saying that the movement to resubmit is inaugurated by that class who have a pecuniary interest in the liquor traffic, directly or indirectly. This proposition being laid down there comes another, and that is that names are as easy to get for any or all illegitimate purposes as it is to catch suckers in springtime. Therefore it need occasion no surprise if the people should be called upon to vote on the question again next spring. There are many good thoughtless and unreasoning people to fill legal requirements.

The SENTINEL went through one hard fight for local option, and if another fight is forced upon us it will take the same position that it did before. We believe that present conditions are very much better than they were under the open saloon regime, and we believe that every fair minded, unbiased citizen knows it.

The argument upon which this movement is based is that there is as much liquor sold now as there was when saloons were running. This is a specious pleading. That liquor comes into the county in large quantities cannot be denied, and granting this, we still contend that a large balance still remains on the side of local prohibition. There were five saloons in the city of Charlevoix, and, during the local option campaign a conservative estimate placed the amount that went over the five bars in one year at $50,000. No argument can convince the people that this amount is now expended for whiskey and other intoxicants in Charlevoix and its environs. That there is great improvement in local conditions is manifest to the most unobserving.

There is little use in now enumerating the evils that attach to the liquor traffic in any form, but, of the greatest of all evils, because they invade the precincts of every spot sacred to the human heart, and the ramifications of which reach into the entire Pandora's box of evils The evidences of this are so plain and so monotonous that the wayfaring man though a fool need not err. It is, therefore, against the open saloon that we make our fight.

Do not for one moment think that this is the beginning of the "second battle." The liquor interests have for more than a year been flooding the county with literature, in preparation for an attack that now se

WOMAN AND THE PIN.

It was in a desultory way that the captain found out that Ethel Clare Le Neve, the supposed accomplice of Dr. Crippen, was a girl though she was dressed in boy's togs. She had supplied a missing trouser's button with a safety pin. The lad was entirely feminine, says Cleveland Leader. A boy would have borrowed a marline spike, or a nail, or whittled a wooden peg. This dramatic use of the safety pin again forces the attention on women's marvelous capacity as a pincher. Give her a hat pin and she can furbish a fortune in fur coats from a long-necked bottle, with change for the waiter. She makes it decorative, too, and deadly. In a crowded street car it is as fearsome a weapon as the kris of a Malay running amok. But her chief record is made with the common or garden pin. She fastens her trousers or dress with it and when baby swallows the rattle, harpoons that out with a pin. If a tornado blows and the shingles are threatened she crawls out on the roof and pins them down. Writers of whose heaving summer stories in which a man and a lovely girl are cast away on a South sea island note the chance of their lives when they do not provide the heroine with a paper of pins as her salvage from the wreck.

Is the speedy motor car an obstacle to punctuality? It would seem so. Certainly the habit of arriving late at the theater and other places of entertainment is growing with the multiplication of means of rapid transportation. It is seldom that a play or program is not marred or interrupted by those who arrive late. And the disturbance is greater where motor cars carry the larger number of the attendants. Does the mass of those who have to depend on the street cars or more apt to give themselves reasonable time than are those who have gotten into the habit of thinking that travel time and distance counts when the automobile is available? At any rate the habit is a bad one.

"Changing the map of Europe" is a phrase that had a grim significance during the greater part of the last century. There were people with long memories who knew that changes in the map of Europe as a rule were brought about by war. But there is a possibility of a peaceful change of the map of Europe by Prince Nicholas of Montenegro. He proposes when his principality becomes a kingdom an event that is to be celebrated with appropriate brilliancy this month—its name shall be altered to Zeta, which is what it was called in ancient times. Map-makers will take notice.

If the former one brought about all the trouble which has been going on the earth since, we can spare any more of those heavenly mischief makers for some time to come. And those who are looking for trouble and read their answer in the stars should be legally enjoined, at least until the world has had time to catch its breath.

DEMOCRATS SWEEP STATE AND ELECT COL. F. W. PLAISTED GOVERNOR.

PROBABLY WIN LEGISLATURE

Four Republican Congressmen Are Defeated—State Issues Are Given as Cause for Change of Political Complexion of State.

Augusta, Me.—Col. Frederick W. Plaisted, mayor of this city, was elected governor at the election held in this state Monday. The Democrats have probably elected four congressmen and it is likely that they will have a majority in the state legislature.

Plaisted's majority over his Republican opponent, the present governor, Bert M. Fernald, will probably reach 2,000, though it will be several days before the vote of many remote rural communities is received. The Fourth Congressional district, which includes numerous polling places of the sort, is thought to have gone Republican.

Asher C. Hinds, the parliamentarian of congress, is defeated in the Portland district. Swasey in the Second and Hersleb in the Third.

That state issues notably the drastic enforcement of the prohibitory law for "the party" in power, have been chiefly responsible for the election of Plaisted is freely admitted on both sides and this result is just much of a surprise to most observers here. In the political complexion of Maine representation in congress should be changed to regarded as the verdict of the voters on the questions which are uppermost in the business mind.

Should the legislature prove to be Democratic it is almost certain that the question of nullmatizing the prohibitory law will be submitted to the people and of course a Democrat will succeed Eugene Hale in the United States senate.

TEN BEEF PACKERS INDICTED

Five Presidents of Packing Companies Charged With Having Violated the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—Ten men, five of them presidents of the five most extensive packing companies in the world and all of them directors of the National Packing company, which has been the special object of recent government investigation, were indicted by the federal grand jury on a charge of having violated the Sherman anti-trust act.

Three indictments, the first one containing five counts and the others one each, were returned before Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, who empaneled the grand jury a few months ago.

The maximum penalty for each violation of the Sherman act is a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment for one year, or both.

The indictments charge that all of the defendants have engaged in a combination in restraint of interstate trade in fresh meats, that they have engaged in a conspiracy to restrict trade and that they have monopolized the trade in fresh meats by unlawful means.

The indictments cover 125 pages of typewritten matter. They go into every angle of the packing industry in this country and contain the allegation that 85 per cent. of the fresh meat consumed in the eastern, western and middle southern states comes directly from the companies controlled by the defendants. The proportion of such concerns in this trade is given as follows: Swift group, 37 per cent.; Armour group, 16 per cent.; Morris group, 13 per cent.

BROWNE FOUND NOT GUILTY

ILLINOIS LEGISLATOR FREED OF BRIBERY CHARGE.

Jury Out Over 21 Hours and Verdict Is Greeted With Cheers—Emotion Overcomes Defendant.

Chicago.—The jury in the second trial of Lee O'Neil Browne, leader of the minority in the Illinois legislature, charged with bribing Representative Charles A. White to vote for Senator Lorimer returned a verdict of not guilty in the criminal court Friday in the first trial of Browne the jury disagreed.

The speedy verdict was a surprise to the many who had watched the progress of the second trial and had feared that a repetition of the tedious deliberations of the first jury would close the case. The verdict was returned before Judge Kersten after the jury had deliberated a little over twenty-one hours.

As the words "not guilty" fell from the clerk's lips a cheer went up. Scores of confusion followed. It was with difficulty that the bailiffs restrained the crowd. It was then that Browne jumped from his chair and embraced Attorney Erbstein around the neck and they embraced each other. It seemed later Browne was torn from his counsel by his friends. They pushed their way around the room to shake hands with the jurors. Tears ran down his face.

"I thank—" he began, but he did not finish, his emotions overcoming him. Tears ran down his face.

STEAMER SINKS IN THE LAKE

Big Car Ferry Pere Marquette Goes Down Off Ludington—Twenty-nine Perish.

Milwaukee.—Twenty-nine lives were lost in Lake Michigan when the Pere Marquette's car ferry, No. 18, sank in a storm about twenty miles off Sheboygan, Wis., Friday.

It is declared one of the worst marine disasters in the history of Lake Michigan navigation. The boat is valued at $400,000, and the cargo, which included thirty-two loaded cars, estimated to be worth $150,000.

At the mercifully of two or five over the boat, after terrible hours of struggle the steel car ferry Pere Marquette 17, which went in the distance of No 18, reached this port with fifteen dead and twenty-nine survivors of the crew of her sister ship.

Twenty-eight men were employed in cleaning the whole left by the drifting and blasting waves there came a crashing and rending of a mill; rock, a thousand pounds in weight, left the cliffs and after that there was a thinning and tossing of men as fell the center rank and piece by piece great chunks of rock, some weighing tons, fell from the cliffs, crashing and crashing as they struck.

FALLING ROCKS KILL

TEN WORKMEN ARE DEAD, NINE INJURED IN ERIE RAILROAD TUNNELS.

SOMEONE MADE A BLUNDER

Twenty-Eight Laborers Are Caught in Tubes Underneath Hundreds of Tons of Brick and Mortar—Nine Escape Unhjured.

Jersey City, N. J.—By the fall of hundreds of tons of Palisade rock through the broken roof of the old Erie railroad tunnels ten workmen were crushed to death Sunday and nine others were seriously injured, five of them probably fatally.

The dead and injured formed part of a gang of twenty-eight hard rock men who were removing the mountains of stone above the tunnels to transform them into open "cuts" as was recently completed on other tracks different. Somebody either blundered in blasting which weakened the brick roof of the tubes, or there was an unexpected fault in the rock.

West of the Hudson boulevard station there was a mass of rock to cut away about 110 feet deep down to the bed of the tunnels and about 125 feet long. Working in three shifts of eight hours each the gang had cut down to the tunnels for a distance of more than 60 feet and they

BALLINGER COMMITTEE MEET AND ADJOURN WITHOUT MAKING REPORT.

SENATOR FLINT IS ABSENT

Another Meeting Will Be Held at Washington December 3 When Report Will Probably Be Made Public.

Chicago.—Secretary Richard A. Ballinger will not learn his fate at the hands of the congressional investigating committee until December next.

Six members of the committee met in Chicago Tuesday to take action on the lengthy report, but after deliberating several hours, without a quorum present, an adjournment was taken until December 3 in Washington.

The members present were: Senator Elihu Root of New York, Knute Nelson of Minnesota, George Sutherland of Utah, Representatives H. C. Olmstead of Pennsylvania, S. W. McCall of Massachusetts and Edwin Denby of Michigan, all Republicans.

Senator Flint of California, appointed by Vice-President Sherman to serve on the committee in place of Root, and in his absence the other six presented a statement in which they decline to accept the majority resolution adopted at Minneapolis declaring Secretary Ballinger by showing the Boston man drinking whisky. The bluebottle buzzed on the page; otherwise all silence reigned.

This was broken by one of the committee trying to shake the bluebottle with zoological exactitude. Said he Scotsman:

"Lady, I'm thinking if you fly in a man's face—"

The other replied: "Man, don't spoil good whisky with religious conversation."

Shrewd Scheme Stopped Run.

Sioux City, Iowa.—Upon suspicion of a commercial panic, there was a severe run on a bank in South Wales, and the state banking department, of which Cullen is the head, rushed to the scene in a fast automobile, and had it stopped. The run was rapidly growing worse, when the bank manager, in a fit of desperation, suddenly conceived a scheme for an expedient. By his directions a clerk, having heated some sovereigns in a frying pan, laid them over the counter to an anxious applicant. "Why, they're quite hot!" said the latter as he took them up. "Of course," was the reply. "what else could you expect? They are only just out of the mint." The coins circulated by hundreds as fast as we can. "Cooling them!" thought the simple minded depositors, and they left their money in the bank. Cullen, the state banking commissioner, who was at the head of the run, "Gentlemen," said he, "I am a man of few words. I'm a Scotsman and I say it, whose life has been a failure."

"You shouldn't talk so! You must remember that I'm letting you be good to me, kinder and more helpful than any man ever was before to anybody. I'm not the kind of a man that's happy any other way.

"Yes; I'm going to lead a different life," he said, resolutely. "It doesn't pay to cherish the viper of enmity in one's bosom. But I suppose there's a certain fun in hating people, even though you never get a chance to even up with them."

"You don't have a little lingering pagainism in you. But it's disappearing. Olive tells me that you are helping her. Pollock have quite bit it off. He ought to have taken you and made you fight for the snubbings you gave him."

"Bah! I'm a little bigger than that, there's all!" Hot Merriam smiled when he remembered Pollock's fight. The man's expected his invitation for to-morrow afternoon to be taken up by the elite with him. I believe you are asked." And Olive will be there. The elite of our family is Pollock trying to break into it, and Olive's crowd is the elite of the elite." "Yes, I'm quite likely to have a nice time." he said, aloud, to the boy.

"Yes are quite likely to have a nice in the street." he said, aloud, to the boy, "Yes, I'm quite likely to have a nice time." he said, aloud, to the boy.

BARGAIN DAY

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 24th, 1910

Charlevoix Retail Merchants' Association.

The Retail Merchant's Association of the City of Charlevoix was organized a year ago last Spring. The purpose for which it was organized was to induce the merchants to insist upon a better credit system than had heretofore existed and also for the purpose of increasing the amount of business transacted in the City of Charlevoix; in other words, the association was organized not only for protection to the merchants, but also for the purpose of producing a better understanding between the customers and the merchants, and it is for that purpose that the Retail Merchants Association and those associated with it, have offered bargain day Saturdays, and are offering prizes for various farm products. Many of these products will be purchased for the purpose of exhibiting at the Western Development Company's Exhibition at Chicago this coming Fall. Charlevoix county is expected to produce a great deal of the best exhibits. However, the Retail Merchants Association is not working in connection with nor under the advice of the Western Development Company, but are acting independently along the lines of boosting Northern Michigan, and especially the farm territory surrounding the City of Charlevoix. On the eighth day of October at the same place, unless otherwise advised, the following prizes will be given:

Wheat, best peck, 1st prize $2, second prize $1; Oats, best peck $2 and $1; Rye, best peck $2 and $1; Barley, best peck $2 and $1; Corn, best bushel ears $2 and $1; Peas, best bushel $2 and $1; Potatoes, best bushel, Round White $2 and $1; Potatoes, Long White, best bushel $2 and $1; Potatoes, bushel largest $2; Ruta Bagas, best bushel $2 and $1; Sugar Beets, best bushel $2 and $1; Apples, Spy, best bushel $4 and $2; Apples, King, best bushel $4 and $2; Apples, Wagner, best bushel $4 and $2; Apples, Snow, best bushel $4 and $2.

We especially urge the farmers to bring the best apples they can produce, also the best potatoes as these will be especially desired for future exhibitions work. All of the products exhibited will be auctioned off after the prizes have been awarded, and the person who shows the exhibits will receive the proceeds of the auction sale.

Also we invite your attention to the advertising of the Merchants on this sheet. Each and everyone have contributed towards making this a successful bargain Saturday. You will find that each merchant and each business house in the City of Charlevoix will have some bargain for you on that day, we ask you to take advantage of it, we believe in working together. The merchants and business houses of the City of Charlevoix can furnish you with everything you need at a reasonable price and as cheaply as you can purchase it anywhere else.

And further than that, if the goods you buy are not satisfactory you can go to the merchant himself, and will find that every merchant is willing to back his goods, if he sells them to you for a first class article.

We invite your co-operation, we ask you to visit our stores, examine our stock, our prices, and if satisfactory, give us your trade, and we will do our best to merit your further patronage.

Storm-Center of Swiss Reformation

ELIZABETH ANGELA HENRY

ONE thousand Zurich women have declared for universal suffrage. It is a recent movement there, though other cities elsewhere have been urging it for some time in the much mooted question. Altogether the little city has 17,000 advocates for giving women the ballot. Recently the women of Zurich canton petitioned the state for the right to act as jurors on a case in which a woman was the defendant. Their request was refused. Later, with characteristic Swiss promptness, they sent in another petition to the legislature asking the right to sit in judgment on special courts, such as are held in France for adjusting differences between universal and model, and other cases where differences arise between a woman employer and a woman employee. While this, too, was denied, Parliament admitted the sex's eligibility to such an office.

We are not talking much about it, said the vice president of the Zurich Woman's Suffrage society, Frauleen Hummler, "one publicly frighten the state into granting the concession. It is not much of a gain, too," she added with true suffrage optimism, "it is a step forward. If we had made that demand ten years ago, when we spoke of our having the ballot was to be laughed at as a dreamer, our petition would with the national educational exhibit and the Pestalozzi cabinet. The modern Catholic Church of Our Lady is a magnificent basilica. The Church of St. Peter holds the tomb of Lavater, who was its pastor. The town hall, not have got past the porter's desk. But a city that was the first in Europe to open its university to women will not finally deny us our citizens' rights."

Switzerland has no women's clubs. But while the suffragists are engaged along one line, another body of women is working for philanthropy. A group of young women representing the famous Pestalozzi institution has organized this year a practical training school where members study the needs of poor children and thereby help to better their unfortunate lot.

"We are endeavoring to interest our young girls of leisure and culture in the work," said one of the promoters, Frauleen Perls, herself a beautiful, earnest, and cultured young woman. The official inspector of schools is assisted by this guild. Children of the poor receive two full meals gratis in Swiss schools, and the mothers of these children be employed at outside work until a late hour the guild stepping in and taking care of them.

Through the influence of this guild a law was passed last year providing that when a guardian for illegitimate children and his guardian concerned the father of a deserted child to contribute to its support. If the mother be under age also the law, becomes a ward of this guardian. A similar organization to the Zurich guild exists in German cities, and by a similar state law, the absconder of moral obligations is traced easily and extradited. To women is due the large number of temperance restaurants existing in Switzerland. Frau Professor Geiselhardt of Zurich is the originator of this movement.

Socialism is spreading in Switzerland; though how a country governed by the referendum system can be possibly more democratic passeth understanding. Made up of three races, German, French and Italian, socialists of these kindred nations have received a lesson in the bright broadcast seeds of discontent in the brave, beautiful little republic.

Zurich has led in every movement of its history. It was the storm center of the Protestant Reformation ushered in by Switzerland. Zwingli's home is here. In the Grossmunster, whose tall towers have dominated the town for eight centuries, he preached the Protestant crusade and was the church's last Catholic pastor and its first Protestant one. High up in one of the towers is a quaint, sealed figure of Charlemagne, the founder of Grossmunster chapter. Back of the cathedral are the cloisters which now form part of a girls' seminary.

In an old chapel across the road is an interesting collection of articles relating to the Reformation, including letters written by Calvin, Luther and Zwingli, each remarkably distinct. There is also one by Lady Jane Grey; her penmanship is legible as pithy and she wrote the letter in Latin. Back of this little chapel, called the Water church, is a splendid bronze statue of Zwingli.

Zurich is the capital of the canton of Zurich and is situated at the north end of Lake Zurich. It is the largest city in Switzerland. The old, traditional town, with its narrow, steep streets and its high, dark houses, lies on both banks of the Limmat. The rest of the city has spacious thoroughfares and splendid buildings. The lake quays in the Kilnse that were very attractive. Near their northern end is the fine Tonhalle, a popular modern concert building and music school. The greater vitality of their southern end is the beautiful Belvoir park. Near the Tonhalle, the stately main street of the city—the Bahnhofstrasse—leads from the lake north to the railway station. The bridges are striking. Adjacent to the fine Munster bridge is the Wasserkirche, on the right bank, containing the city library with 100,000 volumes and over 5,000 manuscripts. It preserves more valuable objects, including the Codex Vatianus, the Grossmunster in Zurich, manuscripts with Grecian features. Further north is the Rudolphinum, preserved an unknown line from the princes, Eberhard, Duke of Franconia, to the present head, Albert Coloman. It is the only Catholic church in the world not dedicated to human beauty, the legend is that Christ himself performed the act.

Einsiedeln and vicinity were known as the Sacred Forest away back in the eighth century, when a holy hermit, Meinrad, the son of Prince Berthold of Hohenzollern, built for himself a cell in which he lived many years. He was murdered by his guests to whom he had offered hospitality and who had hoped to find concealed treasures; all they got was a chalice and some books. Ravens, whose evil characteristics had been disarmed by the gentle hermit and had become his companions, pursued the assassins to Zurich, screaming and pecking at the villains' heads. The strange actions of the irate birds attracted the townspeople's attention and they questioned the murderers, who, terrified, acknowledged their crime. In the Einsiedeln Abbey cool drinks are served.

When the noble edifice was erected over the hermit's cell the walls of the cell were enclosed in black marble and marked by a cross. Back of the nave of the church and, while plain in style, the richness of the material and the magnificence of design make it impressive. On the altar stands a miraculous statue of the Virgin, made of bronze and many hundreds of years old. The chapel is known as the Holy Chapel, because of the remarkable legend regarding its foundation.

This is the story. On September 14, 948, Saint Conrad, bishop of Constance, came at the invitation of Abbot Eberhard to consecrate the new church. He was attended by the Emperor Otho, the Duke of Adelaide and a large retinue of clergy and countess. As they knelt reverentially to be sprinkled the ceremony, suddenly the church became illuminated with a celestial brilliancy and before the altar stood the Virgin performing the office of dedication, assisted by the four evangelists.

At the right and left of the divine coliseum angels swung censers which emitted a thousand sweet perfumes the apostle, Saint Peter, and the pope, Saint Gregory, at the Great, held the vestments of the heavenly priority, and Saint Stephen and Saint Lawrence, who were the first deacons of the church to be martyred, acted as acolytes and subdeacons. An angelic choir, conducted by the Archangel Saint Michael, sang the introit and before the altar knelt the beautiful virgin mother of God. It is still worship to believe this is that when Conrad began the office of dedication he was interrupted by a celestial voice three times distinctly: "Cease! brother, this chapel has been consecrated by God himself."

The journey from Zurich to Einsiedeln is charming. First comes a sail on a lake which is the loveliest place of its kind in Switzerland. The railroad ride through pine woods, among mountains, over gorges and past valleys that now are covered with fragrant, new-mown hay.

SEEKS PARTY UNITY

APPEAL IN PRESIDENT TAFT'S RECENT LETTER.

Chief Executive Shows How Important It Is to the Country That Republican Government Control Shall Continue.

President Taft's letter to Chairman McKinley which he had the chairman read at the campaign on the high level of patriotism and making party unity the stepping stone to party success, in concluding his recital of the results thus far attained by the democratic congress the president says:

"It is of the highest importance to make this a campaign of education as to facts and to clear away the clouds of misrepresentation that have obscured the real issues and have made it difficult to secure for the Republican majorities in congress the real credit due them from the country for the tremendous task they have accomplished. If this is brought clearly home to all voters, and especially to the young men now voting for the first time, and they become impressed, as they ought to be by this record, with the difference in the governmental efficiency and capacity of the Republican and Democratic parties, they will enroll themselves with the party of construction and progress rather than with the party of obstruction and negation.

"For great benefit, then, is whether the Republican or Democratic party is to be in control of the one or other of representatives, and the president does not see at all a platform on which to stand, has sounded a keynote and given us rallying ground where all can meet to consider measures of irreproachable political party of ideas and state of mind which Mr. Taft makes it clear that the constructive work of the Republican party methods are not only be baited but perhaps assailed by a Democratic house of representatives.

Regarding the tariff the president reiterates his views on which he expressed at various times during the last session of congress, and by reason of a deficit of $58,000,000 into a surplus of $21,000,000 calls attention to the splendid operation of the reciprocal and reciprocity treaties and the work of the tariff board, adding that "All Republicans—conservative, progressive and radical—may well ponder the situation with respect to the tariff board evidence and the recommendations shall justify changes in the rates."

He is particularly happy vein does the president enumerate and discuss the work of the last session of congress, the advanced railroad legislation, the postal savings bank act, the conserve the measures and particularly the laws affecting labor. On this latter point he says:

"The Republican party at the last session of congress has exhibited its deep and sincere interest in the general welfare of the working men and women of the country by adding important measures to its already long record of legislation on this subject. Not only has it enacted the long bill of bills passed and pending in the interest of the working classes, adding, in addition to the previous laws in the interest of human life has ever been enacted in any session than the laws of the recent session."

Crooked Democratic Methods.

Speaking on behalf of Mr. Kern, Mr. Ireryan, leader the democratic house, the president, in a speech, in the hope that temperance men may see their way clear to the Democratic ticket. Simultaneously the brewerylord democratic machine is busy at work in a "wet" Democratic legislature, so as to repeal the county option law.

Great stress is laid by Democratic missionaries throughout Indiana upon Mr. Kern's connection with the Aurora Shively as a brewery attorney and the brewers are believed to have bought the legislature of 1909. Simultaneously Mr. Kern's relations came heavy against him and the brewerylord Democratic machine is busy at work in a "wet" democratic legislature to repeal the local option law.

As a supporter of county option and a temperance man Mr. Hyran recommends Mr. Kern to the people of Indiana as another good temperance man and the effective godfather of the Nicholson law, hoping that a Democratic legislature may be elected to repeal Mr. Kern's temperance. Simultaneously the brewerylord Democratic machine in this state is laboring for a "wet" Democratic legislature to repeal the county option law.

Does the actual moral sensibility of Hyran, Kern and Marshall direct in all this say confusion of ideas, any seeming inconsistency of purpose, and unpractical program of double dealing from which honest men might be tempted to resist? Apparently not. Apparently they think that all total abstinence, local option citizens may cheerfully and sagaciously unite to elect a "wet" Democratic legislature for the express purpose of repealing the option law.—Indianapolis Star.

Higher Prices Everywhere.

A staff correspondent of the London Times, writing from Bengal, says that the chief underlying cause of the discontent and unrest in that province is the general advance in the price of foodstuffs and other necessaries of life, similar reports and complaints come from Ireland, from France, from Russia and from Hungary. Is our poor little Payne tariff take the blame for all of these?—Brooklyn Times.

The only authoritative expression of the Republican policy of protection for it stands today is found in the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. That is the official interpretation of the Republican platform, and the party must stand or fall by it. Evasion would be not only cowardly but stupid.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Serene Payne is perfectly correct in his notion that the tariff will be the main issue. The tariff will be the main issue so long as the Democrats try to make this a free trade country.—Pueblo (Colo.) Public Opinion.

WHAT IS TO BE HOPED FOR?

Voters May Well Ask Themselves This Question Before Giving Support to Democrats.

"The size of the Democratic victory that will be announced on the morrow (is of November 9 will be staggering. It will mean an overwhelming majority in the house of representatives and a gain of many United States senators. In the president's own state, will be lost to the Republicans. New York, the state of the president, will be sweepingly Democratic. Majorities will be so large that people will tire of computing them."—New York World, Thursday, August 25, 1910.

If the result is thus certain, and everything is over except the counting, it is pertinent to inquire what the country will get as a consequence of the revolution, says the New York Globe. If the overwhelming majority of us are to meet our fate as indicated what dividends will be paid? What is the Democratic program? What will we be voting in? Practical people desire an answer to these questions, for political matters affect business, and business conditions affect every man's material welfare.

It is hardly worth while to go back to the Democratic platform to get a clear conception of what Democrats, library wrote that platform, and present every have indicated that Mr. Bryan is no longer in command. To start, then, shall we turn for a statement of the Democratic platform? Copies are numerous, but they are contradictory. In one sense Democrats, them with my surely what is present-day condition, concerning. It is not going too far to say that Democratic authority can be quoted in favor of and against almost every phase of political and economical proposal. A state of mind which leads the Republican also, but its stream is clear and crystal compared with the Democratic muddiness. Mr. Hearst has indicated that he proposes to be a Democrat this year, so have many of Mr. Cleveland's friends; so have not a few Republicans and Independents, some of them on the ground that the Republican party is entirely too radical and others on the ground that it is not radical enough.

In the absence of other authority, one turns with some measure of hope to the Democratic platform, recently issued by the Democratic congressional committee. Here is something official. Party funds have paid for its printing. It is the evidence of what the elected agents and editors, and it contains what is to be regarded as the present Democratic creed. Unfortunately, they are not quite such positive ties to inspire the remark of the English missionary's little girl in central India, who said: "Mother, I suppose the king has issued things to eat every day."

One Year of the Tariff.

These persons who got themselves committed against the Payne tariff act before it had a chance either to justify or condemn itself in actual practice, have no comfort from the report of the treasury department. Its consistent is the favorable story from month to month, from quarter to quarter, and now for the whole year that the critics have to turn to historical history for consolation. They must appeal from the relentless logic of results, as recorded in the customs returns, to the flawless logic of their own extra-session speeches, as printed in the "Congressional Record" for the years 1909 and August 7, 1909. What does a year of the Payne act show? As the treasury department reflects, it shows ordinary customs receipts $15,000,000 above those of the banner fiscal year 1907, and $75,000,000 in excess of receipts for "any other year of our national life except 1907." There was a deficit of $58,729,565 in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1909. This is a surplus for last year of $21,000,000 more than $20,000,000, the corporation tax law, passed as a "revenue measure" to the contrary notwithstanding $27,699,934.

The tariff law has turned a deficit into a surplus; it has been a successful revenue measure; it has accomplished the primary purpose for which import duties are levied. This is the record, as recorded in the publications, and the only way to stimulate the Democratic party to the duty of "revision downward." This revision is to be the return show, taken the form of rates a little lower than those of the Wilson act and averaging 4½ per cent lower than those of the Dingley act; it has been accompanied by a general enlarged trade. The rapid increase in importations offers no evidence of the fact that foreign nations precisely opposite to those adopted in Iowa and Wisconsin. It suggests that a greater food than was anticipated be nourished over the lowest tariff wall.—New York Evening Sun.

Only Promise of Progress.

The best argument for the Republican cause in the coming campaign will be the contrast between Republican deeds and the low imputation by that the Democrats would accomplish if they should get control of the lower house of congress. Stagnation in public business would be the natural result. The real promise of progress is in the Republican party.

The Vital Difference.

In the introductory matter of the Democratic campaign text book is the following sentence:

"The Republican text book differs from a Democratic text book somewhat as history differs from romance; it is concerned with what does happen to give facts and results—a Democratic text book is like a promise to pay without funds to the bank."

The voters will not call the Democrats back to power on the ties that Republicans have done, and will bring back again the Democratic hard times. Do you know of that—Freeport (Ill.) Journal.

If the result is thus certain, and everything is over except the counting, it is pertinent to inquire what the country will get as a consequence of the revolution, says the New York Globe. If the overwhelming majority of us are to meet our fate as indicated what dividends will be paid? What is the Democratic program? What will we be voting in? Practical people desire an answer to these questions, for political matters affect business, and business conditions affect every man's material welfare.

Housekeeping in Hankow

Among our many wanderings our housekeeping in Hankow was an experience I never had before—and shall never, writes Florence Gilbert in the New Idea Woman's Magazine. We have five or six rooms in our house, and I thought, on arriving, judgment you should have experience with them. The peace of mind of the mistress depends largely on her "number one boy," the head servant, who, if efficient, is likely to have come from Ningpo. He is a tall, impressive personage who wears a blue cotton coat fastening on the side and reaches nearly to his ankles, without whom we must never appear in his employer's presence. To do this he only needs to give a snort of disrespect to having the cue in any other position than hanging decorously down the back.

The boss cooks at work may sometimes twist his cue around his head, but the boy never. Through the boy the orders are usually issued to the rest of the household staff, translated from the pidgin English of the mistress. There are the "No. 2 boy," the "amah" or maids, who is the only one with enough work to do to keep him moderately busy; the cook and the second cook, who is learning his trade at the expense of his employer's digestion. The cook's chief business is going to market and preventing his account for his purchases.

It is a strange collection often in that market basket, which a wise housekeeper always sees. Cook finds, perhaps, a cauliflower or two, or leaf that has been exposed in a fly-filled shop; a live chicken or two, grass of course, very unpleasant, teal, snipe and perhaps a fish, more appetizing than one would expect who has seen and smelled the Yangtze water.

The vegetables are all of the sort used for cooking, for no intelligent housekeeper will run the risks involved in eating raw Chinese vegetables and fruits.

In addition to the supplies which can be purchase in the Chinese market every day, one's diet may include fresh butter from Shanghai, and all sorts of canned goods shipped from the United States, Great Britain and Germany. Canned meats, sardines, dried fruits, and other delicacies are sold in shops in the concessions kept by Europeans, Japanese, Parsees—from whom merchants from India—even Chinese. The last, perhaps, they are not quite such prohibitive inventions as to inspire the remark of the English missionary's little girl in central India, who said: "Mother, I suppose the king has issued things to eat every day."

Black Bass Tame in Maine Waters

In the thoroughfare stream at Bridgeton lakes, Maine, where the black bass are protected, they swim about around the steamboat wharf in large numbers and seem tame from the arrival of the anglers in the spring until the water at last grows too cold for comfort. Then they all disappear in one day.

The great attraction for black bass around this wharf seems to be large fly in the fact that a nice, juicy frog is thrown to them once in awhile, and they all save the fun of rushing for it, with the certainty that one of them will get the prize. These bass are so tame that they will take a frog out of the fingers of anybody who will furnish the frog. In fact, they will sometimes "strike" a bare finger if it is offered. There are various ways of feeding these bass, one way being to tie a tempting bait to a string before throwing it into the water. The joke is to let the bass swallow the bait and then pull it back for one in feeding another fish.

The Bower Bird.

One of the most remarkable creatures known to natural history is the bower bird, which builds a miniature cable made of small sticks and twigs which it will perfectly lace together, and then proceeds to decorate the bower bird, which builds a miniature cable made of small sticks and twigs which it will perfectly lace together, and then proceeds to decorate the grounds the males meet and pay their court to the female, the bower being used purely for purposes of recreation and not as a nesting place. The birds are chiefly found in the Owen Stanley range of British New Guinea.—Wide World.

Red Cross Christmas Seals.

Arrangements for the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals for 1910 have been announced by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and the American Red Cross. "A Million for Tuberculosis" will be the slogan of the 1910 campaign. Two features of the campaign are being emphasized. The tuberculosis fighters. The American National Red Cross is to issue the stamps as in former years, but this organization will work in close co-operation with the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which body will share in the proceeds of the sales. The charge to local associations for the use of the national stamps has been reduced from 20 per cent to 12½ per cent, which will mean at least $20,000 more for tuberculosis work in all parts of the United States. The stamps are to be designated as "Red Cross Seals" this year and are to be placed on the back of letters instead of on the front.

Vermont Thrift.

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, editor of the Boston Transcript, is a great admirer of the thrift of the Vermonters, but thinks sometimes they carry it too far.

O'Brien was up in Vermont last summer and he says that there was a friend who had some political aspirations. As they sat on the porch of the farmer's lady of the house say to the hired man: "Hiram, I'm goin' to ask you to walk out and tell me then. Will you promise?"

"I will promise, but—"

"Then this is all I want. Come now; we will go in."

As they walked back along the path Paul Ormstead strolled toward them, a cigar held casually between his fingers. Hiram thought he looked at her strangely as they passed, almost, she thought, with a flash of resentment, suspiciously.

"I'm tired, Tom," she said. "I believe I'll go home. Will you find my brother for me?"

The remainder of the week passed tweetingly for Lillian, who dreaded the coming of Friday, when she must but Tom so dreadfully. She had never dreamed of such a thing, never thought of loving him—how could she when her heart was filled with "He was that way from youth. As a bit he wouldn't play in any dirt worth less than $40 a front foot."

"Jealous?" An angry light stole into her eyes.

"Why—er—yes," he stumbled, disassuredly now. "You know girls never do know their own minds till something like that opens their eyes. If they think they're losing a chap, they—"

"And so you believed that when I thought I was losing you! I would die before I'd let you go! I'd cut and accept your invitation."

Paul Ormstead fingered uncomfortably. "Well, you know, Lillian, don't be hard on a chap. There's no harm in a little rose like that. Lots of fellows do it. Why, honestly, you've no idea how hard it was to keep away from you. Why, I'd have gone out on the garden with that Saunders girl, if I hadn't promised to be with you." Lillian's face was flushed with triumph. "Why, what I saw you do out in the garden with that Saunders girl, I'm sure I don't know. I followed along to make sure he wasn't trying to flirt with you. I saw you do that, so you know I was thinking of you, even if I didn't expect to be."

Lillian rose and then was on effort now to conceal the scorn and anger in her voice.

"Mr. Ormstead," she said, "I have enjoyed my visit very much indeed, and I must confess that the atmosphere of your home is very, very, very stale to prolong." And she turned and left him.

From her window, she watched him strike angrily down the path and out the road. Some minutes later another form swung into view, coming up the road from the direction of Tom's. Tom, dear Tom, for whom she cared very much, but whom she must hate for his attitude to him! As she thought of Paul—the contrast—Tom's big, warm, generous nature, his strange sweet emotion surged through her breast. Suddenly she had dropped at her arms. She buried her face deep, revealing just the tip of a very pink ear.

"Oh, what a little fool I was," she murmured. "What a stupid little—fool!"

Declined.

"Have some of this Welsh rarebit, Ijonson?" asked Bjones as he stirred the golden concoction in the chafing dish.

"No, thanks, Bjones," returned Bjonson, patting his stomach tenderly. "I am unalterably opposed to all corporation taxes."—Harper's Weekly.

It was an overcast, indeterminate sort of a day, but the drug clerk was cheerful as he whistled merrily and polished his counter and chatted with a friend in the front shop. Presently a customer came in and made a small purchase.

"Fine day," he remarked.

"Great!" replied the clerk, enthusiastically.

The customer went out and was followed by another. He, too, made a small purchase and remarked on the weather.

"Mean weather," he remarked.

"Beastly!" said the clerk, disdefully.

"Getting warmer," remarked a third customer.

Ten minutes passed. Another individual drifted in from the outside world and made a purchase.

"Chilly, isn't it?" he said to the clerk.

"Cold as the pole!" agreed the clerk, with a shiver.

His friend had listened to these exchanges with interest.

"Say," he demanded, "what kind of weather do you think this is, anyway?"

"Any kind as the customer," replied the drug clerk.—Youth's Companion.

STORIES OF CAMP AND WAR

OWERED FT. SUMPTER FLAG

Veteran of Famous Battle Celebrates Anniversary of Event by Playing Billiards.

April 12 was the forty-ninth anniversary of the taking of Fort Sumter by the confederate forces. There has always been some doubt as to the identity of the man who fired the first shot in that famous fight; but there has never been a question as to the identity of the man who, on that 12th of April, 1861, lowered the American flag from over the fort in the first defeat suffered by the Union army in the Civil war. The man was Lieut. Col. R. W. Hammer, now a resident of Los Angeles, and the old man, now more than seventy years old, enjoys the fame of that famous feat by playing billiards all afternoon with a fellow soldier at his hotel.

Although having passed his three score years and ten, the old soldier is hale and hearty, and the hand that held the billiard cue was as steady and the eye as clear as they were 49 years ago, when he lowered the flag. It is his boast that he can outwork many a man 20 years younger than himself. He is rather fond of smoking cut cheroots, and he thinks nothing of starting out in the morning for a tennis game over the hills.

Colonel Hammer's memory is remarkable for taking of the fort is well defined, and, to hear him tell of the events which took place during the fight, one would think they had happened yesterday instead of nearly half a century ago.

"I was regimental quartermaster in the first artillery," said Colonel Hammer. "I was assigned to Fort Moultrie, but was transferred to Fort Sumter, which was located about 1,200 yards from Moultrie. The reason for abandoning Fort Moultrie was that it was easily swept by a rifle fire from the tops of the near-by houses.

"The confederate troops were stationed in front of Sumter, and when they saw us transferring all our forces to the fort they began building batteries. The next day, the 12th of April, they sent a message to Major Anderson, who was in command of Fort Sumter, to surrender. Anderson refused, and word was sent that unless he surrendered within an hour they would open fire.

"Our supplies were low, its had been our intention to remain until we had whether or not we could hold out until it reached us we did not know. Anderson agreed that unless provisions reached us in a reasonable time we would leave the fort, and meanwhile he said he would make no hostile movements. We had about 100 men in the garrison, all of them were under General Beauregard, and between two and three o'clock on the morning of the twelfth they opened fire. The fire came from a battery on Johnson's island. It was afterward said that the first shot was fired by former Governor Ruffo of Virginia from the island battery on Morris' island, but this is not right.

"So low was our ammunition that we could not afford to waste a shot; every shell had to tell, so we waited for the first shot from our batteries to take careful aim before replying. It was the signal for a general bombardment.

"There is a popular idea that Anderson surrendered the fort. That is not true. We did not surrender, and never would have. We marched out under Anderson's orders, with our colors flying and the band played 'Yankee Doodle' and we were allowed to board the transport Isabella, which was lying in the harbor.

New Things in the South.

"New to me," said a traveler recently returned from his first trip to the south, as he sat at a table on the wheels that they push alongside the trains when they are transferring passengers in the cars. We saw one of these at a station in North Carolina. Table, maybe four feet long by two feet wide, built rather high and on four wheels big enough so that the table could be moved about on them easily. Part of a tablecloth hung over the top of the table, and underneath, on the shelf underneath, on which they keep supplies from which to replenish the things on sale—oranges, bananas, sandwiches and so on. At a station where there is no dining room or where the train doesn't stop long they roll this table along at the side of the cars, the table top is lifted to the windowsills and all the things on it from the car window.—New York Sun.

LIFT UP YOUR EYES AND LOOK

By BISHOP WILLIAM A. QUAYLE Methodist, Canada.

Text: In everything give thanks; for this is the will of God in Jesus Christ concerning you.—Paul.

Have we not set the song of the Christian life to much to the tune of difficulty, danger and sorrow? "In everything give thanks." I am pretty certain, will, in the multitude of life's experiences, be translated as meaning that whatever difficulty or distress enters your life, be of grateful mood. Do, not sorrow. Be glad through whatever roughness the water wear as we voyage across their uncertain billows.

I am certain of two things in this matter. First, that this is how this Scripture is pretty generally viewed, and second, this is not what it does actually mean. It does mean that, but it means indefinitely more. A farm is on a landscape; and he who confounds farm and landscape is not seeing things as they are. Difficulties are to be encountered and surmounted are to be met and they are to be met with the mood of manly and womanly resignation to the wide-working will of God. But that we are to be grateful for the Roads rather than the sunrises and the noon and the blessed open sky is to make absurd and a lie! I am a man 20 years younger than himself. He is rather fond of smoking cut cheroots, and he thinks nothing of starting out in the morning for a tennis game over the hills.

Colonel Hammer's memory is remarkable for taking of the fort is well defined, and, to hear him tell of the events which took place during the fight, one would think they had happened yesterday instead of nearly half a century ago.

The consideration was $7,000. It is reported that the two offices will be merged and the Journal continued as a daily and the Citizen as a weekly."

The announcement made by Lightweight Champion Ad. Wolgast that he would retire from the ring after defeating Freddie Welsh in London, bestowing the title upon an American aspirant, has started an inquiry all the way to the coast as to why Wolgast the youngest man who ever held the championship, should retire thus early in his career. It is generally understood Cupid has the better of Wolgast and the wedding of the champion is expected during the coming winter, after his return from England.

Traverse City Record: Great is Grand Traverse! Once more her superiority over the other sections of the state as a fruit growing region has been proven to the satisfaction of organs in that line. The exhibit sent to the Western Michigan fair at Grand Rapids captured nearly all the prizes in sight against the keenest competition in the fruit, seed and vegetable divisions. The strong feature of the exhibit was the fruit, and the total prizes that were taken down amount to $200, which includes prizes offered by the fair association, the Western Michigan Development bureau and the Fruit Belt, the magazine published by Geo. E. Howe, former secretary of the development bureau and one of the fruit experts of the country.

Cadillac News: The potato buying season in Cadillac has started, the several dealers offering 41 cents a bushel. The opening price last year was 40 cents, but after a buying period of three days there was a slump and the price did not again reach that figure during the year. J. H. Warner of the Lovejoy-Hoagan Company, says there is likely to be a good market for potatoes all winter and into the spring. The prices will not be those of two winters ago or last winter. Possibly the figure will go somewhat above 40 cents. Wexford county will have a good crop as will Michigan as a state. New York and Maine will be able to deliver large crops: Wisconsin falls short, but with poor crops in the north and southwest there will be a good output for northern potatoes.

Traverse City special: They just can't forget those "cold days" when fought in the Civil war. There has been a hitch in the sham battle that has Spanish-American war veterans find put on for the Grand Traverse soldiers' and Sailors' association, which closed its four days' reunion at Camp Hayes yesterday and the artillery in the charge of the cannon had been left alone by his fellows. With a whoop the men sneaked back. Knapp surrounded him and started away with the field piece and the gunner. Started in right, since forgetting that the battle was only Sham. Comrade Dobson and others with time coats and gray tops jumped into the fray with all the energy they used in days gone by to repulse an attack by the rebels. With cause and fat they fought, driving away the sympathetic pretenders and routing them entirely, while the big crowd cheered loudly. The long parade had to last frequently to allow the veterans from twenty one counties of Michigan to complete the line of march. Many of them dropped out before the short route was covered and more than ever before were met ashamed to ride in the cars, hence instead of marching proudly to the line. But even though nearly fifty years have passed the old spirit is not dead and needs only the occasion to bring it forth.

Weyler's Book Justifies Our Intervention in Cuba

With an unpardonable lack of tact or a grievous attempt at a sinister piece of humor, Gen. Valeriano Weyler, the former Spanish captain general of Cuba, who gained for himself the unenviable title of "butcher," has allowed the publishers to print the title of the sensational book in which he attempts to defend his conduct while the representative of the Spanish crown on the island.

MI MANDO EN CUBA

("My Command in Cuba")

is letters of gory scarlet on a pigeon of frist gray.

Whatever the motive Lazy have been that prompted such a choice, that bloody "cognomen" of a fiery fatty symbolizer the sins and the work which caused so many years of discontent in Cuba. Weyler has been on view before public opinion for butchering his enemies instead of fighting them; and he taunts in our faces the ugly stains that show where he wiped off his knife.

Captain General of the most fertile province in Spain said a proclamation which more than once manifested her intention to throw off the Hourbon yoke, he makes such a case against the country that lays his service as no citizen of the United States could have ever made it.

Justly America's attitude in Cuban mix-up.

Weyler was the best hated man in Cuba when the government of his nation finally recalled him. This hatred will cause him to be cursed the length and breadth of the peninsula.

"I write it," he says, "to give all the facts about my conduct as general in chief, a conduct misinterpreted by army officers, pitiful and low, who wrote me innumerable letters, but by privates, who, on their return to the peninsula, spoke of me with an enthusiasm for valor for which I can never thank them enough. Various reasons prevented me from doing years ago what I could and should have freed my name from a certain blaze a work which I can now do in perfect peace of mind, thanks to the time that has passed, and which has mothed the irritation due to the injuries I suffered at the hands of some men.

"Furthermore I did not wish to sadden Senor Sagasta by recalling the story of our colonial disasters, neither did I feel any pleasure in recounting the illustrious Gen. Martinez Campos, or Professor Cu Ibon, however uncharitably he acted toward me after his return to the capital.

A perusal of the book fails to prove that Weyler kept his promise to treat the subject with perfect moderation; the general's blood is still boiling, and with some justification, for atrocious as his conduct was in many instances, it could not very well be criticized in Spain by the Spanish government.

Had Weyler been endowed with the literary genius of a Barbot or a Las Casas, he could have made a much stronger case against Spain and presented his own actions in a much more favorable light. Unfortunately his knowledge of the writer's craft is as obsolete as his fund of information concerning political economy, general history, national and international politics is meager.

Weyler is not a diplomat; the slippery land of nuances and innuendos is to him terra incognita, a primitive brute, with rudimentary ethics, though unfortunately frank and straightforward, he never ventures an assertion which cannot be supported by documents; he never pays any attention to hearsay but quotes people's letters in extenso.

A fascinating type, after all, for the observer personally, with the lessons of history, but imagine what a Weyler would have developed into if he had not been born some 200 years too late; and in fact, he had been riding a capariscned mount, or, if he had been allowed to range over Europe during the Twelve years' war!

General Weyler's style is very trying; even his proclamations, chiefly modeled after Napoleon Its oratorical gems, rarely sound the note that wakes a people or an army thrill. His reports, those of the Cuban campaign with all the facts, figures, names recorded in husband fashion, day by day, is well nigh unreadable.

But the documents he publishes in support of his thesis (some of them of a confidential character and which must have been secured through "diplomatic means") make it well worth while wading through an otherwise dull, shapeless and indigestible piece of writing.

First of all we are made to realize how hopeless the plight of the Spanish commanders had become in the island when Weyler took his station in hand; the many generals who preceded him had been losing ground from day to day; their callow to the Spanish government gave information of a pessimistic character of which the Spaniards and the press were seldom apprised; their confidential correspondence betrayed hearts-rending fears more than once poor Gen. Martinez Campos had humbly confessed himself beaten, while the letters of the Spanish nation to Madrid show that he was practically over.

Weyler himself, when placed in command of the Cuban army was in no better plight, and even when he was entitled to, an honest account of the situation.

"When I landed in Cuba," he writes, "I did not ever suspect the terrible conditions that prevailed in the island. I did not know anything beyond what the minister of war had told me and what I had read in the papers or in anonymous letters sent by Spaniards living in Cuba, and I thought that all of them exaggerated the facts in my knowledge of the secret documents I have appended to this book. How gloomy the outlook was is set forth graphically in a confidential letter from Captain General Blanco to Canovas del Castillo, prime minister of Spain.

"Havana, 14th January, 1897.

realized the gravity of the situation, I refused to believe it; my visits in Cuba, Principe and Holguin confirmed me in the worst of my fears. Considerable, I did not express all my thoughts, and I decided to set out only for important communities, but the towns in the interior. The few Spaniards who live in the island do not dare to mention their origin except in the cities. The rest of the population hates Spain. Wherever you pass a Creole and ask him where are their husbands are, they answer with terrifying frankness: 'In the mountains with chief So and So.'

"You could not get anyone to carry a message for 500 or 1,000 reestas; he would be hanged if he were ever caught.

The rebels who charged Weyler with wanton cruelty either deceived themselves from secret publishing sheets of violence likely to terrorize the few remaining supporters of the Spanish rule. To quote Weyler:

"The insurgents did not return in any way the considerate treatment accorded to them by the generous commander (Martinez Campos). At the beginning of the war Martino Gomez showed himself very fair; but Maceo, as I shall prove by authentic documents, produced his basis to see fire to all the sugar mills whose owners were not paying war tribute, to plunder and loot the country, to shoot merciless all the messengers, men and women repairing railroad lines or bringing provisions into the villages. Worse yet: The insurgent chiefs did not hesitate to kill with their own weapons defenseless females, and Maximo Gomez in his 'Memoires' confesses to having shot personally a man who had sentenced to death, a deed which I call wilful murder. And still that individual pretends to call on 'assassin.'"

As his authority for the foregoing statement General Weyler not only quotes extracts from the Cuban papers, but appends a proclamation of Maceo, Gomez's lieutenant, to his bands.

"Numerous is Arms' Destroy, destroy everything, dire and sinight; to blow up bridges, to derail trains, to burn up the villages and sugar mills, to annihilate Cuba in the only way to defeat our enemies. We have not to account for our conduct to anyone. Diplomacy, public opinion and history don't matter. It would be sheer insanity to seek the laurels of the battlefield, to bear the fire of the enemy's artillery and contribute to the glory of the Spanish commander. The essential thing is to convince Spain that Cuba will be but a heap of ruins. What compensation will she receive then for the sacrifice entailed by the campaign? We must burn and raze everything. It would be folly to fight as we thought we have done our army. Where rifles are of no avail let dynamite do the work.

"The only way to subdue such bloodthirsty, desperate pirates was to adopt their own tactics. The insurgents, of their own admission, never gave nor accepted battle; but harassed the regular and defenseless troops with a system of "Concentration" seemed to be the only solution of the problem, for the wives and children of the insurgents

Few them constant aid and kept them informed of every movement of the Spanish regulars.

Says General Weyler:

"Of all the measures I took the most bitterly criticised was the concentration, which saved my troops from being uselessly decimated and prevented the landing of arms and munitions contained for the enemy. I need not defend that system. Wherever has a smattering of the history of modern wars shows that it was copied by the English in the Transvaal and the Americans in the Philippines, a fact most flattering to my pride as a general.

"If individuals were sometimes summarily shot under my generalship, as it happens in the course of every war, they were put to death in obedience to the laws and regulations, never for the mere reason that they were insurgents. I pardoned those who returned to the fold, and showed much clemency to all those who came to me, however black their past may have been."

It is a matter of regret that General Weyler should not have deemed it advisable to volunteer more information as to the organization of the concentration camps. He says that one pound of meat and a quarter of a pound of rice were allowed to every individual over fourteen, and one half that ratio to children, which, some quite sufficient under the circumstances. A few paragraphs, however, couched in his blunt, soldierly style, setting at naught the terrible charges preferred against him in connection with the state system of warfare would a lawyer, in interpretation, but they were lacking in the requisite amounts to a confession of guilt. Weyler's weak attempt at explaining that the women and children of insurgent forces were "concentrated," but obliged to behold themselves where the head of the family was supposed to be found. This is worse yet, for no one can conceive the appalling abuses which such an order, emanating from the general in chief, would have countenanced, and justified, by revolutionary bands, were equally as numerous from east to west and from west to east and yet he has not be located with any certainty. What an evidence have we here, that the Spanish officers in Cuba were not the cowards we have been taught to believe! Weyler, in his memoirs, says: "I was informed by my subordinates that the insurgents, of their own admission, never gave nor accepted battle; but harassed the regular and defenseless troops with a system of "Concentration" seemed to be the only solution of the problem, for the wives and children of the insurgents families whose men were not serving in the ranks of the regular army. Refused army rations, or, called to remain from starvation, they could not but scorn a burnt down hamlet, they could not but succumb to hunger and exhaustion.

"Had the Cubans been brutally honest, I would have omitted such a damaging admission.

Up to this day we have heard only the kinds dealing with the Cuban war, pamphlets put forth by the insurgents and notoriously mendacious. Not a single publication, which appeared seemed grossly the attitude of the United States against the Spanish government, or even unanimously concerning the Americans for "robbing Spain of her colony.

Now, however, we have the facts presented almost without any comments and certainly without embellishment by a Spaniard, who loves his country and frankly detests the Americans.

Once or twice he registers a protest against the senate's decision concerning the recognition of belligerency or the campaign of defamation directed against him in American papers.

He complains that in March, 1896, when he and the situation well understood, the senate of the United States interfered most unfairly, for it recognized the belligerency of the insurgents, thereby giving them moral support.

This is less convincing than the majority of his arguments, for the senate based its action on letters in which he admits his failure to stop the progress of the insurrection.

His severest charge against the United States is contained in the following paragraph, which he has vague to taking a serious; as some other statements of his:

"The United States were against everything that would bring about a termination of the war. American citizens held several million worth of Cuban bonds, issued with the providing that the island would pass under the domination of the United States ten years after Cuba would have separated herself from Spain. The Yankees saw that the time was ripe for the much-desired independence of Cuba and its corollary, the annexation thereof; was becoming a more and more remote possibility. But there was no reason why the peninsula should have robbed all the good which originated in America."

But on the whole the picture his letters and reports, as well as the letters of Martinez Campos he publishes, present to our eyes of Cuba in the years preceding the Maine incident, world have justified any nation, more or less, in interfering for the sake of humanity; a population unanimous for the desire for independence; a bloody war which could only lead to an epidemic yellow fever and the ruin of the island; a war in a dreary waste for years to come; the rights of foreign land owners and investors trampled under foot, and the horror had to be ended.

Spain did not lose Cuba as a consequence of the war with the United States, but as the result of Spain's military representatives in that island. Cuba was recognized as belonging to Spain in 1897, and the few Spaniards residing in the coast towns, the only safe abode for them, felt themselves a despised, outracted minority; besides what the minister of war had told me and what I had read in the papers or in anonymous letters sent by Spaniards living in Cuba, and I thought that all of them exaggerated the facts in my knowledge of the secret documents I have appended to this book. How gloomy the outlook was is set forth graphically in a confidential letter from Captain General Blanco to Canovas del Castillo, prime minister of Spain.

cleaned up the back yards as well as the streets, much to the disgust of the natives, who thought that this was an unnecessary, if not an unholy, practice. But the supervision does not stop there. All the food is inspected, and, in spite of the distance from the United States and the trouble and cost of refrigeration and the expense of transportation and loss in a tropical climate, the prices are actually lower in most cases than they are in Washington.

Not only a marriage license, but a license to live, must be obtained before a man can be married in Cuba. The department of agriculture has been called into service in connection with the food, and, in addition to carrying out the provisions of the pure food and drug act, the obtains in this country, there is a special inspector of all foodstuffs intended for the consumption of the people of Cuba. Not a chief sight come near getting what they pay for and pay less for it than if they were living at home in the land of milk and honey.

Not only a marriage license, but a license to live, must be obtained

Banking Law Just to All.

Lansing—Henry M. Zimmerman, commissioner of banking for Michigan, gave a speech before the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks in connection with the operation of the law regarding the segregation of deposits in Michigan. Mr. Zimmerman said in part:

"The Michigan law is, I believe, equally just to the banker, the business interests and the savings depositor. It has caused no dissatisfaction on the part of the commercial depositor or commercial borrower. The bankers have contributed to convert savings deposits to commercial deposits, and have been able to contribute to increase in volume and number. Business conditions have not been upset, nor has it caused an unprecedented demand for any of the securities which are legal savings investments.

"The objection has been raised that savings depositors under this plan may make preferred creditors in case of insolvency. Since savings banks may require depositors to give notice of withdrawal of deposits, it is of the utmost importance to them to have assurance that the funds set aside to meet their demands, for otherwise they would be required to wait until the bank is depleted of its available assets to meet the demands of commercial depositors.

"The defenseless position of the savings depositors, so apparent, makes imperative the legislation of such a law, in those state at least where banks are permitted to transact all both a commercial and savings business. Common honesty demands such protection to those who depend for repayment may be deferred by the failure of a bank. Such a law will not make depositors of this class preferred creditors, since all the assets required by the commercial department of the bank, plus its capital stock, will be first used to pay in satisfaction of demand claims. Indeed, it will make the savings depositor a preferred creditor it simply prevents a preference as to commercial depositors, requiring each class to stand on its own assets, and without preference against the other.

Change Laws as to Game and Fish.

About 200 sportsmen attended the big banquet tendered the State Sportsmen's association by the Kalamazoo County association at the Bronson house. Dr. William Pierson of the state organization has appointed a committee to revise the game laws. The association goes on record as favoring a law prohibiting the spring shooting of all water fowl and providing resident gun licenses to be exacted in all localities, the proceeds to be used in the propagation of game. It would also have the supervision of game and fish protection and propagation placed in a department of conservation state commission, and asks that the next legislature appropriate $25,000 for the ensuing biennium to the legislature, and $10,000 for the state game fish refuges and reservations and proper care of game thereon is recommended.

President Merchon will appoint a legislative committee. Officers elected are: President, W. B. Merchon, Kalamazoo; vice-president, Frederick Dixon, Monroe; treasurer, George M. Brown, Detroit; secretary, F. K. Stevens, Saginaw.

Twentieth Regiment Reunion.

The forty-sixth annual regimental reunion of the Allant and Twentieth Michigan infantry was held in Jackson. There were over eighty present of the 1,102 officers and men which composed the regiment September 1, 1862. Adams Traver of Company B was there from Mitchell, Ore.; James Vennoyer of the same company was there from Chicago, and A. B. Taylor of Company F from Vale, Cal.

Third Cavalry Elects.

The Third Michigan cavalry in reunion elected the following officers: President, Lieut. Col. H. M. Duncan, City; vice-president, H. M. Lay, Bronson; secretary-treasurer, Clark G. Hanson, Lansing.

The election of Company D, Fourteenth Michigan infantry, resulted as follows: President, J. S. Clark, Whitehall; vice-president, Hiram Dunnewell of Indington. Special subjects relative to the battle of Nashville were discussed by Jesse L. Suter and Hayard Wyman of Washington.

Tax Commission Pushed.

The state tax commission was in session fixing dates for hearings in review of tax assessments in different counties of the state. As the commissioners predicted early in the year, they will not be able to hold all the reviews asked before the boards of supervisors hold their fall meeting. During the remaining time only the more important hearings will be held and they will be in chief way as many discrepancies as possible.

Wife Deserters Being Punished.

Michigan's wife deserting law, which permits of extradition of husbands from other states for this offense, seems to be getting action in great shape," said the attorney general in discussing the law in Mr. Joseph county in which an opinion has been furnished by the attorney general. He has asked requests for information and opinions relative to some phases of the law and many extradition papers come here, the basis for which is a warrant for abandonment of his family by some husband and father. The law seems working fine, and the end that is frequently invoked.

In an opinion furnished the St. Joseph prosecutor the attorney general argues that the amendment of two years imposed upon a wife deserter in that county. It was asked whether the punishment was valid in view of the indeterminate sentence law, that a definite period of punishment was prescribed does not affect its legality, as the indeterminate sentence ner prescribes that the maximum sentence served shall not exceed the longest term fixed by law and that the minimum shall not exceed one-half the maximum.

Municipalities Meet Next Week.

Beginning next Wednesday the League of Michigan Municipalities will hold a three days' convention in Lansing. The sessions will be held in the senate chamber and in committee rooms. A long list of interesting program of papers has been prepared. Lawton T. Hemans, Democratic candidate for governor, is president of the organization.

Postmasters Will Meet.

Postmasters from all parts of the state attended the annual meeting of the Michigan Association of Postmasters at Kalamazoo. Addresses were made by President J. Q. Adams of Jackson, Homer Warner of Detroit, J. C. Ketchum of Hastings, N. H. Colman of Kalamazoo, V. Ballock of Port Huron; P. E. Nesbitt of Ann Arbor, Mrs. Mary J. Dunnewell of Indington. Special subjects relative to the postal service were discussed by Jesse L. Suter and Hayard Wyman of Washington.

MICHIGAN NEWS TERSELY TOLD

Port Huron—Cyril DeBaker, the Capac man who is alleged to have struck his wife on the head with a hammer a week ago while in a frenzy of jealousy, was arraigned in police court on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder. The prisoner pleaded not guilty and bail was fixed in the sum of $1,000. When DeBaker's wife was taken to the Port Huron Hospital it was found that a hole about an inch and a half in diameter had been punched clearly through the skull. The broken piece of bone came out almost in one piece. She is in a precarious condition and the doctors in attendance are yet doubtful as to the outcome of her injuries.

Saginaw—George A. Thrasher, for 15 years a member of the board of education, and a member of the board of water commissioners, died at his home after an illness extending over a period of two years. He suffered from a complication of diseases. Until stricken he was active in Democratic politics. By occupation he was a marine engineer, but retired about five years ago. He was 62 years old and had lived in Saginaw 47 years. He leaves a widow, three sons and two daughters, all grown.

Kalamazoo.—Claiming that their 13-year-old son was so terribly beaten by Prof. Arthur De Long, of the Frank street school, that he is under the care of a physician, parents of Arthur Dehaut asked the prosecuting attorney to investigate the matter. The matter has also been reported to the humane society. Such a law is surely on the Scout, who is attending the boy, says the welts on his body are numerous and most have been inflicted by an exceedingly heavy strap. School officials say that the three of the boy asked that he be punished. DeLong denied any punishing the boy.

Ann Arbor.—The Michigan Cider Makers' Association will hold its second annual meeting in this city at the Auerbach Hotel. Delegates from the Ohio and New York associations will be present. Vinegar making and treatment of cider for home use and for market will be the subjects discussed. Plans for making the association more beneficial to its members will also be adopted.

Rate Making in Chicago.

The Metropolis of the West Has a Problem on Its Hands in the Municipal Regulation of Corporations That Will Tax Its Best Efforts to Satisfactorily Solve.

Two interesting contributions to the subject of Municipal Regulation of Public Service Corporations appeared recently appeared. One of those was by Henry C. Morris to the July number of The World Today, and the other was by Alderman William J. Pringle, in The Voter.

Mr. Morris in his article tells of the investigations made by commissions of experts employed by the city of Chicago into the subject of telephone charges, and from the report of those experts shows that the rates charged by the company under the present ordinance are $900,000 a year less than they should be. In view of this fact—a fact proven by the city's experts—Mr. Morris asks:

"Will the council have the courage and fairness to increase rates where they are found to be too low, and if so, will the public sustain the city council in doing so?"

Alderman Pringle is the chairman of the committee appointed by the council to negotiate the telephone ordinance. Mr. Pringle's article in The Voter may be taken as an answer to that of Mr. Morris, and he replies in the affirmative to practically all cause.

The whole principle of municipal regulation will be on trial in Chicago during the next three or four years, for during which time the telephone rates will be discussed and arranged for a five-year period, and not only in Chicago interested in the subject, but the entire country, for the manner in which the handling of the question in Chicago will set the pace in other communities.

Referring to the report made by the commission of experts, Mr. Morris says:

"These gentlemen spent some two years in the investigation of the books and accounts of the Chicago Telephone company, and Mr. Stevens, who submitted to the city controller, substantially presented the results of a thorough investigation of its operations. It divides the service furnished by the corporation into twenty-six classes. On eight of them it appears there is almost surplus earnings of $255,112, while on the other items there is a similar deficit of $1,155,589, leaving a net deficit of $908,523."

Mr. Pringle, in The Voter, begins his article with a statement of the growth of the telephone service in Chicago which shows the following:

1878	60
1880	3,641
1885	5,610
1894	10,767
1895	27,837
1896	48,744
1904	88,744
1908	181,188
1909	201,940
1910	220,000

Continuing Mr. Pringle says:

"The ordinance under which the Chicago Telephone company is now operating was passed by the Chicago city council March 4, 1907. It is not a contract ordinance, and is subject to future amendment. Among other things, the ordinance provides that the city council may fix the telephone rates for the different classes of service after two and a half years from the date of the passage of the ordinance; the end of the two and a half years was reached on June 6, 1910. It is further provided that after the first revision, the city council may revise rates from time to time, such revision to take place not oftener than once in two years. Under the terms of the ordinance the city council is also given the right under paragraph seven to prescribe and regulate the mode of computing and collecting rates, etc. Under the ordinance, the city comptroller also is empowered to fix rates, secure from the telephone company data for the consideration and guidance of the city council in the matter of rate making.

"During the year 1909 the city comptroller, in cooperation with the telephone company, inaugurated a system of accounting for the telephone company and later the business of the company was analyzed upon this basis. The new system was designed to assist in furnishing the city data as to the cost of operating the different classes of telephone service, and in this the cost of the different classes of service had never been segregated. When it is known that the company furnishes 15 different classes of service, it will readily understood that the work of obtaining the cost of each class is a matter of some and very great.

"D. C. & W. B. Jackson, engineers, and Arthur Young & Co. accountants, acting as experts in the matter, and working under the direction of the city comptroller, prepared a report covering the work which the city was submitted to the city council on May 9, 1910. The report was immediately referred to the committee on gas, oil and electric light for the purpose of aiding said committee in its endeavor to fix an equitable rate. Shortly after the report was the report reached the committee, a number of public meetings were held. At these meetings the report was taken up for discussion. At these meetings appeared certain representatives of the telephone company, among them H. Bumy, president, and A. S. Hibbard, general manager. After a full hearing before the committee it was decided by the committee that, while the report was very helpful and reflected credit on its compilers, it was not full enough and comprehensive to afford the committee sufficient data on which to proceed at once to rate fixing.

"A preliminary survey of the field is being made from an analysis of the company's income accounts and balance sheets for each year of its operation. These show or should show the earnings from operation and the income from sources other than operation, for each of the sources of revenue, and the operating expenses in detail, covering the expenditures for labor and supplies for each of the major divisions of operation, such as exchange service, wire plant expense, traffic, general expense, taxes, etc. The income account will be carried forward to show the distribution of net earnings for interest on funded indebtedness, on floating indebtedness, appropriations to reserves and for construction, dividends, etc., to the final surplus for the year. The balance sheets will be analyzed to show in detail the company's assets and liabilities.

"It will be necessary to obtain, for the purpose of this investigation, the cost of the company's plant used and devoted to furnishing the telephone service in Chicago. This can be obtained in two ways: From the book of construction stages of the plant showing the cost-to-date since the first year of the company's existence. The cost of furnishing service with this method will be obtained from an analysis of the company's operating expenses for the three or four preceding fiscal years—which will likewise show the cost of the plant, labor and original records of the company.

"The telephone company was requested to produce its books and its books of record and vouchers could be analyzed with the least inconvenience to it, and a large, well-lighted room was set aside for this purpose in the company's building. Those engaged in the work have found it necessary to consult many reports of the company records and explanations of the company's officers, which, at the time, have been met with frankness and a generous spirit of cooperation.

"A few weeks ago an article relating to telephone revision was given space in the Engineering and Contracting magazine published in Chicago. The keynote of the article consists in a query as to whether the members of the council would have sufficient stamina and intelligence to enable them to be fair to the telephone company, and to protect the public. The article similar in tone to Telephony, a publication, largely devoted to telephone matters. We have also noted the suggestion made from out in one or two other places. The writer feels sure that there is no good reason why the council and public should be impressed with this idea. The council, we think, is much in the past that would cause one to think that it is easy for telephone company and other telephone companies are not able to succeed in fixing the rates they intended they have capable men who are very loyal to the interests of the company.

"In the past it has never been expedient to ask the representatives of government to be fair to public utility corporations. There always has been considerable concern as to whether the representatives of government would be able to be fair to the general public. In this particular instance there is no reason for worry. The investigation is to determine all the facts and to be fair, is prejudice to no interest. If the findings warrant an increase, well and good. If they do not, a reasonable return on the actual investment, an increase in rates would be unfair to the people of Chicago. If the difficulty lies in an unnerved disposition on the part of the operating officers over the different classes of service, the rates of revenue fixed by the council should be adjusted for the benefit of the public, the stockholders and the work and the judicial temper of fairness of the commission and the people of Chicago should not be questioned until occasion therefor arises.

"Whether the telephone corporation should submit to regulation by the public is no longer a mooted question. Logic and current history are in favor of the proposition that the rate and extent of such regulation are still open to intelligent discussion. Created to serve the public, the telephone corporation has justly been endowed with numerous powers, for the acceptance of which it must and does recognize that it is assuming definite responsibilities which accompany the privileges received. It is entitled, in return, to receive a fair and adequate service at reasonable rates. Which is the public, from whom this grant of exclusive power originated, is entitled, through its competent representatives, to a supervisory voice in the management.

"To secure to all these franchise privileges are being, or will be, granted, and to protect the interests of our business methods, for the future, there is no question of success in this field. To believe that these privileges never are or never will be fair to the public show an ignorance of the experience at some time or place by nearly all American cities."

NEEDS NO DEFENSE

SUCCESS OF PROTECTION POLICY ITS OWN ARGUMENT.

Prosperity of the Country Under Beneficent System Has Been Continuous—Figures That Prove Truth of Claim.

The policy of protection justifies itself, and its continuance is a convincing argument in favor of its continuance.

The energy generated by the confidence of 90,000,000 people in the stability of the policy of protection has set in motion and kept in motion 400,000 factories, having an annual output of more than $13,000,000,000, and paying out in wages $2,000,000,000 to 6,000,000 people, whose purchasing power depends upon their employment.

One gentleman who has spoken here has referred to what he called the "protected sections" of our country, but the fortunes of all our people—north, south, east and west—farmers, manufacturers, artisans, laborers and professional men—are all bound together.

Years ago, when the ratification of the federal constitution was under consideration in the Massachusetts assembly, Jonathan Smith, a farmer from the Berkshire hills, in reply to one Amos Singletary, said the whole question in a nutshell then and for all time when he said:

"These lawyers, these moneyed men, these men of learning, are all cuttered in the same concern with us, and we must all sink or swim together."

The policy of protection has added to the gold and from America mines foreign gold paid for the products of American labor.

It has kept all the wheels, shafts and bands of production in motion and they have developed an aggregate of 15,000,000 horse power, equivalent to the power of 90,000,000 men.

It has built railroads by giving them something to carry from place to place, and cities and towns and factories have sprung up along their tracks by magic.

It has built by locating factories in that midst, and the farmer knows all the difference between the village and the city.

It has cleared and improved farms and made farmers prosperous by giving them a home market for what they raise to sell.

It has fostered and encouraged American industry until our own internal trade, lakes and railroads is estimated at $25,000,000,000.

It has built up our prosperity, gathered from the legitimate spoils of trade, in which both labor and capital have participated; justified by the policy of other nations; and secured to them the protection of their statesmen.

It is justified by the quality of American citizenship as compared with the quality of foreign society, this justified by the savings of labor, and justified by every comfort and by an American workingman under the American flag.—Representative Hamilton of Michigan.

Pretty Poor Economic Fodder.

Free trade advocates have been bringing to the "lay it all to the tariff" proposition, and it is somewhat shocked because, as he learns, there is an effort to enlist the farmers more fully in the free trade cause. If he did not know it, the farmers always have been deeply interested in that matter, for they have realized that the development of home industries means bigger and better markets for the American farmer, and that the farmer should they not favor protection, both for the direct advantages which it throws about their interests and for the indirect benefits accruing to the community at large? There have been many attempts to "fool the farmer" on this point, but they never succeeded. That is one reason why as a rule a lifelong farmer is a lifelong supporter of the republican. Democratic tariff for revenue only is pretty poor economic fodder for the American tiller of the soil.—Troy Times.

No Reproaches, No Scolding.

President Taft writes in excellent vein. He appears to believe that while the president of the United States may be, by ancient practice, the leader of the party that elects him, he need not be the censor of the thought of the nation. Not a few men in President Taft's position would have replied rather heels to criticisms of their policies similar to those which have been levelled at him.

A QUEER UNIVERSITY.

Cairo Has the World's Oldest Educational Institution.

"When we think of Harvard or Yale, the former dating from 1636 and the latter from 1701, we think of them as old universities," says a writer in the American Educational Review; "but when we pass to the other side of the world we discover that even the oldest American universities are in reality very young institutions.

"The oldest educational institution in the world is the University of El Azhar, Cairo, founded in the year 988 by the great Saladin. It is the central seat of learning for the whole Mohammadan world, as well as a fountain of spiritual life. It occupies an ancient mosque in the Arab quarter of Cairo, surrounded by a confusing maze of narrow streets where the population is made up of representatives of every race that follows the prophet.

"The old mosque covers several acres and consists of a series of courts surrounded by long colonnades with low roofs supported by forests of columns, the floors of red tiles are covered daily by a multitude of men and boys, squatting in semicircles around their teachers, who sit with their backs to the columns lecturing in monotones.

"The chancellor of the university is always a descendant of the prophet and is usually a man of ability and learning. He occupies apartments in El Azhar and is not only the supreme ecclesiastical but the civil head of the church of Egypt.

"There is no organization similar to that in modern universities. Any reputable man who desires to teach can claim the privilege by application and is assigned a column where he may sit and impart the truth as he or he thinks proper. His fame or ability will attract more or less students and disciples, who pay him fees according to their means."

THE SCOLD'S BRIDLE.

Brutal Punishment to Which Women Were Once Subjected.

The branks, or scold's bridle, or gossip's bridle, was neither more nor less than a muzzle. It was in general use in Great Britain from the sixteenth to the eighteenth century, and in Scotland as well it was more wanted for certain offenses, some at least of them more imaginary than real. The brutal element of torture, even a dog's leather muzzle, is uncomfortable. How much more the scold's muzzle! It combined, according to a high authority, Mr. Walfell, of a kind of cross or frame-work of iron, which was locked upon the head, and it was armed in front with a gag, a plate or a sharp cutting knife or point, which was placed in the poor woman's mouth so as to prevent her moving her tongue, or it was so placed that if she did move it or attempt to speak it was cut in a most frightful manner. With this cage on her head and with the gag firmly pressed and locked against her tongue the miserable creature, whose sole offending perhaps was that she raised her voice in defense of her scold rights against a brutal and boastful husband who had spoken honest truth of some one high in office in her town, was paraded through the streets, led by a chain by the hand of a beldam, the beadle or the constable or chained to the pillory, the whipping post or market cross, to be exposed to every conceivable insult and degradation, without even the power left her of asking for mercy or of crowing amendment for the future, and when the punishment was over she was turned out from the town hall or the place where the latter punishment had been inflicted, outraged, disgraced, bleeding, faint and degraded, to be the subject of commiseration perhaps among her neighbors.—London Family Herald.

Colors of the Stars.

Although there is no relation apparent between the two phenomena, yet it is interesting to record the fact that among the stars certain colors appear to characterize different stages of change, or evolution. Red stars, according to Sidereal Messenger, vary in color from orange, differ widely in their constitution from white or yellow ones, and it has been thought that varying colors may give a clew to progressive changes in the heavenly bodies. Sirius, for instance, is said to have changed from red to white, and some have was noticed that Arcturus is fading from red toward yellow.

A Fairly Good Appetite.

Kaffra, Zululand, Indians eat the fat boy in "Pickwick" may well be quoted as fearful examples of voracity; but even their gastronomic feats are exceeded by the full grown Bakiao, who will fifty eat twenty pounds of flesh and oil if he has the chance, while on the authority of Admiral Sarichoff a Yakut of Siberia has been known to consume in twenty-four hours "the hind quarter of a large ox, twenty pounds of fat and a quantity of melted butter for his drink."

Burning a Diamond.

The diamond was first burned by Davy and Faraday in 1814. It was held on a platinum rod in a glass globe of twenty-two cubic inches of oxygen and the Duke of Tuscany's burning glass—a lens of four feet focus and one of three inches separated air and one-half feet—concentrated the sun's heat. In three quarters of an hour the stone burnt into a scarlet flame. Out of focus it blazed four minutes and was consumed in two more trials.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

Wellington's Cool Interview With a Murderous Maniac.

One day as the Duke of Wellington sat writing at his library table quite alone his door was suddenly opened without a knock or announcement of any sort, and in stalked a great man, who stood before the commander in chief with his hat on and a savage expression of consideration.

"The duke was of course a little annoyed at such an uncomfortable interruption, and, looking up, he asked, "Who are you?" "I am Diogenes," was the singular answer. "Well, what do you want?" "Your life." "My life?" "Yes; I am sent to kill you." "Very odd," said the duke, sitting back and calmly gazing at the intruder. "Not at all, for I am Diogenes," said the stranger, "and I must put you to death." "Are you obliged to perform this duty today?" asked the commander in chief. "Yes, very busy just now and have a large number of letters to write. It would be very inconvenient today." The visitor looked hard during a moment's pause. "Call again," continued the duke, "or write and make an appointment." "You'll be ready?" "Without fail," was the reply.

The maniac, awed doubtless by this stern old soldier, backed out of the room without further words and for an hour later was safe in bedlam.—London Graphic.

Little things like bacilli will live in a temperature of above 211 degrees F. Experimental observations of stokers have shown that, sun be a cooler in the salamander. Dante made six fiery circles in his hell and fair consistent to resort to ice for the seventh and last condemnation of souls. Heat is, in other words, a relative term. Heat is beneficient if you like things hot. It depends on the point of view. Heat is supposed to be enervating. The hookworm is engendered by it. But, then, a race horse will go much faster on a hot day than a cold one. The fervent rays of the sun appear to lubricate the joints. There are various kinds of heat, such as just common, everyday heat, prickly heat and the heat of debate, etc.—Kansas City Times.

ALIMONY AND DIVORCE.

Now comes a New York woman who is sure to be charged with "woman's inhumanity to woman," professing to be shocked at the multiplicity of divorces and proposing a remedy in the total abolition of alimony, she Orinda Rex. She conceives the prospect of alimony to be the chief cause of divorces granted to women and denounces the system as nothing but a simple graft. Undoubtedly many designing women can consistently take no exceptions to these charges, and it is not to be questioned that some unscrupulous lawyers will cooperate with women for the purpose of obtaining financial emolument through the operation of the divorce courts, but that alimony, or the desire to obtain alimony, constitutes the prevailing cause and purpose of women seeking legal separations from their husbands, it is hard to believe, any more than it would be wise, safe or just to do away with the law providing for alimony. Society has cause to recognize that there is such a thing as a justifiable divorce, and there is certainly such a thing as a woman needing and deserving support from the man from whom she seeks and obtains a divorce, and to abolish alimony would work hardship on many women and children, alike blameless for the causes as well as the fact of the separation.

Has everybody forgotten Halley's comet? There was a reaction after the trepidation and intense curiosity aroused by its approach, and now, for a period of jilted and bad at unsettling hours of the early morning in the hope of getting a glimpse of it, there are many who would not, for the promise of a good square look at the wonderer, make the journey of a mile across the street. They have seen it once, and so far as they are concerned, it is an old story. Halley's comet is not beyond viewing distance from the earth; yet it would be seen. The reason of its invisibility is its nearness to the sun. It sets in the early evening, when the twilight is strong enough to hide it with a veil of light. At the end of each month it will set before sunset. It is further south in the sky than the sun.

The Canadian authorities have been so much disturbed over the report that 15,000 American farmers have left the Canadian northwest that they have undertaken an inquiry of their own. The result of that is the admission that 261 farmers and their families have returned to the United States. During the same time they claim that over 16,000 settlers have entered Canada from this country. Perhaps it is up to the United States to investigate these last figures.

COUNTRY ALL RIGHT

A STRIKINGLY STRONG ARTICLE BY COL. HARVEY.

THE WRITER SEES NO CLOUD

"A Plea for the Conservation of Conscious Sense" That Is Pleasing With Cordial Approval.

A strikingly strong article by Colonel George Harvey in the North American Review, for September, is written in a view of such hopefulness for the American future that it has attracted wide attention. The article is entitled, "A Plea for the Conservation of Common Sense," and it is meeting with the cordial approval of business men of all shades of political opinion throughout the entire country. In part Colonel Harvey says:

"Unquestionably a spirit of unrest dominates the hour. But, if it be true that fundamentally the condition of the country is sound, "must we necessarily succumb to despondency, abandon effort looking to retrieval and refuge like cravens before clouds that only threaten? Rather should we not to analyze conditions, search for causes, find the root of the disease, which even now affects only in men's minds, and then, after the American fashion, apply such remedies as seems most likely to produce beneficent results?

Capital and Labor Not Antagonistic.

"The link that connects labor with capital is not broken but we may not deny that it is less cohesive than it should be or than conditions warrant. Plausibility, even the reverse, is strong, than ever before in its history. Recovery from a panic so severe as that of three years ago was never before so prompt and compara. ly complete. The masses are practically free from debt. Money is held in the banks in abundance and rates are low.

"Why, then, does capital pause upon the threshold of investment? The answer, we believe, to be plain. It awaits adjustment of the relation of government to business. * * * The big problem consists of determining how government can maintain an even balance between aggregation of interests, on the one hand, and the whole people, on the other, protecting the latter against extortion and saving the former from mad assaults.

"The solution is not easy to find for the simple reason that the attitude is without precedent. But in our progress being made along sane and cautious lines.

Conserve Common Sense.

"Is not the present, as we have seen, exceptionally secure? What, then, of preparation for the future? Patriotism is the basis of our institutions. And patriotism in the minds of our youth is no longer linked solely with fireworks and deeds of daring. It is taught in our schools. A new course has been added—a course in loyalty. Methodically, our children learn how to vote, how to conduct primaries, conventions and elections, how to discriminate between qualifications of candidates and finally, how to govern as well as serve. They are taught to despise bribery and all forms of corruption and fraud as treason. Their creed, which they are taught to have by heart, is not complex. It is simple, but comprehensive, and has implicit in it the ability to analyze. These are the pledges which are graven upon their consciousness.

"As it is cowardly for a soldier to run away from battle, so it is cowardly for any citizen not to contribute his share to the well-being of his country. America is my own dear land; she nourishes me, and I will love her and do my duty to her, whose child, servant and civil soldier I am.

"As the health and happiness of my body depend upon each muscle and nerve and drop of blood doing its work in its place, so the health and happiness of my country depend upon each citizen doing his work in his place.

"These young citizens are our hostages to fortune. Can we not safely assume that the principles animating their lives augur well for the permanency of the Republic? When before have the foundation stones of continuance been laid with such care and promise of durability?

"The answer, then, is bright. And the present? But one thing is needed. No previous movement is more laudable than that which looks to conservation of natural resources. But let us never forget that the greatest natural resource of the American people is Common Sense. Let that be conserved and supplied with out creation, and soon it will be found that all the ills of which we complain but know not of are only such as attend upon the growing pains of a great and blessed country.

Spiritualism.

Religion should be native. It should be concrete and applicable. Spiritualism is the natural expression of living, not a set of actions or of belieis, or a picture of the mind added to the daily life. The type of religion, therefore, is conditioned on the kind of living and the kind of life is conditioned, in its turn, very largely on the physical and economic effectiveness of life. The religion of the open country should run deep into the indigenous affairs of the open country.

Immune.

"I never worry about my health any more."

"How lucky you are. Don't you ever feel ill?"

"Oh, yes, often; but I've had all the operations it is possible to undergo."

Of Course.

POISON KILLED HER

SCIENTIST ON STAND IN CRIPPEN CASE DECLARES HE FOUND NO OTHER CAUSE.

WOMEN CROWD THE COURT

Many Remove Their Hats So Those in Rear May Not Miss a Move of Trembling Girl Prisoner—Dentist Retains Jaunty Air.

London.—On the resumption of the trial of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen and his typist, Ethel Leneve, charged with the slaying of the former's wife, Belle Elmore, the actress, Dr. William Willcox, scientific analyst to the home office, who discovered poison in the body found in Crippen's residence, went on the witness stand and swore that death was caused by the deadly drug.

The physician described the nature of the medium used and said that from a quarter to half a grain would prove fatal. He had found twenty-six grains of a grain after a lapse of four to eight months, and judged that more than half a grain had been administered. He found no other cause of death and expressed the opinion that the victim survived the dose an hour or more.

Before Dr. Willcox was called the crown introduced medical testimony to corroborate that given on Wednesday by Prof. Augustus J. Pepper, pathologist of the University of London, who swore that the body had been disfigured by one familiar with the science of anatomy.

The gruesome exhibits and the unpleasant character of the testimony at the last session did not deter the curious from struggling to get into the Bow street police court, and the section apportioned to the public was crowded.

CHANLER GIVES ALL TO DIVA

Lawyers File Cavalieri Ante-Nuptial Agreement Between Opera Singer and New Yorker.

New York.—The prenuptial agreement between Miss Lina Cavalieri, the opera singer, and Robert Winthrop Chanler, the terms of which have been the subject of many divergent reports of disagreements between scions of the old Astor family and the Italian diva, was filed Friday in the register's office by counsel for the singer.

The agreement recites that in consideration of the intended marriage and of the sum of $1 that Mr. Chanler gives to Miss Cavalieri "all the three farms, known respectively as cafe farm, Chowell and Benna farm, in Red Hook, N. Y., aggregating 355 acres and subject to a mortgage of $600,000.

The agreement further provides that Mr. Chanler turns over to Miss Cavalieri the land and buildings in New York city situated in several parts of the city, comprising in all thirty pieces of property, and consider, "and all other really personal part of the share of the above-named Robert Winthrop Chanler of and in the estate of the late Mrs. Laura Dwight, subject to a mortgage of $140,000."

The agreement further provides that Mr. Chanler agrees to pay the yearly sum of $20,000 to Miss. Cavalieri during her life, by four quarterly installments of $5,000 a quarter, the first of which shall be paid with the third day from the marriage.

It was agreed that the property of each of them, both personal and future, should remain the separate property and under the sole control of each of them.

BRAVES WHIRLPOOL

CAPTAIN KLAUS LARSEN MAKES SUCCESSFUL TRIP THROUGH NIAGARA'S RAPIDS.

SHOOTS RAPIDS LIKE A FURY

Engine of Motor Craft Gets Out of Order, Prevents Daring Jim Peck from Completing Scheduled Trip—Is Slightly Hurt.

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—Capt. Klaus Larsen Sunday in his motor boat Peroxide made a successful trip through the whirlpool rapids of Niagara.

Because the engine was gut out of order in the vicinity of the whirlpool he did not go clear to Lewiston in the boat which, after leaving the pool, drifted into Deed Main's eddy near Niagara university, where it was swung to shore. Larsen was picked up by an electric car and taken to Lewiston, three miles further down stream. The boat was apparently undamaged.

Starting at five o'clock, it took Larsen five minutes to reach the railway bridge and the next minute his h at, the Perro, had ridden the first wave. Then came a frightful tumult of white water. Never before had a motor boat been in such a sea, but it was clear that Larsen was in control as the boat responded nicely to the helm. He shot through the rapids and into the pool like a fury and was seen being rushed across the great river picket, having failed to make the outlet as he expected. He swung to the Canadian side and into the drift-wood. But from this he hurried away under power. He drove his boat away across to the New York side and swung out of the outlet.

It was about this time that the engine went wrong and he drifted into the eddy near Niagara university, below the Devil's hole. As the Perro swung toward shore it seemed as though it would be beaten on the rocks, but people on shore revealed this and helped Larsen land.

Speaking of his experience, he said: "I felt every wave in the rapids. Its gave me some fierce kicks. I thought they would beat my head off, but at no time did I fall to realize where I was and why was taking place. I had passed the worst of it when my boat failed to respond to her motor and I could easily have reached Lewiston by drifting had I not been caught in that eddy."

BROWNE GETS NOMINATION

Legislator Freed from Bribery Charge Wins in the Illinois Primary Election.

Chicago.—In the Illinois primaries Thursday Frederick H. Gasseberger (Republican) defeated Henry Clay Browne Boutell for the Republican nomination for congress in the fifth district.

George E. Foss, another of the veterans from Chicago, had a narrow call in the Tenth district. Late returns indicated that Foss, Republican was leading by 100 votes, with nearly fifty precincts to report.

With the exception of the Ninth and Tenth districts the Republican congressmen from Cook county were renominated without a break.

In the district outside of Chicago the chiefs items of Republican interest were the nominations of George W. Cole, jr., of Woodstock in the Eleventh district, and Ira J. Cooper and John C. McKenzie of Elizabeth in the Thirteenth district.

In the Sixteenth district, Speaker Joseph G. Cannon won in a walk, his opponent, Henry H. Bowen, hardly getting into the race. The other Republican congressmen throughout the state were renominated with little trouble.

The hardest fight for the Democrats came in the Fourth district, where Frank Buresch, one of the Congressman McDermott ran a neck and neck race for the nomination, may be a comfortable plurality.

Incomplete returns indicate that the men who voted for William Lorimer for senator in the general assembly, both Republican and Democratic, gained a sweeping victory.

Even the men who were drawn into the "jackpot" investigation have been renominated by overwhelming majorities except in perhaps two instances.

Representative Lee O'Neil Browne outdistanced all his competitors in La Salle county.

State Senator John Broderick, under indictment in Sangamon county, seems to have carried it in.

Robert E. Wilson, in the Sixth district, also was nominated.

Speaker Shurtleff was renominated by a plurality of more than 3,000 votes.

Later returns indicate that the Republican Voters' league was badly beaten throughout nearly all the precincts in Cook county, and it is proved that the league made its hardest fight.

Iladen-Iladen.—The German dirigible balloon Zeppelin VI., while undergoing its ailed, was blown up Wednesday by an explosion of the motor cylinder in the rear gondola. Three of the airship's crew were injured seriously.

The accident happened as the dirigible was being slowly worked into its shed here. The defective motor had been operating as usual, when suddenly the crew were whirled from their posts in the rear gondola as the craft trembled and lurched. There was a sharp report, a flash of flame and in a moment the immense fabric of silk canvas was afire.

The fire spread so rapidly that the shed was soon destroyed.

President Taft Declares That Patronage Door Will Hereafter Be Open to All Sides.

Beverly, Mass.—No difference between so-called "Progressives" and "Regulars" will be recognized by President Taft hereafter, but all party leadership in the future will be as Republicans in the matter of federal support.

The president threw in this effect are given in a letter from Secretary Norton to a Republican leader of Iowa, whose name is not disclosed.

In the letter Secretary Norton stated that while important Republican legislation pending in congress was opposed by certain Republican leaders, the president feel that his duty required him to withhold federal patronage from senators and representatives who seemed to oppose the administration in the fulfillment of the pledges of the party platform.

The president's view of the matter, however, with the approaching national nominating conventions to which the people have declared themselves in favor of the progressive wing of the party, and the fall elections, Secretary Norton's letter says, must settle the question, and that the course of the last session of congress shall be perpetrated or forgotten.

Speaker Cannon, who is in Iowa, the president temporarily withheld federal patronage were Senators La Follette, Bristow, Dolliver and Cummins and Representative Hubbard of Iowa.

ROOSEVELT DEFIES HIS FOES

Challenges Opponents to Come Out in Open and Fight Uncharitably Commends Taft.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Coming into a stronghold of Republican insurgency, Theodore Roosevelt boldly challenged the opponents of his political doctrines to come out in the open and fight as they dared. He prophesied that if they did they would be beaten.

The colonel also warmly commended President Taft as a public official and expressed his approval of a number of the accomplishments of the Taft administration. He did not endorse the administration as a whole. What he did do, in his way, however, placed him on record for the first time in regard to many of the more important features of it, breaking his silence on the subject except for his brief references to his successor in his speeches in the western trip.

When Colonel Roosevelt arrived here Saturday from New York the state fair grounds were already packed to overflowing with a crowd estimated at 25,000.

The MAN in LOWER TEN

CHAPTER I.

I Go to Pittsburg.

McKnight is probably looking over the criminal end of the business never that it, and alone the strange case of the man in lower ten, I have been a bit squeamish. Given a free like that, where you can build up a network of clews that absolutely incriminate three entirely different people, only one of whom can be guilty, and your faith in circumstantial evidence dies of overcrowding. I never see a shivering, white-faced wretch in the prisoners' dock that I do not hark back with shuddering horror to the attempt, events on the Pullman car Ontario, between Washington and Pittsburg, on the night of September 9, last.

McKnight could tell the story a great deal better than I, although he cannot spell three consecutive words correctly. But, while he has imagination and humor, Le is lazy.

"It didn't happen to me, anyhow," he protested, when I put it up to him. "And nobody cares for second-hand stuff. Besides, they want the unvarnished and unparalleled truth, and I'm no hand for that. I'm a lawyer."

So am I, although there have been times when my association with that particular has been disputed. I am unmarried, and just old enough to know that the grown-up little sisters of the girls I used to know, I am four of outdoors, perfect frights. I therefore said grown-up little sisters, and with my sentiment "husband" and "wife" was substituted.—Ed.) and completely ruled and respected in every household, including the elderly widow.

In fact, of all the men of my acquaintance, I am probably the least presaic, the least adventurous, the one who is most likely to have a deviation from the normal through the orderly progression of the seasons, summer suits to winter flannels, golf to bridge.

So it was a queer freak of the demons of chance to perch on my unsuspecting Sunday-morning coat, the one up with a crime, tickled me with a love affair, and start me on that sensational and not always respectable journey that ended so surprisingly less than three weeks later in the firm's private office. It had been the most remarkable week of my life. I would neither give it up nor live it again under any inducement, and yet all that I lost was some 20 yards off my drive.

It was really McKnight's turn to make the next journey. I had a reservation on the Pittsburg Chief for Sunday, and a short yacht cruise planned for Sunday, and meanwhile I was grinding at statute law for a week, he to some relaxation. But McKnight begged off. He was not the first time he had shirked that summer in order to run down to Bedford Springs to see his sick mother. But this time he had a new excuse.

"I wouldn't be able to look after the business if I did go," he said, in a sort of wide-eyed frankness that makes one ashamed to doubt him. "I'm always sick coming through the mountains. It's a fact, Lollie. Seeing over the pass takes it. Why, crossing the Alleghany mountains has the gulf stream to Bermuda beaten to a frazzle."

So I gave him up finally and went home to pack. It was late in the evening with his machine, the Cardonbell, to take me to the station, and he brought the forgiod notes in the Bronson case.

"Guard them with your life," he warned me. "They are more precious than my own. Jim Bronson is your protector, or whenever people keep mistaking I mean you for his wife, he happy until I see Gentleman Andy doing the looking."

He sat down on my clean collars, found my cigarettes and struck a match on the sole of his shoe with one movement.

"Where's the Pirate?" he demanded. The Pirate is my housekeeper, Mrs. Klopton, a woman of Scotch descent and fabled—because of a fabulous pair of eyes and what McKnight called a boomerang nose—quietly closed the door into the hall.

"Hush! Do not mention the Pirate to her. She is looking for the evening paper to see if it is going to rain. She has my raincoat and an umbrella waiting in the hall.

"The weather being damaged beyond repair, he left them and went to the window. He stood there for some time, staring at the blackness that represented the wall of the house next door.

"It's raining now," he said over his shoulder, and drew the curtains and the shutters. Something in his voice made me glance up, but he was watching me, his hands idly in his pockets and his eyes on the floor. He looked like a perfunctory tone, after a pause, I was packing my razor.

"Disease or trouble," I ventured absently. "If the landlor would put it in stone and lime."

"Did you put those notes in your inside pocket?"

"Yes." I was impatient. "Along with my certificate of registration and vaccination. Whoever wants them will have to steal my coat to get them."

"Well, I would move them. If I were you, somebody in the new suit would get back of proper nourishment. They are worth more than the firm's private office. It had been the most remarkable week of my life. I would neither give it up nor live it again under any inducement, and yet all that I lost was some 20 yards off my drive.

FUNERAL COSTUMES.

Their Extravagance Curbed by Law at One Time in England.

Sumptuary mourning laws were formerly found necessary in England to restrict the extravagance of the nobility and their imitators in the matter of funeral costume. At the end of the fifteenth century it was laid down that dukes, marquises and archbishops should be allowed sixteen yards of cloth for their gowns; "slopper" (mourning cassocks) and mantles; earls fourteen, viscounts twelve, barons eight; knights six and all persons of inferior degree only two. Hoods were forbidden to all except those above the rank of esquire of the king's household.

In the following century Margaret, countess of Richmond, mother of Henry VII., issued an ordinance for the reformation of apparel for great estates of women in time of mourning. So it seems that men and women have met in the extravagance of sorrow.

Even 200 years ago London tradesmen found that court mourning was easily affected their business. Addison relates that at a tavern he often met a man whom he took for an ardent and eccentric royalist. Every time this man looked through the Gazette he exclaimed, "Thank God, all the reigning families of Europe are well!" Occasionally he would vary this formula by making reassuring remarks respecting the health of British royalties. Once or some time Addison discovered that this universal regalist was a colored silk merchant, who never made a bargain without inserting in the agreement, "All this will take place as long as my royal personage dies in the interval."—London Chronicle.

MENTAL INFLUENCES.

The State of the Mind Has a Direct Effect Upon the Body.

A good deal is said in these days about the effect of mind on matter in the way of the cure of disease, but less is heard about mental influences as a cause of bodily ills, yet it is an old truth that the state of mind has a direct effect on the body. The gloom and depression caused by worry and anxiety create a morbid condition of the physical system. It is impossible to feel well physically when the mind and spirits are downcast. The blood does not circulate properly, negative pain, the heart aches, and if these morbid conditions continue more deep seated ailments are likely to arise, and cancer may be one of them.

With many persons a fit of anger is followed by an attack of indigestion. Excitement destroys the appetite, bad news causes nausea, fright causes faintness, and so on. Violent or depressing emotions always disturb the equilibrium of body and mind alike. Taking the case, it is inevitable that when these emotions often recur or become continuous serious physical results will follow. The obvious lesson is, then, that mental serenity ensures health. In fact, the essential element of health—and that instead of resorting to mind "cures" after the health is broken it is wise to preserve the serenity as a preventive and safeguard against disease.—Indianapolis Star.

DECAY OF TIN.

Remarkable Alteration Which Takes Place in the Metal.

Anything made of tin, it seems, is doomed to a brief existence. This metal is subject to a remarkable kind of alteration, a species of disease to which it is liable. When exposed to the air it undergoes no chemical change, as do iron and copper, which, of course, chemically combine with the oxygen or with water. The tin, however, still retains its luster, but gradually becomes gray and dull and finally falls to pieces.

This disease is "catching." It infects or induces the same change in other masses of tin in the immediate neighborhood. We are told that in a Russian imperial station, in piece of tin uniform buttons, little heaps of powder were found. A consignment of tinware sent from Rotterdam to Moscow in 1857 arrived at the latter place in the form of powder. This alteration is due to a change in the internal crystalline structure of the metal and is analogous to the slow transformation of monoclinic sulphur to rhombic sulphur. As a result, objects of tin of archaeological interest are rare. Those that have been found have been in the form of earthenware vessels, kettles, etc., which have been found in the Swiss lake dwellings coated with tin foil. Cassiterite or tinstone is the single ore from which the tin has been obtained in any quantity.—Knowledge and Scientific News, London.

Lordly Diarsell.

Disraeli once told a lady that two gentlemen which were indispensable to other people he had always done without: "I mean, of course, without one, and on my estate him to be lighted, may be solemnly answered that they were a watch and an umbrella. 'But how do you manage,' I asked, 'if there happens to be no clock in the room and you want to know the time?' I ring for a servant,' was the magnificent reply. 'Well,' I continued, 'but what about the umbrella?' What do you do, for instance, if you are in the park and are caught in a sudden shower?' 'I take refuge,' he replied, with a smile of exceeding gallantry, 'under the umbrella of the first pretty woman I meet!'"

A Hard Problem.

A certain debating society is discussing the question as to which is the superior, the husband who goes home and finds that the dinner is not ready, or the wife who has dinner ready and whose husband does not come home. It is believed that the debate will end in a draw.

We can do nothing well without joy and a good conscience, which is the source of joy.—Libbon.

DEATHWATCH BEETLES.

Their Tapping Stands For Courtship and Not For Warning.

Much mental anguish could have been saved to past generations and some, and so very far past it passed, had known that the mysterious tapping of the "deathwatch" stood for courtship and not death. A writer in the Scientific American explains that the various species of the beetle sometimes and their bigger relatives of the genus xestobium not only attack furniture, but so completely riddle the whole wood work of old houses by their borings as to render the structures unsafe. Indeed, a beam that has been tunneled by these insects for a number of years is little better than an inner shell containing a mass of wood dust. The xestobium is the common deathwatch, while the anobium also is in the habit of making a tapping sound.

The nocturnal tappings of these insects, distinctly audible in a room where there is an otherwise complete absence of noise, has for many centuries been regarded by the superstitious as a warning of the approach of death. This uncanny interpretation of a mysterious sound is scarcely surprising when it is remembered that only in recent years have naturalists discovered its true cause.

The little insects has been found in some sections equal jerking its head at regular intervals upon the surface of the wood beneath it. So far as can be told, its tappings constitute a kind of courtship ritual. Obviously they have no connection with the latter end of mankind.

A RAIN OF FIRE.

The Great Meteoric Shower That Scared Folks in 1833.

In Scherff's "Chronicles of Baltimore" there is a vivid description of the starry hailstorm, the fiery meteoric shower of 1833, and old files of newspapers are made luminous in that date with the impressions of editors and contributors. One writer said it was the grandest and most charming sight ever presented to the vision of man. Awakened from sound sleep he sprang to the window, thinking the house was on fire, but when he looked out he beheld "terrene." The sleet "in the adjoining yard to my own," he wrote, "was covered with stars, as I supposed, during the whole time." Professor Olmsted of Yale college thought that the exhibition was the finest display of celestial fireworks that had been witnessed since the creation of the world, although he, too, while knowing its character, was sufficiently imbued with the theological spirit of the time to believe that it was a solemn portent that carried a divine warning.

One editor whose comment upon this phenomenon was probably more quoted than any other he ever made said: "We pronounce the raining fire which we saw on Wednesday morning an awful type, a forerunner, a merciful warning of the awful judgments of God, which, we trust, may be averted by a timely repentance."—Baltimore Sun.

Usefulness is Better Than Frills.

It is a fine thing to personally walk up a boy in the way he should go, and not rely too much on the guidance of Shorter Catechism. We know a happy father whose 18-year-old son has just given up college, in order to devote his time to keeping the family touring car in condition.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Dentists and Kissing.

Northern Michigan

George E. Thomas, who just moved to Central Lake with his family about ago two months ago from Petoskey, committed suicide Sunday morning at about half past ten by taking about six grains of strychnine.

Central Lake Patch: F. H. Clark, owner of the Sunnyside Fruit farm, near Atwood, was in town Friday. Mr. Clark says he is going to have a large yield of winter apples and he attributes his success to the scientific care which he gave his orchard.

Mr. Coyle, the new head of the traffic department is also Superintendent of the Northern division of the Michigan Central system, this division covering the Michigan Central lines north of Bay City where is located the divison general offices. The change cuts out one office on the D. & C., which is owned by the Michigan Central, and is a step to more fully consolidate the actual working of the lines. It is un likely that Supt. Coyle will actually spend much of his time here.

Probate Judge Harris of Antrim county has a fine farm home near Ellsworth, located on one of the highest spots in the county. From the top of a hill on which the judge has planted an orchard, the editor of the Bellaire Independent records that Boyne City, Ironville, East Jordan and even Petoskey can be seen. This is not the only thing Mr. Harris is interested in, and at this place to the village he has one of the finest and most up-to-date beeneries in this section, keeping only barred plymouth rocks, he takes considerable pride in keeping them up to the standard but has not raised as many this year as formerly.

Earl Jordan Enterprise: An important and business change was announced this week which comes as a complete surprise to nearly all people here, and was announced by a written official notice from President H. B. Ledyard, of the Michigan Central and the Detroit & Charlevoix Railroad Co. announcing the appointment of Mr. M. J. Coyle as superintendent of the Detroit & Charlevoix Railroad Company and directing that "All employes here before reporting to Mr. Clark Hehre, former General Manager, will hereafter report to and receive orders from Mr. M. C. Coyle at East Jordan. All reports, statements, etc., heretofore sent to Mr. Clark Haire, former General Manager, will hereafter be sent to Mr. M. C. Coyle, Superintendent, East Jordan, until further notice."

The following from the Cheboygan News is an interesting life sketch of the oldest woman in the state, who died in the county poor house, near that recently: "Mrs. Joseph Carr, who has been on the county poor farm for a number of years, and who was probably the oldest resident of Michigan, died Monday at the advanced age of 110, at least that is her age as near as can be ascertained, and Over are those who think she was several years older. "Mrs. Carr was a full-blooded Indian woman. As near as can be learned she was born near Lake Superior and when a young woman she moved to Mackinac Island with her first husband, who was also a full-blooded Chippewa, and shortly after he died, leaving her with one child. The winter following his death the widow went to St. Ignace, where she got work to keep the wolf from the door. A year or two later she married Carr, and about 60 years ago moved to Cheboygan.

BLINDING A SHARK.

A Pearl Diver's Ruse by Which He Made Good His Escape.

A successful diver must possess great courage and nerves of steel. Such a man connected with a large wrecking company was visiting some years ago the pearl fisheries in the gulf of California, where sharks abounded. On one of his trips to quest of the pearl oyster he had a narrow escape from a fearful death.

He had been instructed never to stir from the bottom until he had looked up and around. Fortunately he heeded the advice. Having filled his bag, he glanced quickly around and caught sight of a huge shovel nosed shark watching him.

In an emergency men think fast. Near the diver was a large rock. He moved quickly to the other side of it, hoping to dodge the ferocious monster. But the maneuver did not work. The shark watched every movement, changing his position by a slight motion of his powerful tail.

Time was precious, and the diver conceived the idea of blinding the shark by stirring up the mud. Under cover of that he might escape. He worked for dear life and had the water thick with mud in less than half a minute.

Slipping around the rock again, he rose to the surface, having barely strength enough to reach the side of the boat, and was hauled on board just as the voracious man eater made a rush for him.

Romeo Not Taken Seriously.

Juliet was only fifteen years old, but she thought she was quite grown up. One evening, says Mrs. H. A. Pryor in "My Day," she was reciting on the moonlit veranda a young man called, He, too, it seemed, considered himself grown up. The zealous youth was moved to solve the propitious hour and declare himself. Juliet refused to answer correctly and dismiss him without wounding him.

She assured him osmosis would never consent.

A voice from within—they were sitting beneath her mother's window—settled the matter:

"Accept the young man, Juliet, if you want to. I've not the least objection. And let him run along home now. He sure to bolt the door when you come in."

Evidently the mother had read reports for boy lovers and wished to go to sleep.

An Office Engagement.

One of Washington's gilded young men came rapidly down the steps of his house half an hour after noon the other day.

"What's the rush?" asked a friend.

"Oh, I've got to hurry down to the office or I won't get there in time to go out for lunch."—Saturday Evening Post.

"Yes; he's anxious to get safe ground under cover."—Puck.

The Bargain Day Exhibit.

That the annual autumn bargain day, given under the auspices of the Charlevoix Retail Merchants' Association last Saturday, was a success is something of a wonder, for the weather was inferently bad.

Notwithstanding this handicap there was a large crowd of farmers in town. It is safe to say that if the rain had alone the attendance would have been doubled. The exhibit in the Wilson store building was fully up to that of last year in both fruit and vegetables —the display was really more than creditable; it would have done credit to any county fair, and was a striking object lesson of what can be done with intelligent methods. —"The Republican County Ticket.

The biennial political flutter has fairly begun, and we shall soon be upon our eyes in the pool of politics. Public interest is now centered on the idea of November, when the people will decide party questions in controversy.

The republicans of Charlevoix county have nominated a county ticket. Arrayed against it is a so-called "rubber" ticket. Just why it should be called by that name we cannot clearly understand, as there are no issues before the people of the county that involve any interest of laboring men. There is no local question which makes it worthwhile the toiler in any way put in jeopardy. There are no plutocrats in Charlevoix county, and neither the counter-jumper nor the longshoreman is oppressed or downtrodden by capital or enthralled by capitalistic despotism. We are all laborers together, and all desirous of a clean and efficient county government. In short, the title of the ticket can only appeal to that class who erroneously think that the only laboring man is the one who carries the tool-box or wears the longshoreman's leather apron.

There is a man on the republican ticket to whom the term "laborer" can not be applied with equal force as to any of his opposition candidates. One candidate on the labor ticket is a lawyer and a candidate on the republican ticket is a farmer. Which of the two is more the laborer?

Four of the republican candidates are men who have served the people now hold. Precedent entitles them to a re-election if for no other reason. But they have been faithful and capable officials. The republican candidate for sheriff is now a supervisor. He is a man of acknowledged ability and unchallenged personal character.

The republican county ticket contains no "dark horses" nor any, and does not represent one solitary principle that is antagonistic to the interest of any class of labor.

I. Gallagher, as shown by the report of Deaver Island. While some changes were made, the commission spoke in plain but kind terms to the members of the roll with reference to the requirements of the law—full value assessment.

"How can it be assessed," Major Mansfield was asked, "the results are an entirely different section of the State are better judges of conditions upon which values are based than the local assessors, who follows the lines of least resistance?

"We do not so assume; but we do claim, and you must concede," replied the Major, "that the commission is capable of familiarizing itself with those conditions and correcting abuses that may in every section of the state. We can state that assessments shall be made for full value. The duty of the commission is to see that this is done."

The commission is working this week on Latsma township, Leelanaw county, which, by the report, appears Northport. When asked when they proposed to have Charlevoix county on the carpet they replied: "Not this year."

CAPT. KILTIE BLAMED

The Inspector Say the Master of the Car Ferry Hung On Too Long

Supervising Inspector General Uhler of the United States steamboat inspection service has received the detailed report of the investigation into the sinking of Pere Marquette carferry No. 18 in Lake Michigan with a loss of twenty-seven lives on Sept. 9. Even after a careful perusal of the contents of the reports of inspectors Sullivan and Collins, the public finds little light as to the real cause of the disaster. The report, however, touches on the loss of life as follows:

"As regards to the great loss of life, we regret that we are obliged to ensure the judgment one who is dead and unable to defend himself.

"It is our opinion that the master of the Pere Marquette No. 18 displayed a lack of judgment in holding the crew aboard the boat as long as he did. As much as two hours before the vessel sank we feel that he knowledge told him that his ship was in a very precarious condition and dangerous to be aboard of. We think that his efforts were directed more toward saving the ship than to the saving of the lives aboard the vessel."

In regard to the cause of the wreck the investigators report as follows:

"It will always be a matter of conjecture as to how first filled the after compartments before discovery. It is an assured fact, however, that the bulkhead separating these was full of water at the time of sinking.

"What it was that footfeyed the bulkhead we cannot say we cannot say definitely. It may have been the giving away of a bulkhead, allowing the water to flow into the engine compartment, or it may be that the cars on deck forward became unfastened and ran to the after part of the deck. We have evidence from one man who started to go to the car deck from the forward part of the boat and he claims that there was not a car on the deck."

"The men who are securing the spies for the exhibit to be made by Western Michigan at the United States Land and Irrigation Exposition, Chicago, November 19 to December 4, are having exceptional success. A goodly quantity of quality apples are being picked and placed in cold storage as rapidly as they ripen. There is now no doubt but there will be fancy apples in the western Michigan Exhibit at the coming land show. These apples will be large in size and of a color, and flavor that will surprise all those who have not taken the trouble to keep posted as to the accomplishments of this region as a fruit producing country.

"The Independent Order of Foresters is in the front rank of a most pronounced revival in Charlevoix. Court Charlevoix No 840 has been in existence for about twenty years, but it has never until now gone beyond the insurance or beneficial phase of existence. Lately interest has been stirred up and a new spirit has been in evidence. At this date membership secured. Last Monday night, at Odd Fellows hall, the order held a social and it was a most enthusiastic meeting. There were present the High Chief Ranger, H. J. MacDonald, of Muskegon, and Dr. A. T. Bodie, of Bellaire, high Physician. The Court now has sixty social member, forty-four of whom are benefit members. Meetings will be held twice each month, and special effort made to awaken a still greater interest in the social feature of the Order. The Order of Foresters is known far and wide as one of the safest and strongest institutions of its class in existence.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

by EDWARD B. CLARK

COPYRIGHT BY W. A. PATTERSON

WHEN you take in the city of Washington on the unregenerate call a "rubber-neck wagon" your course is bound to lead by the Cosmos club. Until the Metropolitan club built its new quarters, its building was situated near that which houses the Cosmos members. It was the great delight of the information giver on the eighteen-leg automobile to declare to the passengers that the Metropolitan club, "which you see on your right, is the home of the lobs, and the Cosmos club, which you see on your left, is the house of the cranks."

Presumably scientists have become accustomed to being dubbed cranks by outsiders. It has been a long, hard struggle at times for some scientists to get recognition from the world. The cosmos club has a membership which includes some of the greatest scientists of the United States, and, in its non-resident membership, some of the greatest scientists of the world.

There are botanists, astronomers, ornithologists, and, in fact, scientists of all kinds and descriptions, to be found nightly in the great, sweeping parlors of the club's quarters. They just as much like their jollity in the club as are to be found in the rooms of any social organization in the world—and laughing heartily they, too. In order to be a member of the Cosmos club you must have something besides money and social standing. It is probable that there are many members of other societies in Washington who would be willing to throw their membership into the deep sea, if the set would only for them admittance into the club of which I speak.

The headquarters of the Cosmos club are in the old "Dolly Madison" residence. It was there that the wife of President Madison lived and held social sway for years after the death of her husband, during the Civil war, for a time, Admiral Wilkes lived in the Madison house. It was Wilkes who took Mason and Slidell from the British steamer "Trent" and thereby nearly brought on war between the United States and Great Britain at a time when such a war might have insured ultimate victory to the Confederate arms. The biological survey of the United States government has lost the services of Dr. C. Hart Merriam, who for years was the survey's chief, and who in the early days worked so hard to make therefore what he succeeded in making it, one of the most useful departments of government. Dr. Merriam has accepted the direction of the Harriman Foundation for Zoological Research. Mrs. Harriman, the widow of E. H. Harriman, the great financier and railroad man, has carried out the wishes of her husband, and has settled a large sum of money in the hands of trustees for the purpose of aiding unpretentiously in line with her husband's wishes. Mrs. Harriman, at the request of Dr. Merriam, is the director of the work.

It is probable that the former chief of the biological survey is the foremost authority in the United States in matters pertaining to certain phases of natural history. It was Dr. Merriam, more than any other man, to whom Theodore Roosevelt went for advice about the game preserves of great world in Africa. The doctor and the colonel have been fast friends ever since, when in New York state both were pursuing bird studies and exchanging letters on general subjects of natural history.

These words about Dr. Merriam and the Harriman Zoological Foundation lead one to tell a story about the late Bismarck, which perhaps will throw some light on a side of his life concerning which most people probably know little. One year ago last winter I went south from Washington, bound for Augusta, Ga., with a friend. E. H. Harriman's private car was attached to the train as one of the stations on the way. It happened that my friend was a close personal acquaintance of Mr. Harriman, and he was invited to dine with the financier on his private car, and was told to bring his friend with him, provided the friend would like to come.

There were several men of large affairs at that little dinner party, one of the guests being the president of one of the greatest railroad systems in the world. The conversation, naturally, was about big affairs of the financial world, concerning which I knew very little, and I am free to confess, cared much less. After hearing a good deal about certain things concerning which the discussion was more or less of a mystery, I ventured to break into the conversation and to tell Mr. Harriman that I had read of the journals of the "Harriman Alaska Expedition" as already had been published, and moreover, that I had read them.

For the next two hours I had ample evidence that E. H. Harriman cared for something besides railroads. Ten or twelve years before he had taken a company of naturalists to Alaska with him as his guests. He had had a delightful time with the scientists and they had profited much by a knowledge gained by the trip. Comparatively few fields, I found that Mr. Harriman was keenly interested in birds, trees, shrubs, flowers, mosses and mammals, and that he knew and appreciated nature in all its forms. That was the only time I ever saw E. H. Harriman, but from what he said during the two hours and a half spent in his car that winter night I was not at all surprised when I found out that he had provided a fund for zoological research.

Across Lafayette square, due west from the Cosmos club, is the house built by Commodore Stephen Decatur in the year 1819, and it was from its portals that he went forth one year later to meet his death at the hand of James Barron, also a naval officer, who had challenged Decatur to a duel. It is American history and the circumstances are known to all, but it might be said that it was Barron who was in command of the United States ship Chesapeake at the time it was overhauled by the British ship Leopard and searched for alleged deserters from the British navy.

Books have been written about Lafayette square, but the stories that are told about the men whose stations are in the square, and about the men who lived in the houses surrounding it, are endless, and not all of them, perhaps, have found their way into print. The statue of Lafayette was erected at one corner of the square not long after the state of Andrew Jackson had been put in place in the center of the square, provided a square can be said to have a center. Lafayette visited America in 1825, and even today one hears occasionally of some living person who remembers his visit.

Not long ago there died in Chicago, at her home on 31st street, the aged Mrs. Davidson. She was born in Charleston, S. C. Her maiden name was Ann Ancrum, she was a granddaughter of Gen. William Washington, a first cousin of George Washington. It was William Washington who led the charge of the Cowpens fought a hand-to-hand fight with Colonel Tarleton of the British forces. Colonel Washington succeeded in cutting off the thumb of Tarleton's sword hand, and then there was interference by others separating the combatants.

Lafayette was a strong personal friend of William Washington, and when he visited Charleston in the year 1825 he was a guest at the Ancrum mansion, where, in the meantime, Mrs. Washington, being a daughter of Colonel Washington, Mrs. Davidson, then a child six or eight years old, remembered the visit perfectly and kept until she died a present which Lafayette had given to her, the daughter of his old friend and comrade in arms.

There is no statue of Washington in Lafayette square, though one day there may be, for it is said to be possible that Andrew Jackson will be succeeded by George Washington may take his place. The newest physical approach, so to speak, that one gets to Lafayette square, is to the White House, which fronts it. It may not be generally known that the White House was completed before Washington died. It was only a few days before his death, at Washington residence, that George and Martha Washington walked through the recently completed White House, to see what, if anything, or disapproval, as it may be, of the arrangement of the rooms. It is possible that that visit to the capital was the last one which the Father of his Country made, for it was only a short time afterward that he died in his country seat, Mount Vernon.

Reference to Mount Vernon brings to mind the fact that there is living in Washington today an aged man named John Lane, who is the only living person who ever saw George Washington. Now, inasmuch as the Father of his country died 111 years ago, this may seem to be something pretty close to a false statement on its face, but it is the truth nevertheless.

When John Lane was a small boy the driver of a stage that ran between Washington and Mount Vernon asked the lad if he wanted a ride, and the offer was accepted. The boy took the seat of honor by the driver. The boy made the trip all the way to Mount Vernon and arrived there just as they were carrying the body of Washington from the old tomb to the new one. In order to make certain that the remains had not been tampered with by ghouls who not long before had broken into the old tomb, the coffin was opened and John Lane, aged ten, was lifted up to look on the face of the Father of his Country. Mr. Lane is the only person who survives of the little company which was present at the transfer of the body.

Board to Make Express Rates.

One of the most important hearings which has been held since the interstate commerce commission was created commenced when representatives of the various express companies doing business in Michigan and delegates from many cities in Michigan and Illinois appeared before the board to hear the proposed schedule of rates.

Chairman Glenzyne of the commission convened a joint session of the representatives of the express companies and the representatives of towns to establish a new tariff of rates, which he said to them at the opening of the hearing that it would be well for the companies to defer for 30 days any new tariff they may have proposed to publish.

One of the principal grievances of the shippers is that there is a lack of uniformity in the rates charged by the various express companies for carrying goods between new competitive points, and another that the companies often refuse to transfer express to another line, thereby compelling the shipper delay and additional expense.

Assessments Are Boosted.

Secretary George Lord of the state tax commission has completed his trip through several counties in the northern part of the state where the commission has been reviewing assessments. He reports that the assessed valuation of Midland county was boosted from $85,000 to $1,525,000. Lord says that in Mecosta county the assessed valuation of the town of Morton was increased from $75,000 to $1,000,000. He says that there was $175,000 in mortgages in Morton township that had not been placed on the assessment rolls, and it is said that there are few tax rolls above Morton where any valuation has been placed on this class of property.

Case of Oil Company Against State.

One of the cases which will be watched with considerable interest during the September term of the Michigan supreme court will be that of the Germania Refining company vs. the state of Michigan.

The case was brought by the Germania company of Oil City, Pa., to prevent to avoid payment of taxes levied by the state board of assessors last year. There were five companies interested and they combined with the Germania to fight the state in the courts of Michigan.

Creamery Men Organize.

About 100 creamery managers assembled at Saginaw from all over the state and organized the Michigan Association of Creamery Owners and Managers, electing officers and deciding to meet every three months. The next meeting will be at Grand Rapids the first Thursday in December. Officers were elected as follows: President, H. L. Burroughs, Owosso; vice-president, Leonard Freeman, Fenton; secretary-treasurer, Martin Beidel, Saginaw.

M. A. C. STUDENTS ARE TO FORECAST

COURSE WILL BE ADDED TO COLLEGE.

WILL BE A POPULAR ONE

Thought That Many Will Want the Work—Instructions Will Be Given by Forecaster Seeley.

Lansing—The newest course to be incorporated in the M. A. C. curriculum is meteorology, and it will be given by Local Forecaster Dewey A. Seeley during the fall term. The state college is one of the few institutions in the country so well equipped with apparatus for the proper living of such a course. The course is to consist of three hours' lecture work and four hours of laboratory work during the week. The work which Forecaster Seeley intends to give in this course is very diversified and exceedingly beneficial. One of the first things that the students who elect the new meteorology work will do will be to take weather maps from the reports which are daily received from rather star stations all over the country.

Students will receive instructions in the art of making forecasts from the telegraphic reports, and will be given an opportunity to try their hand at making forecasts. These will be compared with the official forecasts issued at the East Lansing station and with the weather following the forecast.

The manual of oxygen, nitrogen, water, carbonic acid gas, etc., that exists in the air will also be determined and the methods of determination worked out. A meteorlal database will be constructed and an opportunity offered for the class to become fully acquainted with the workings of all the delicate instruments that are used in the regular weather bureau stations. Some work will also be done in soil temperature, humidity, etc. One of the interesting things which will be worked out will be the determination of the difference in radiation from soils of different colors.

From the sets of instruments in the East Lansing station, each student will keep weather records for a time. Forecaster Seeley has a number of old instruments which are absolutely useless for the work, as they can be taken apart and inspected by the students. From all appearances, it is generally conceded that the course will be one of the most interesting and beneficial in the curriculum, and it is certain that quite a number of students will elect the work.

Concerning Consuella

By STACY E. BAKER

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

Keating felt a furious tug at his line. He made a wild grab at the set pole, and, like the novice that he was, landed the long line—fathoms out of the water and flung it back over his shoulder. A frightened blast punctuated the movement.

As Keating turned the rod was jerked rudely from his hands, and the amazed angler saw an indignant sheep scudding across the lea with the hook of his tackle firmly embedded in its wool, and his expensive rod attack jouging behind at the end of the unrealed silk.

"Blast it!" growled Keating, too worried about the future of his spilt bamboo to find the indiscriminate in the situation. "Darn that butting sheep! Why didn't she keep her inquisitive nose out of my business any way?"

But sheep showed no inclination to stop, and Keating hastily arose from the crassy seat on the banks of the stream and gave strenuous chase. He grimly set his jaw and settled down to long and dustling.

The youth made his hurdle with ease. The sheep was now some distance ahead on an open road packed hard, thanks to the rain of the morning, and perfectly adapted to the handicap race. They passed a farmhouse with the youth gaining, the surprised yokel yelled loudly as Keating passed him, and left in behind, waving a rusty pitchfork.

On and on ran the trio. Another house sprung into view beside the road, and an aged miller of the self, wrinkled and seamed with the years that had fallen heavy upon him, and bled rheumatically out of the grist and joined the gallop.

Keating, after the first brief gain, could not lessen the distance between himself and the animal. "Now, blast come the sanctorian breathing of the last one to join the run, and the "Rape whoever the fellow, who was now just behind.

Keating's cry blew off on the wings of a breeze engendered by his fast speed, and his heavy dark hair, usually worn sleked to his head, was now flying here and there. The long, legged leader showed signs of weakening. Keating did not stop for his cap.

"You quit that," blared the rustic just behind, who seemed, despite the college records of his pacemaker, to be holding his own remarkably well. "You quit pesterin' that poor sheep!"

Keating had no mind—nor time—to enter into a controversy. He kept still. The sheep was wavering. It raveled too much wind to keep up the sprint. The fishing-rod bobbed awkwardly behind.

Another house loomed up ahead. The ewe dodged madly through the gateway leading up to this, and as the youth put his remaining strength in a final jump, felt panting on his side. With an exultant yell Keating dropped on his knees beside the wind, and amid, and made ready to extract the hook.

The protested blast of the sheep was answered by an angry shouting from the road, and the pounds of farmer hurled itself through space and landed on the back of the unexpect. "Yon fool!" yelled the angry angler.

"Get off. What the deuce do you mean?"

"Pick on a poor sheep, will you?" raaped the other. "I'll learn you city fellers that property is to be respected."

"Keating spent no time in argument. His date found the face of the other, and a beautiful battle was precipitated thereby. The fight was all in favor of the excited fisherman until the arrival of the long-whiskered one who had been distanced in the race. The third man jumped into the battle with a raucous shout. His hands were as hard as boulders and a fluke blow from one of these deprived the fisherman of his senses.

When Keating recovered consciousness he found himself sitting bolt upright, and two red and perspiring faces were standing by and eyeing him with little favor.

"You darned city boy," growled the farmer, "what kind o' rowdyin' is that you are up to? Chasin' a poor inoffensive critter until she falls down winded!"

"You're crazy," snarled Keating. "Couldn't you see that she had my fishhook stuck in her silly wool?"

"The thing for you to be doin'," added the other rustic. "Stickin' your hook in other people's sheep!"

"If other people's sheep would quit sticking their noses in my affairs they would not be hooked."

"But you did hook her," came from the younger man.

Certainly I hooked her," snapped Keating. "And now tell me what you are going to do with me. Burn me at the stake?"

An angry snort issued from the whiskers of the ancient. "We're going to hold you until Mrs. Griggs comes home."

"And who, if I may ask, is Mrs. Griggs?"

"She's the owner of that poor persecuted critter you have just been representative of the S. P. C. A.," answered the youthful gnagger. "And if she you for having been cruel to Consuella."

"Consuella!" cried Keating. "Do you mean to tell me that that old sheep is named Consuella?"

"Uh, huh, an' the more names you call her the harder I'll go with you."

Keating, in the city, was Charles Keating, Esq., managing an agency for a well-known cash register concern. He bore the respect of his fellows.

In his bonds before these countrymen, fuming and fretting, and with a vengeance hitched down his forehead, his dignity was conspicuously absent.

The mind of the youth was on the austere Miss Decker, his fiancee. He mentally thanks fortune that this little misadventure was a thing of the country.

"Fine, good, pal, pal!

Keating, his back to the driveway, heard the approaching rig before it had come to a stop beside him.

"What is this?" asked a chilly voice from behind.

"This man was a chasin' of Consuella, an' I caught him at it. He had a fishhook in her wool, and his pole and line hanged to it, and he was runnin' her to beat Time. We know—Hiram and I—what were you set by that sheep, Mrs. Griggs, an' we kept him, thinkin' as how you'd like to add him to your list."

A nasalcal laugh rang out, and the narrow in the bones of the planet congealed as he heard it. He knew that laugh.

"Turn him over," came in a sad contralto. "You don't care if I look at him, do you, cousin?"

Hiram's foot prodded the youth face about—and a bedcred face it was.

"Oh, hello!" the contralto voice linked a hysterical scream.

"Oh, aunt!" she gasped when she had recovered her breath. "This is too much! Your sheep chaser is—is my beau!"

Following the sidesa of Mrs. Griggs Keating was speedily liberated. Expiations followed. Mrs. Griggs laughed. Miss Martha Deaton screamed and fainted. Keating, whose sense of humor would not spread to cover the situation, fumed and complained at the two embarrassed ones who were responsible for his predicament. With awkward apologies the two made a hasty departure.

"That is the first time I ever saw you give indications of being real pink and blood," growled Keating, townbound, and with the girl by his side.

"Now that I find you something besides a business automaton and a creature of conditions, like the rest of us, we may understand each other better," laughed the girl.

SELF-HELP OF THE DUTCH

Thrift and Frugality of the Holland Farmer Are Impressive to the Stranger.

"Help a Dutch," which caught my eye one day in a tram car, is the motto of the Dutch farmer and of the Netherlands. Nothing is more refreshing to me in Holland than the independent, hands-off attitude of the farmer to the state.

The impressive thrift and frugality of Holland, which is quite another thing from mere industry, marks the agriculture and horticulturists not only an equal mind, but a commensurate, if not greater, ability. Some fore have of Holland put on its back what I be the wisdom to refrain from forcing upon its stomach.

"Even if a farmer is rich," said a close observer, "you do not know he is rich." One finds well-to-do farmers in blouses and clumpers. Wealth is small regard for appearances. Two men in their shirtsleeves planting shrubs at a nursery were, I learned, travelers of the farm who spoke three languages, one learned from their German and Italian rounds, they very fitting up their farm in the south.

"Yes," said a man who knows England and Holland well, "we work harder, we are more economical, and we try more than you do. I think, to meet the market. I don't see that conditions are different in your country from ours, but, yes, the people are different." — Correspondent London Daily Chronicle.

GIVEN UP TO TRADE

Only the Old Guard Holds Forth on Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

Fashionable Thoroughfare Has Been Almost Completely Sold Out to Invading Merchants—Only Few Prominent Families Remain.

New York—Imperious old Fifth avenue has gone—not into clay, but into dollars. At Fifty-second street the Vanderbilts, the Sloanes and the Shepards, intrenched behind their massive mansions, have been making the last stand of the old guard against the invasion of mercantile. But now, unbidden, and the guard, they have surrendered, and within a year Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will have for third door neighbor a French modiste with fine, big electric signs to confirm the famous mansion at Fifty-seventh street, where for years and years the destinies of social America have been swayed.

It is well within the memory of New Yorkers that Fifth avenue from Fifteenth to Fifty-ninth street was so exclusive that only the Kaiser's brokers could live there, whatever their wealth. Then patroons frowned, creaseless trousers off the street. New folks of all classes mingle freely, and there is only one block in all the city where trade has not intruded. In this block within six months an apartment house with a promised height of seven hundred of feet will crown the neighborhood.

The whole story of it all is that the "old Fifth avenue" has sold out. It has received more money consideration from trade for moving up town than the new Fifth avenue than the senile mental satisfaction of preserving its ancestral homes was worth. It has emigrated northward—or to Europe—leaving only the Shaver Vanderbilts, the Sloanes, the Shepards, the Huntingtons and William Rockefeller as representatives to battle against the invasion. Only few Fifty-second street families remain.

He Sped Grimly Across Fields.

The Vanderbilt Home.

The Vanderbilt home, the Cornelius Vanderbilt home, the Sloane home, the Shepard home, the Huntington home, the Rockefeller home, the Harry Payne Whitney residence, the famous old Cornelius Vanderbilt mansion, the Harriman mansion to be made over into a modern apartment house. The fact that this new neighbor is said to have been a Vegetable house has delighted the trade, however, may as proof to the social outside of the Shepards and Vanderbilts.

Just below, the famous old Ancrum Zeigfeld house has gone into the hands of Schupmann's sons, who are making it over into fine business quarters, with apartments above. And right there, also, is the Celia P. Hunt lingerie mansion, with a new gilded art shop across the way.

This block, down Fifth avenue shows, in addition, an amazing display of glittering glass, with stately brick grounds of brownstone and marble, advertising trade where "no horse ever ate oats" and where no hold levee. Signs are everywhere. One of them even advertises coal from the basement of the mansion that wreckers are destroying overhead.

POLICEMAN A CORN EATER

New York Officer Gets Away With 51 Ears in 3 Hours and 5 Minutes.

New York.—Policeman William Orestetti won the $10 purse and the corn eating championship of the world when he disposed of sixty-one ears of the succulent "roasters." Red Dunlap, former champion, who has been driving a horse and was out of form and not much more than half-fed, was second, and Jack Dempsey, who has always been a rival of Dunlap's, was merely an "also ran."

Orestetti is a newcomer in the corn eating field. After the feat he announced that he had "saved" some room if any contestant came into."

The corn eating contest was the event of the season in the East side Edward Rosenstein, known all over the East side as "Rosy," had arranged the event. It was in celebration of his forty-eighth birthday, and he invited the public at an immense and Clinton streets.

Rosy was equipped to receive challenges from all comers.

Headless Powders Kill.

Wooster, O.—Mrs. D. J. C. Hanna of Big Prairie, died a few hours after taking an overdose of headache medicine. Suffering with a severe pain, the woman went to her husband's medicine case and took a tablet. It had no effect and in half an hour she took another. There was enough poison in the two tablets to cause her death in spite of her husband's efforts to save her.

The Reason It Aged.

"I have kept this whisky twenty years."

"Gee! You must have known why you kind it was!"

HEINZE MARRIES AN ACTRESS

Montana's Young Copper King, Who Worsted the Trust, Weds Bernice Golden Henderson.

Butte, Mont.—The marriage of F. Augustus Heinze to Miss Bernice Golden Henderson, which recently took place, was of considerable public interest, not so much on account of the bride, who is young, beautiful and an actress, as because of the remarkable personality of this young "copper king" of Montana, who single-handed and almost alone brought the most powerful trust in the world to its knees.

Heinze, who is a native of Brooklyn, where he was born in 1867, came to Butte in 1889 as a surveyor and found work in the copper mines. After two years' service he came into a fortune of $50,000, went to Germany where he studied engineering and metallurgy and returning to Montana organized the Montana Ore Purchasing company. At this period was formed the great Amalgamated Copper company, which saw the installation of $75,000,000, since increased to $155,000,000, in a labor dispute which the "trust" forced upon its employes, seeking to reduce wages and increase the hours of labor, Heinze stood by the workers, paying them in his employ the usual wage rate, and thus came under the displeasure of the trust. For years a Amalgamated sought to force him into the trust or drive him out of the state and the battle between Heinze on the one hand and the trust on the other was carried in numerous suits through every court in the state and to the supreme court of the nation. And Heinze won at every turn.

Upon the issues at stake in these suits men were elected to the legislature, judges were appointed to the bench and newspapers were bought or subsidized. Political issues were fight of and men almost forgot that they were Democrats or Republicans, being classified instead as adherents of the Amalgamated company or of the Heinze interests.

Heinze is a strong man mentally and physically. On his father's side the family is traced back through a long line of Lutheran ministers for generations. Heinze's mother and on the mother's side it goes back in this country to the first governor of Connecticut.

WEE INCIDENT OF CIVIL WAR

Young Soldier Crawls Along Burned Bridge at Night and Compels Enemy to Retreat.

The bravest and coolest act that came under my observation during five years' military service at the time of the Civil war, was that of Isaac B. Hardy, a soldier nineteen years of age, who has been for many years a resident of Santa Barbara.

March 2, 1865, Gen. Sherman, on his march through the Carolinas, arrived before Cheraw, on the great Pedee river. Three Seventeenth corps, with my regiment, the Sixty-fourth Illinois, known as the Yates Sharpshooters, in the lead as skirmishers, held the center, writes Brig. Gen. J. S. Reynolds in Los Angeles Times.

I was ordered to immediately advance the skirmishers at a double quick through the town to the other end of the only bridge there over the river, and, if possible, prevent the enemy from destroying it. We reached the bridge after the engineer of advance with the leading squads of the enemy's cavalry, who had been guarding the roads leading into the town, but already the farther end of the bridge was on fire, and many of the cavalry had to ride through the smoke and blaze to escape.

The sharpshooters kept the enemy away from the bridge while our engineers crossed over to the fire and extinguished it. Only a charred timber was left of the burnt span connecting with the shore almost.

When the pioneers returned and the sharpshooters stopped firing, a line of infantry formed on the opposite bank of the river and commenced firing on our men. Then we were ordered to deploy the sharpshooters along our shore and drive the others from their position. Our rifles did good execution, and the enemy retired out of range. At dusk they again moved down to the river and a brisk fire was kept up from both sides all night. At dawn, when it slackened to only an occasional shot from either side.

About 1 o'clock we heard the report of one of our Winder rifles at or near the farther end of the bridge, and the report kept up as fast as a lively soldier could load and fire. Our men supposed that the enemy, as the day may had commenced a brisk fire, our entire line opened fire on the opposite shore, awaiting sending their bullets too near the bridge.

I hastened to the bridge and there learned that young Hardy, of Company E, one of the equal stationed at the bridge, had asked and been given permission to go over toward the farther end of the bridge and see how things looked there.

With the bridge squad we hastened on the bridge, and when half-way from the enemy had ceased firing, and Hardy's rifle was quiet.

Young Hardy soon made his appearance and reported that the enemy had retreated, that they had formed in column and were marching into the country as fast as they could go.

Here follows young Hardy's modest narrative of his midnight ride into the enemy's lines.

"I walked over to about the middle of the bridge; then I crouched down and went forward very quietly, keeping in the shadow of the railing, till I reached the end of the bridge. I could see no one right near the bridge, but I could plainly see the Orionatel's figure, with the water's edge down the river, and I thought it would be fine to get a flank fire on them.

"I discovered a single sentinel that connected the bridge with the land, and I crawled along this until I reached the sentinel on the shore. Here I found a place to sit astride a cross-cross-timber, where, by leaning over to one side, I had a good view of the reba, and they were not thirty to see me.

"As soon as I commenced firing at them they opened fire pretty freely on the bridge and at the abutment where I was, but the timbers protected me. The place was much better than I expected, but I kept on firing as them as fast as I could. I could hear our sharpshooters' bullets strike the bank.

"It was not long till they fell back to higher ground, and then there started their fire across the road that led from the bridge, I still had a good range on them, and bent on firing. They pretty soon moved back diagonally to the road, and stopped firing. Then I could see a few men and I got out on the road, and there they were just disappearing into the dark mass. I fired at them and they fired back at me. They were soon out of sight. I guess that is the last we will see of these Johnnies."

FOLLY OF NURSING GRUDGE

A bad memory is often the adjunct of magnanimity. Personal injuries ride out of the normal mind even when they are not forgiven, but where we get a good memory and a "bad heart" they rankle forever. The act of remembering is, except in rare instances, and among abnormally sensitive people, who often strive in forget, pleasurable. There are few recollections which any of us would consent to lose if we were counseled; but the pleasure to be gained from the going over of grudges, while it is undeniable, is fearfully unwholesome, is liable in fact, to undermine the moral health altogether. To this form of incompetence the man "rich as ex-regionally long memory is most prone. "How lasty I was treated!" is the note in himself. The truth is, I am too good-natured, too scrupulous, too highly strung. In this rough world every man should look out for himself"—and he proceeds to teach some one else the same unfortunate lesson. The constant renewal of his sense of injury has made him thinks better of himself and set worse by his neighbor than he would ever have done had he been more forgetful.

From any expression of determined revenge all decent people now shrink, but it is a question with which persons above a certain level of cultivation hardly count. Hard work, more especially mental work, destroys the power of memory, and the continual rush of fresh thoughts tends to flush the memory and to wash out personal spite.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Hemans' Key-Note Speech

Son News. Lawton T. Hemans, democratic candidate for governor, in Grand Rapids on last Wednesday delivered his "key note" speech. Altogether the most striking characteristic of Candidate Hemans' speech is the fact that is no important or essential detail does he take a position or enunciate a proposition looking to better government in Michigan which Chase S. Osborn has not preached during the primary campaign from a hundred platforms in every section of Michigan. Never before do we recall an instance where the enemy's guns have been so completely spiked as in the present campaign in the peninsula state. Mr. Osborn's campaign for the nomination was so astutely and cleverly conducted as not only to secure the nomination by an overwhelming majority but to leave his democratic opponent absolutely without effective ammunition for the November fray.

Following tactics unsuccessfully pursued in the recent primary Hemans seeks to impugn Chase Osborn's sincerity in his denunciation of abuses which have crept into state administration in Michigan by asserting Osborn to have been one time a supporter of Warner. Chase Osborn is a republican and has supported republican candidates, but he has demonstrated himself to be the sort of republican who when he finds the party betrayed into practices which are unworthy is not afraid to speak frankly and fearlessly to call a spade a spade, to hit out straight from the shoulder. That the state accepts him as a man of honesty and sincerity as well as of fearless courage and unlimited independence, his wonder full primary victory, carrying on one of twelve congressional districts, amply proves.

Mr. Hemans' expression of views upon the question of mine taxation reads as if taken bodily from one of Chase Osborn's speeches. In an interview in Owosso last June Mr. Osborn declared that the mining property of the state as a whole was undervalued and should be reassessed and that this work should be done by an expert commission. This is precisely what Hemans now demands. With the democratic candidate thus endorsing the position long ago assumed by the republican candidate, and both asserting the need of reassessment of mining property by an expert commission, and both opposed to the application of a tonnage tax, the question of mine taxation ceases to be an issue in the campaign.

Mr. Hemans likewise follows Chase Osborn's lead on the question of an employer's liability law which shall fit modern conditions of labor. In this instance Hemans' idea is not only identical with that given expression by Osborn but even the language in which it is couched bears striking resemblance to Mr. Osborn's declarations, further emphasizing Mr. Hemans' adoption of this plank of Mr. Osborn's primary election platform.

Deprived by the character of Osborn's campaign for the nomination of "Warner-ism" as an issue and in complete agreement with the position assumed on mine taxation and employers' liability by Osborn months ago, Hemans is left battling material upon which to build his campaign. He is reduced to the time worn, thread-bare arguments of the "outs" against the "ins," to the familiar perennial democratic promises of good behavior is given a chance, to the fault-finding and critical assertions which have always characterized democratic defeats in Michigan.

In brief, Hemans as a democrat promises nothing for better government or improved conditions which, Osborn, as a republican, does not promise with more striking difference between as a republican Osborn could put his reforms into practice with the aid of a republican legislature, while Hemans would be dealing locked with a law-making body on his hands of the opposite political faith; and the further and more important difference that Osborn as a public official has shown by his conduct that he means what he says, while Hemans as a member of the legislature voted for many of the legislative extravagances of which he now complains.

Mr. Hemans' "key note speech" is the least indication which has yet appeared that Michigan will elect Chase S. Osborn governor in November by an old time, overwhelming republican majority.

Judge Mayne and Probation.

Elk Rapids Progress: Sunday evening Judge F. W. Mayne of the 13th judicial circuit delivered his lecture on "The Law and the Law Breakers" at the M. E. church. The auditorium was filled to its capacity. The address was listened to with great interest, as it treated a subject that is a perplexing one to students of criminology of all nations at the present time—the best methods of treating criminals who have been convicted and so handling their cases that justice shall be done to both the man who has transgressed the law and the people. Judge Mayne was one of the prime movers in securing the passage of the probation law a few years ago. As yet this statute is in its experimental stage. It was upon the working of this law that Judge Mayne talked, and especially the practical working as shown by his experience in his circuit. The judge fully realizes the great responsibility that devolves upon the court in carrying out its provisions and at the same time avoiding the creation of a sentiment that shall be injurious in the full enforcement of the laws. The judge stated that the criminal costs the nation $500,000,000 annually and the state of Michigan about $5,000,000. It will readily be seen that there is an economic as well as reformatory question involved. The responsibility of the trial judge in suspending sentence that as far as possible the criminal shall be brought under reformatory influences, and at the same time the hardened villain who is past reformation—the man who intends to defy the law—must be dealt with, and the case must be so handled that it will have a deliterrent influence on other would be law breakers. The judge is seeking the co-operation of the people of his district that he may have the information upon which to act intelligently. When a person is placed under probation he is not exempt from punishment by any means, and he is under such restrictions as will insure his being a good citizen for a time at least, and in many instances though the remainder of his life. The address of Judge Mayne was particularly interesting and of great value to our people at the present time. Probation is not resorted to except in the cases of first offenders and juvenile cases—such persons as in the mind of the court can be reformed and made good citizens.

Gray Hair Turning Black.

Arnold Reimer, seventy-eight years old, is extraction more than ordinary interest in Portland, Ore., because after having had white hair for 40 years his shaggy locks are now turning black. Reimer has been a newspaper man for six decades. He has traveled the world over many times. Forty-last summer he was teased by friends for having grease spots in his white hair. He began to examine his silvery locks, and found that the dark spots were the result of a natural growth of dark hair. Now, after six months, the old man declares his youthful days are returning. Physicians are unable to account for the queer properties of Reimer's hair and say similar cases are rare.

DO INCHES MAKE THE MAN

Until the time of the war between Russia and Japan the whole world was obliged to defend the prowess of his kind by citing Napoleon as an example of what short persons could do. Thiers, the great French novelist, whose height was a trifle more than five feet, either out of philosophy, often seriously, endeavored to show a connection between short stature and superiority. It was also a source of consolation to him and to other men who were not in the tall class, to read in history that the Roman conquerors were short, but after the Russo-Japanese war it became evident to all that stature had nothing to do with the case, unless, perhaps, the victory of the little men of Japan proved the short man was the superior of the tall. But now come the municipal authorities in our cities, who say that a tall policeman is better than a short and that a tall fireman is the superior of a short fireman, says Boston Globe. Five feet six inches is the limit of stature to be tolerated by some, while others lower the standard a quarter of an inch. Others would have it half an inch more. Superintendents die hard. We are still children, and, although far from the stature of giants, we cling to the notion that inches make the man.

Great Britain has just launched one of the biggest of the dreadnought battleships which the government is steadily adding to the navy. And that American ideas are good for something in this connection is shown by the information which has leaked out, notwithstanding the secrecy with which naval matters are guarded, that the guns on the new vessel will be more much like those on United States battleships of the latest design, so that they can be fired one above another and concentrate tremendous striking power at a given point. Builders of our warships are giving valuable points to all the world.

It will be a good day in this city when every boy who goes to the high school can multiply and divide with satisfying accuracy, when he knows the rule of three and is up on fractions, says Philadelphia Inquirer. If in addition to this he can write legibly, read distinctly and spell correctly he will have a better equipment than has been common of late. In trying to teach children too much we have not treated them to definite ways of thinking. Yet to think clearly about anything is the great prerequisite of life and ought to be the chief aim of education.

Reports of accidents to women wearing hobble skirts begin to come in. Of course such accidents are inevitable. A woman who deliberately binds her limbs before submitting herself to the dangers of the highway is a fool for handicapping herself even unimpeded physically, she likely would lack the intelligence to dodge a street car.

A man in New York was sent to prison for four years for stealing a five-cent lookingglass. It cered him right. A man who makes so little of his opportunities in the face of such shining examples ought to be shut off from the rest of society.

A bank in Spokane is issuing antipoverty seals. Until a few months Arkansaw was all to better than the others with the progressive idea of the age, as far as the others are concerned, with all their germs, we love them still.

"Dd Washington sweat?" asked a correspondent. We don't know, but a lightsweat could be furnished if we knew whether Martha's dresses were buttoned down the back.

Home genius has invented a machine for measuring human voices. It will not help much unless it makes it possible for the operator to go away and leave it after his sets it going.

A New York street car jumped the track and ran into a saloon. An amazing instance of the power of suggestion the car driver was doubtless very thirsty.

Considered as an aerial racer the carrier pigeon may not be quite up to date, but its motor seldom if ever gets out of order.

A man has been found starving himself because he feared the end of the world was at hand. There must be such a thing as the rash bravery of cowardice.

A writer nearly remarks that there is no excuse for drowning. Unfortunately, apologies are never offered.

It's a wise man who can guess two times out of three which way the cat is going to jump.

The man in New York who killed himself because he thought himself too small to live was probably a child in brain as well as in stature.

With bubble caps and paper drinking vessels in the saloons it looks as even the old original harvester is likely to use the cups falling off.

Then, again, most of the smuggling is done by people who do not need to steal.

LORIMER FOES WIN

CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEEMEN DECIDE TO HEAR EVIDENCE ABOUT "JACKPOT."

WILL WIDEN INQUIRY SCOPE

Charles A. White on Stand as First Witness Retells his Story of Alleged Bribery in Election of United States Senator.

Chicago.—As a result of a decision made by the senate investigating committee, counsel for Attorney Hanecy's objection to Charles A. White's testimony at the hearing Monday, all "jack-pot" and other evidence dealing with alleged bribery of Illinois legislators to vote for Senator William Lorimer will be admitted.

Arguments on making permanent the ruling to admit "jack-pot" testimony were made, and also taking of evidence by telephone. Upon the conclusion of the arguments they ruled that the question which precipitated it should be answered. They also decided that hereafter each "jack-pot" question should be ruled upon separately.

Attorney Hanecy's objection came when Representative Charles A. White was on the stand. White had told his story of the alleged offer of $1,000 to vote for Lorimer for senator and had begun to tell the committee that in addition he was promised a share in the "jack-pot" when Attorney Hanecy interrupted.

Attorney Hanecy submitted that the "jack-pot" evidence was irrelevant to the bribery charge.

The committee retired to a private room for deliberation and after ten minutes decided that Mr. Hanecy's objection could not stand. The decision is held to widen the scope of the inquiry to include every action which in any way has bearing on Senator Lorimer's election.

White's story was practically the same as he told to the Browne trials.

WAGE WAR ON SUGAR TRUST

New Action Against American Refining Company is Ordered by Attorney General Wickersham.

Washington.—Orders from the attorney general to District Attorney Wise in New York to smash the original "trust" went out Monday and the action will be filed there within a week.

An amended petition, though much more comprehensive in its charges, has been prepared by the conference between the attorney general, District Attorney Wise, Special Attorney Simson and Mr. McKenzie.

It charges the sugar trust with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and the court is asked to dissolve the trust and issue an injunction restraining the American Sugar Refining company of New Jersey from voting the shares of the subsidiary companies pending the redistribution of those shares among their original owners. The action will be in all respects similar to that which resulted in the dissolution of the Standard Oil company in the United States circuit court and is a general way it resembles the action against the tobacco trust. It is learned that an excellent hold into the sugar trust developes that all three of these concerns have been organized and were operated along parallel lines.

BOTH SIDES CLAIM CONTROL

Roosevelt and Sherman Are Confident of Victory at New York Republican State Convention.

Saratoga, N. Y.—"We are going to Saratoga to beat them to a frazzle; do not forget the word, frazzle," said Theodore Roosevelt in a speech to a crowd which he made at Troy station Monday on his way to Saratoga. Came back from Africa with some trophies and when you look at them remember we shall have some trophies."

When Mr. Roosevelt ended he was tendered a big reception at the railroad station. Mr. Roosevelt went into conference at once with Dr. Grissom and took up the task of swinging unpledged delegates into line.

With the coming of Vice-President Sherman on the scene of the political battle, the old guard forces redoubled their energies to secure control of the Republican state convention and prevent the progressives from sending the candidates and writing the party platform. Mr. Sherman had scarcely alighted from the train before he was in conference with William Barnes, Jr., who frankly stated that neither side had a majority of the delegates and that the fight was far from settled.

"Who is going to be temporary chairman of the convention?" Mr. Sherman was asked.

"I am," was the reply; "that's what I came here for."

GILMAN IS MADE THE CHIEF

BOSTON MAN ELECTED TO HEAD THE GRAND ARMY.

Retiring Commander Pays High Tribute to Confederates—5,325 Veterans Die in 1909.

Atlantic City, N. J.—The national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic Thursday elected John E. Gilman of Boston commander-in-chief for the ensuing year. John McElroy, the only other aspirant for the office, withdrawing his name prior to the election.

In opening the business session of the national encampment the retiring commander-in-chief, Samuel R. Van Sant, of Minnesota, gave a comprehensive review of the work of the organization for the past year and outlined what might be accomplished for the good of the order in the future.

The commander spoke earnestly as he expressed his gratification at the increasing fraternization of the "blue" and the "gray."

When he said that no braver troops were ever marshaled for conflict than the northern soldiers and that the Union veterans now realize that we men ever made greater sacrifices for what they believed to be right than their former foes, the commander was applauded.

While the roll of the Grand Army is steadily shortening, the commander declared urged that every effort be made to keep the organization up to its fullest possible strength. He quoted the figures showing that G. A. R. at the beginning of the present year had still 215,943 members in good standing, as against 220,600 at the beginning of 1909. The loss during the year was 5,731, of which 5,325 was by death.

Commander-in-Chief Van Sant had recommendation for the work of all the auxiliaries, praising the excellent work being done by the Woman's Relief corps, Ladies of the G. A. R., Sons of Veterans and Daughters of Veterans.

FIND NEW BRIBE EVIDENCE

Charles Luce, Now Dead, Is Said to Have Confessed to Getting $1,000 for Vote.

Springfield, Ill.—State's Attorney Hunter of Sangamon county has obtained information that another member of the Illinois legislature received $1,000 for voting for William Lorimer for senator.

The man who made this admission of receiving cash for his vote was Charles S. Luce of Nashville, who represented the Forty-fourth district in the house, and who has since died. Mr. Burke obtained the knowledge of Luce's admission some time ago, but it could not be used as evidence in any pending criminal case.

It is pertinent, however, to the broader matter of Lorimer's election sale under investigation by the senatorial committee in Chicago, and may be used in that inquiry.

The admission was made by Luce, according to one of Mr. Burke's staff familiar with the matter, to Hugh V. Murray of Carlyle, now state's attorney of Clinton county.

The date of the conversation in which Luce made the confession was August 18, 1909, months prior to the publication of the Willis confession and the corroborative confessions of Lee Buckeneyer, Link and Hostetter. Luke is said to have told Murray:

"I got $1,000 for my vote for Lorimer, and Buckeneyer was a fool if he didn't get the same."

Luke was one of those present in the Southern hotel ballroom in St. Louis, and his widow gave testimony before the Cook county grand jury that seemed to indicate that he had not been overlooked in the "jack-pot" distribution.

SIX DEAD IN CRASH

TRACTION COACH COLLIDES WITH CAR NEAR TIPTON, IND.

TWELVE PERSONS ARE HURT

Second Smashup on Indiana Roads within Month Leaves Six Dead and Saved Himself Says, "I Guess We Overran Instructions."

Tipton, Ind.—In a collision on the Indiana Union Traction road two miles north of this city Saturday six persons were killed and 12 others more or less seriously injured.

This was the second disaster on Indiana traction lines within a week, the first having occurred on the Wabash Valley line at Kingsland on Wednesday.

In both cases there was a mistake in orders—one of the trains overran the station at which it was to stop and met the other on a sharp curve in a broadside collision.

Dr. W. C. Hoffhouser, who was killed in the wreck, was on his way to Kokomo, ind., where he was to have been married. His brother, who also was killed, was to have been the best man at the wedding. The bride to have been is Miss Nellie Coxen, daughter of the secretary of the Great Western Pottery company of Kokomo.

The collision was between a northbound limited passenger train and a south-bound freight. The south-bound motorman had orders to wait at a first stop north of the crossing. It is said, but overran that point, thinking he could make another stop.

A delay of three minutes had the approaching cars and they came together at a sharp curve. The freight crashed through the front of the limited, demolishing the smoker. The motorman and all the passengers in the smoking compartment of the limited were killed. The motorman and conductor on the freight car jumped and escaped uninjured.

"I guess we overran the orders," said motorman Jim Hughes, when he had fully recovered from the shock caused by jumping from the car. Motorman Reeves was equally dazed at the occurrence and could not explain why it was they had passed the switch.

ROOSEVELT DEFEATS SHERMAN AS TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN OF NEW YORK CONVENTION.

VOTE RESULTS 567 TO 445

Ex-President Praises Taft and Hughes in Speech—He is Viciously Scored by Abraham Gruber of New York.

Saratoga, N. Y.—Theodore Roosevelt was elected temporary chairman of the Republican state convention of Vice-President Sherman and Theodore Roosevelt, who was present in person, Chairman Woodruff of the Republican state committee carried out the convention's dictates in presenting Mr. Sherman's name, while Colonel Roosevelt was nominated by Joseph Hicks, a delegate from Nassau, the enrollment of the roll.

Col. Abraham Gruber of New York, speaking for the "old guard," attacked Roosevelt and in the course of a virulent scoring of the former president uttered the epithets "the man in the saddle" and "the man who puts his brains—Comptroller William Prendergast addressed the convention in behalf of Roosevelt.

No one enjoyed Gruber's speech more than Colonel Roosevelt, who delivered a speech in the afternoon in behalf Gruber's statement that it was the first time that one-hundreds of Roosevelt's strength in the convention came from federal office-holders. As our point the jeers and catcalls became so great that Colonel Roosevelt leaped to his feet and, waving his hands at the delegates, cried: "I ask a full hearing for Colonel Gruber."

The speaker continued, but hissed almost drowned his attacks on Roosevelt.

Comptroller Prendergast of New York was recognized to speak for Colonel Roosevelt. Mr. Prendergast congratulated Roosevelt on Gruber's speech. He said he knew of nothing better to show the line of cleavage between Roosevelt friends and "other people in this convention."

The fight for control overshadowed the main business of the convention, that of making nominations for governor and other state officers. Interest centers in the fight over direct nominations.

Mr. Roosevelt in his speech as temporary chairman said:

"We come here feeling that we have the right to appeal to the people from the statesmanship alike of national and state achievement. During the last eighteen months a long list of laws, embodying legislation most healthy to the commonwealth as regards both civic and industrial progress, has been enacted by congress and approved by President Taft.

Mr. Roosevelt made a strong point of the direct primary issue, saying that he stood for a law that would make it possible for the people to decide who the candidates shall be instead of being limited merely to choosing between candidates with whose nomination they have had nothing to do.

LORIMER SCORES A POINT

Chairman Burrows of Senate Committee Rules Against Hearsay Evidence in Bribery Case.

Chicago.—United States Senator William Lorimer, whose right to his seat in the upper house of congress is to be determined by a senate committee, won a victory Tuesday. Senator Burrows, chairman of the committee, ruled that no hearsay evidence relating to the charges in the election of the senator could be given by the witnesses at the inquiry in progress.

The decision was given after Mr. Burrows had read a long decision made by a similar committee which investigated the election of Senator Stephen B. Spencer on charges of having obtained his seat through bribery and corrupt practices, and found him not guilty. The precedent decision pointed out that it could not be established that someone ever paid money for a vote or had knowledge of it.

CHAPTER II.

A Torn Telegram.

I lunched alone at the Gillmore house, and went back to the city at once. The sun had lifted the mists, and a fresh summer wind had cleared away the smoke pall. The business world was full of cars flying countryward for the Saturday half-holiday, toward golf and tennis, green fields and billing girls. I grinned my teeth and thought of Mollie Gilbert in Richmond. And then, for the first time, I realized that John Gilbert was straightaughter with the "West" that McKnight had irritably flung at me.

I still carried my traveling bag, for I had not noticed that the detective at McKnight's table had not been without baggage. I was ashamed of the trick I had played on him, but I was afraid of the effect. I did not transfer the notes to my pocket, and, if I had, it would not have altered the situation later, only the effect day McKnight put his hands on the delegates, cried: "I ask a full hearing for Colonel Gruber."

The speaker continued, but hissed almost drowned his attacks on Roosevelt.

Comptroller Prendergast of New York was recognized to speak for Colonel Roosevelt. Mr. Prendergast congratulated Roosevelt on Gruber's speech. He said he knew of nothing better to show the line of cleavage between Roosevelt friends and "other people in this convention."

The fight for control overshadowed the main business of the convention, that of making nominations for governor and other state officers. Interest centers in the fight over direct nominations.

Mr. Roosevelt in his speech as temporary chairman said:

"We come here feeling that we have the right to appeal to the people from the statesmanship alike of national and state achievement. During the last eighteen months a long list of laws, embodying legislation most healthy to the commonwealth as regards both civic and industrial progress, has been enacted by congress and approved by President Taft.

"They represent an earnest of the achievement which is yet to come, and the beneficence and far-reaching importance of this work, done for the whole people, measure the credit which is rightly due to the congress and to our able, upright and distinguished president, William Howard Taft.

Colonel Roosevelt was unstinting in praising Governor Hughes for the force he had undertaken and laid particular emphasis upon the remarkable legislation passed through the governor.

Mr. Roosevelt made a strong point of the direct primary issue, saying that he stood for a law that would make it possible for the people to decide who the candidates shall be instead of being limited merely to choosing between candidates with whose nomination they have had nothing to do.

"I was decided by the progressive leaders to name United States Senator Elihu Root as permanent chairman of the convention.

"Which Will You Have, Lower Ten or Eleven?"

I got two lowers easily, and, turning with ice change and berths, held out the tickets.

"Which will you have?" I asked. "Lower 11 or lower 10?"

"It makes no difference," she said. "Thank you very much indeed."

I was ashamed of my trickery, and called a porter to help her with her luggage. I followed the porter down the main aisle, and ten minutes more saw us under way.

Dinner made my car, but it presented the peculiarly unattractive appearance common to strangers. The berths were made up; the center aisle was a tunnel between walls of dingy, linen-covered curtains, while the two seats at each end of the car were piled high with the unsightly-looking blankets turned back—I have always a distrust of those much-used blankets—I prepared to wait gradually for sleep.

But sleep did not visit me. The train seemed to be constantly stopping, and I surmised the hot box again. I had a nervous fear, that there was something chilling in the thought of my, I gathered, and the young woman's wished to go alone. I drank three cups of coffee, which accounted for my wakefulness later, and shamelessly watched the tableau before me. The woman's protest evidently went for nothing; across the table the man grinned monosyllabic replies and grew more and more lowering and sullen. Once, during a brief unexpected pianissimo in the music, her voice came to my ears:

"If I could only see him in time!" she was saying. "Oh, it's terrible!"

In spite of my interest I would have forgotten the whole incident at once, erased it from my mind as one does the inessentials and cluttering of a scenery, had I not met them again later that evening, in the Pennsylvania station. The situation between them had not visibly altered: The same dogged determination showed in the man's face, but the sense of injured daughter or wife! I wondered—had I been down her veil and I could only suspect what white misery lay behind it.

I bought my berth after waiting in a line of some eight or ten people. Then I went back to the smoker, almost reached the window, a tall woman in a black veil had not noticed my place to me from my elbow. She had a ticket and money in her hand.

"Will you try to get me a lower when you buy yours?" she asked. "I have been traveling alone in upper berths."

I consented, of course; beyond that I hardly noticed the woman. I had a vague impression of a black veil and a certain amount of stateliness, but the crowd was pushing behind me, and something chilling in the thought of the second section pounding along behind us. Once, as I was dozing, our locomotive whistled a shrill warning to a "Go back there where you belong." It screamed to my drowsy ears, and from somewhere behind came a chaste and "ladylike" reply.

I grew more and more wide-awake. At Crescent junction we waited for a long time, while the Chicago train passengers boarded the train. There was a long delay between car rooms in southern voices, rich and full. Then the train moved, and I dozed once more. Time passed, perhaps ten minutes, possibly half an hour. Then, without the slightest warning, as the train rounded a curve, a heavy body was thrown into my berth. The incident, trivial as it seemed, was startling in the extreme. I sat up, my ears and eyes painfully strained and awake.

I had heard no step outside. The next instant the curtain sung limp again; still without a sound, my disturbed and alarmed eyes into the gloom and darkness. In a frenzy of wakefulness, I sat up, drew on a pair of slippers and fumbled for my bath robe.

From a berth scroll, probably lower ten, came that particularly aggravating snore which begins lightly, delicately, faintly soprano, goes down the scale a note with every breath, and, after keeping the listener tense with expectation, ends with an explosion that tears the very air. I was more and more irritable; I sat on the edge of the berth and I peed the snorer over my shoulder.

He had considerable vitality, however, for the shock did not even interrupt and survived to start again with new vigor. In desperation I found some cigarettes and one match, piled my blankets over my grim, and lighted the curtains together as though the berth were still occupied, I made my way to the vestibule of the car.

I was not clad for dress parade. It is because the male is so restricted to gloom in his everyday attire that he must compensate with colors in his pajamas and dressing gowns? It would take a Turk to feel at home before a audience in my red and yellow bath robe. I felt ridiculously conspicuous as Mrs. Kleptom, with slippers to match.

So, naturally, I met no one in the nine compartments of the smoking, my first instinct was to dodge. The woman, however, was not there that I, she was a startled glance, wheeling and disappeared, with a flash of the brown braids. In the next car.

Cigarette box in one hand, match in the other, I leaned against the uncertain frame of the door and waited after her vanished figure. The moonlit air flapped my bath robe around my bare ankles, my one match burned to the end and went out, and still I waited. I had seen on her expressive face a haunting look that was horror, nothing less. Heaven knows, I am not psychological. Emotions have to be written large before I can read them. But a woman in trouble always appeals to me, and this woman was more than that. She was in dread to fear.

If I had not been afraid of being rude, I would have followed her. But I fancied that the apparition of a man in a red and yellow bath robe, with an unkempt thatch of hair, walking up to her and assuring her that he would protect her would probably put her into hysterics. I had done that once before, when burglars had tried to break into the house, and had carried the woman back into bed for a week. So I tried to assure myself that I had rendered her lady a service—or caused it, perhaps—and to dismiss her from my mind. Perhaps she was more comfortable than she seemed. I was growing drowsy; the smoke, the intense heat and the horrified face was fading in retrospect. It was colder, too, and I turned with a shiver to go in.

And so, a bit of paper fluttered into the aisle and settled on my sleeve, like a butterfly on a goldenrod. I picked it up curiously and glanced at it. It was part of a telegram that had been torn into bits.

There were only parts of four words on the scrap, but it left me puzzled and thoughtful it read: "—over ten. Lower ten. Lower ten, car seven, seven. Send Pitt. Send Dave. Send Pitts—"

Coined By Missouri Judge

First Use of Expression, "The Man Higher Up," Has Been Traced

History may be doubtful as to the identity of the man who fastened the "Show Me" tradition on the state of Missouri, but there will not be in the case of the man who coined the expression "The Man Higher Up." The first use of this expression was made by Elmer B. Adams, judge of the federal court in St. Louis. Even the very case in which he used the expression has been dug out, and the archeologists who have been carrying on the investigation defy the world to show them being Missouri men). Why and where they are wrong.

Certain claims that the phrase, "Get at the Man Higher Up," was first used by Theodore Roosevelt are scouted by the historians in question, who have gone into the inquiry with all the caution and precaution of true scientists. Nowhere in the pages of the vaudeville stage or of the daily press can be found the slightest reference to the phrase "The Man Higher Up" prior to 1903, when Judge Adams, charging a federal grand jury in his district, cautioned for certain naturalization frauds which were in vogue at the country at that time, told the jury "to look not only for the little men who is made a fool by the" "The Man Higher Up."

HERE IS THE ISSUE

PARTY DIFFERENCES SQUARELY STATED.

Democrats Openly Working for Free Trade, Republicans Favor Protection—Ex-President Roosevelt Explains Issue.

The New York Evening Post prints daily a symposium from representative Democrats on the sort of man the Democratic party needs for a leader and what his ideas and ideals should be. These expressions of opinion are important as evidencing the trend of the Democratic mind and are worthy of more than passing notice. It is argued that the leader of the Democracy should be "a man who looks forward impatiently to a revenue tariff, not as a Reality," but as a step only in the direction of absolute free trade."

From the above it is evident that those Republicans who have been claiming that the hankering for free trade does not still lurk in the Democratic mind need to revise their estimates. The necessity for united action on the part of Republicans is apparent. "This country," said former President Roosevelt at Sioux Falls, "is fully committed to the principle of protection. The Democrats, however, are not committed to the principle of protection, and they have not given up the fight that they still are propagating their free trade theories. In the Democratic party there is now in the New York Evening Post it is argued that "the Democratic party must not take the field with any other less drastic end in view than the ultimate conversion of all our customs houses into warehouses, and making all our ports from Tampico and the Yukon as free as the commerce of the world is to our own shipping."

That sounds like a paraphrase of Democratic Leader Champ Clark's declaration that he is a free trader and glories in it; that if he had his way he would tear down every vestige of protection to foreign trade from its foundation stone. The desire to get rid of protection, which became the effect in on wages, seems to be the ultimate conversion of all our customs houses into warehouses, and making all our ports from Tampico and the Yukon as free as the commerce of the world is to our own shipping.

"The very prosperous decade just behind us" was a phrase used by Senator Root a few months before that fell the blight of the Democratic Wilson tariff. It was a phrase used to the Republican Congressional Committee, which was employed; because Republican legislation had made possible great industrial enterprise; because the whole industry were in motion and men had employment in the factories and shops, boy abroad instead of at home, turn the wheels of industry, the idle hands, in short, go back to Democratic free trade and the issues of the days of Cleveland's prosperity. The fact, however, of happiness and prosperity existing in the decade when the Republican policy is enforced, effectually answers the Democratic theory.

It is important that after Republican congressional candidates have been duly and formally chosen, all Republicans who believe in the party principles as declared in its national platform of 1908 should give the assertions total and effective support. If this is done, there will be no doubt of a return of a Republican majority—President Taft.

WILL NOT FOOL THE FARMER

Democratic Advice Vainly Offered to Those Who Remember Years of 92 to '97.

"Production hasn't kept pace with the increase in population." "There's been a shortage in the crop," "Protection has no relation to prices which the farmer receives for his crops," are some of the explanations offered by our Democratic friends to the American farmer to induce him to change protection and embrace free trade. In this connection some figures issued by the government are exceedingly interesting.

The preliminary rough estimates of 90,000,000 for the whole country's population in 1910, compared with the 76,621,724 of the 1900 census show the rotic of increase to be 19 per cent.

The average annual wheat yield from 1890 to 1899 inclusive was 650,000,000 bushels, whereas the annual average from 1900 to 1909 inclusive was 723,000,000. This was an increase of 20 per cent.

The average annual cotton yield from 1900 to 1909 inclusive was 11,000,000 bales, as against from 1890 to 1899 inclusive, 8,790,000—an increase of 25 per cent.

In view of the fact that production has kept up so good a relative increase in population, why the letter prices which the American farmer and cotton planter have been getting for their wheat and cotton, as compared with the prices they received from 1890 to 1899? Why diminished exports and why the talk of scarcity? The Democratic party has given an answer to the question:

"The ultimate conversion of all our customs houses into warehouses, and making all our ports from Tampico and the Yukon as free as the commerce of the world is to our own shipping."

"Free trade would mean the ruin of our industries." "Democratic free trade put the prosperity of the land in jeopardy." The fact, however, of happiness and prosperity existing in the decade when the Republican policy is enforced, effectually answers the Democratic theory.

It is important that after Republican congressional candidates have been duly and formally chosen, all Republicans who believe in the party principles as declared in its national platform of 1908 should give the assertions total and effective support. If this is done, there will be no doubt of a return of a Republican majority—President Taft.

Only Relief From Terrible Suffering.

Thomas E. Yost, 1505 S. 12th St., Terre Haute, Ind., says: "I had no control over the urine and the pain when voiding it was so great I often screamed. I grew worse and lay in bed for weeks, the only relief being from hypodermics. I was treated by three physicians without help and the last one said an operation was necessary. At this time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and passed a gravel stone as large as a pea. The next day I passed two more and from then on improved rapidly until cured."

Science and Cheese.

A medical authority kindly assures us that an hour's digestion of a good cheese will not affect the health of the consumer. This is a fact that we have been waiting for a considerable time. But how is the ordinary cheese eater to detect the difference between the wholesome and the noxious? There is cheese so thoroughly disguised in the costume and aroma of decay that the proprietor of a high flavored tasting table would puzzle a conjuror.

For instance, there is the brand known as limburger.

But why pursue this subject?

Truth is a structure reared on the battlefield of contending forces.—Dr. Whitehill.

Judge Davis of Ionia, will preside at a special term of the circuit court to be held at Bellaire next week, to hear the chancery case of several farmers along Intermediate lake vs. Henry Richards. It is claimed that his electric power dam at Bellaire has caused a rise in the water of the lake and consequent damage to adjacent property.

Boyne City (Gem): Aaron Stanfiss, of Hanover county, is in the city on business in connection with the locating of a Colony of Hoosiers here. He has already purchased some land in Warner township of the W. H. White Co and is investigating some of the territory east of the city with the view of securing a large tract for use for a colony of his people.

At the annual meeting of the Northern Michigan Press Club at Elk Rapids last week, it was voted to change the territory embraced by the club to include the territory covered by the Western Michigan Development Bureau and the name of the club from the Northern to the Western Michigan Press Club. Perry F. Powers was elected president and G. W. Perry of Elk Rapids was re-elected secretary and treasurer. The next meeting will be held at Cadillac in 1911.

When the board of supervisors of Cheboygan county meet next week they will again have before them a petition from the "dry" people of the county asking that the question of local option be submitted to the voters next spring. The anti-saloon people have been active and have succeeded in have secured sufficient signatures to authorize the board to submit the question. The list of signers to the petition were posted Tuesday as the law requires in the various wards of the city and townships.

Boyne Journal: Your peppermint drops at Home! This is the delectable prospect in view when J. H. Moyer, who lives in Boyne Valley township, ten miles southwest of Boyne City, gets a clear industry he has in mind started. Mr. Moyer, who came to this county twelve years ago from Kalamazoo county where the greatest peppermint farms in the world are located, has been experimenting for a couple of years in the growing of peppermint on some lands he owns. The lands are very favorably situated in that there is a spring which flows across them beginning at the upper end. He can irrigate every rod of his eighty acres if he wishes. Two years ago Mr. Moyer put in a few plants of the English peppermint, the leaves of which produce the best oil. It grew well and last year he put in five acres. The results were so good last fall that next spring he will need 15 acres with the accessory plants, the acreage made from which goes far to hand off the "mummy ache." Mr. Moyer also expects to put in a still and has contracted for the equipment and building.

In the circuit court at Traverse City Monday Judge Mayne received reports from his probationers. The Grand Rapids Herald gives an account of three, and we copy the dispatch from Traverse City under the date of the 29th, showing two successful cases and one failure, and the disposition made of them by the court, as follows: "Appearing in circuit court at the end of a year's probation, John Ramsey and Ole Olson, known to police records as common drunkards, made an impression of reform and good behavior upon the judge, who commended them for their change in living. Ramsey said he had a bank account of $252, while Olson has saved over $100. They have worked steadily for over a year and their employers informed the court that they were regarded as hard-working, respectable men. They paid a small fine originally imposed upon their pleas of guilty and were released from reporting to the probation officer every week. Another respondent, named Shields, showed the opposite of the two men mentioned and was given from one to five years at Ionia.

Catch Fish With Birds.

On the banks of the River Ya we saw many Chinese cormorant fishers with tame birds, which are very tame and intelligent. When fishing a piece of ground first tied around their throats to prevent them from swallowing the fish, and they are afterward turned into the water. The small fish they can easily manage to bring back to the boat, but when they find a large specimen it sometimes needs the cooperation of two or three of the birds to land it safely on their master's boat. In this river the fish often catch the great sala mander, a huge newt or water lizard, which sometimes reaches a length of ten to twelve feet, and whose flesh is much appreciated by the Chinese.—White World Magazine.

Tea on Wheels.

The greatest novelty of the Fete de Neuilly, which is in full swing now, and which stretches from the gates of Paris down to the Seine, is a novelty in roundabouts. This year, instead of whirling around on pigs, on camels, rabbits, cows or motor cars—the mere horse has long been out of date on the Paris roundabouts—Neuilly fair provides a turning drawing room, in which tea is served in elegant surroundings. Yes on a circular tray big enough to hold the drinker and the room in which it is drunk is certainly something rather new.—Paris correspondent London Express.

Scrapping Skyscrapers.

Mr. Dooley once remarked that in Chicago they were tearing down a factory building to make way for a modern structure. This was considered a good joke in the Dooley days, yet that is exactly what is happening today in New York. The Gillender building at Wall and Nassau streets, 20 stories high, 12 years old, steel framed and thoroughly substantial, is being torn down to make room for a "skyscraper." There is more rent to the square inch of ground, the city area figure, in a tall building than in a squatty factory structure. We used to let buildings stand until they showed signs of falling; now we tear them down when the profits begin to wabble.—Success Magazine.

Boy Runs Railroad Gate.

A ten-year-old boy operating the safety gates at the Grand avenue, Corona, crossing of the Long Island railroad, the other night, led to the discovery in his shanty of the gateman, Michael Francis, either intoxicated or overcome by the heat.

A telephone message brought Special Officer G. W. Howard of the railroad and he arrested Francis on a charge of intoxication. Before Magistrate Connelly in the Flushing police court Francis said he had drunk a little, but was affected by the heat and the magistrate suspended sentence. The name of the boy who took charge of the gates could not be learned, but it is said that he worked the levers for two hours. Express and local trains rushed by throughout his self-imposed term of duty and the boy worked the gates like a veteran.

One of our consuls in Mexico estimates that while American shareholders in rubber plantation schemes in that country have invested not less than $10,000,000, a twentieth of that sum would represent the money employed in actual rubber tree planting and cultivation.

The Foot Ball Game.

The Charlevoix High School foot ball team won a very decisive victory over their East Jordan opponents last Saturday at the latter place, the final score resulting in 10-0. Considering the fact that it was the first game of the season the boys put up a strong game. They were exceptionally strong on defensive. The game was characterized by open plays, the forward passing being worked repeatedly for good gains. The first touch down came from a pass to Wallace after a quick line up, he getting away with the ball for a 60 yard run before the opponents realized what was taking place. The second came from a cross buck and delayed pass by Capt. Hull. In neither case was Charlevoix successful in kicking goal. At no time was Charlevoix's goal in danger, nearly all the playing taking place in East Jordan's territory. Great credit is due the East Jordan boys for the manner in which they used the Charlevoix crowd. The return game is played here Nov. 5. Next Saturday the boys go to Petoskey.

The line up as played Saturday is as follows:

L. End—Mitchell.
L. Tackle—Gaskin, Gray.
L. Guard—Lysaght.

SHOPPING IN MIDOCEAN.

The wireless message pulsing over the sea has put the voyaging financier in daily communication with the bourses of New York, London and Paris. Even in midocean the capitalist may lay or sell with a view to the protection or the profit of his purse. But it were vain for mere man to imagine that wireless could be made instrumentality to his exclusive use. If the wireless can be utilized to make or to conserve money, it too is available for spending money. The enterprising merchant could not fail to be alert to this opportunity to increase the debit side of a fair client's account, says Washington Post. Fathers, husbands, brothers have cherished the thought that when their dear ones were safely at sea in swift and luxurious palaces, the item of shopping was in a state of at least temporary desuetude. But not so; the ribbon counter and the showcases have been repeopled, figuratively speaking, across the sea. The lady fair may now indulge her penchant for shopping even in midocean. Every department store in great cities near the Atlantic coast will be tapped with its tall electric coast and maintain an operator at its foot. Bulletins of bargains may be published on shipboard. Moreover, if the lady is on her way home with a depleted purse, she can make out a long draft to cover every tip of every steward on board and make sure that some of her money will be left for her supplies promptly on arrival at the pier.

London's bad season, with dull gray skies and chill winds, is pretty compensated for by the promise of good grouse shooting. Parliament has risen in time for the sport, and that part of society which is not already "on the continent" is bound northward for the moors. Somewhere England is exchanged for Scotland, which, when the grouse are plentiful and in good condition, is a good place to be, even if the weather is wet. Bright skies over the moors transform the sportsman's part of Scotland into a semblance of paradise. To be sure, the scenery is there. The grouse crack and the birds are slaughtered by the thousands. But they have fulfilled their destiny. What can more have? And nightly good eating is a well cooked grouse from the Grampian Hills.

In East Haddam, about sixteen miles north from the mouth of the Connecticut river, hanging in the belfry of its Episcopal church and to-day, is a bell that was cast in Spain over 1,000 years ago. The Spanish inscription stating that the bell was cast in Spain in 815 and the name of the prelate who blessed it are all very distinct. Those who have interested themselves in this valuable old relic claim that the bell was brought to this country in Spain where it originally hung as a church bell. The bodies could not be recognized.

Five bonds, bearing the date of 1861, were recently recovered. The management of the Times announces that it now guarantees the bonds of any one were lifted.

It is asserted by physicians in charge of the injured that probably none will die, though several may be crippled for life.

ONE BOMB KILLS 20

PLANT OF LOS ANGELES TIMES IS DESTROYED WITH MANY FATALITIES.

HOMES MENACED IN PLOT

Internal Machines Found Beneath Residences of Two Bitter Foes to Organized Labor—$25 Reward Offered for Capture of Perpetrators.

Los Angeles, Cal.—At least twenty men lost their lives Saturday when the building occupied by the Los Angeles Times published company was destroyed by fire.

The fire was preceded by an explosion and immediately the building was enveloped in flames. The blast occurred on the second floor of an addition to the old building. This is of three floors. Within a few seconds the entire structure was a fiery furnace.

The havoc of the explosion was greatest in the mechanical department, and the majority of the dead and injured were members of these departments. Twenty-two injured are taken to the receiving hospital.

Within twelve hours after the wrecking of the Times plant an attempt was made to destroy the residence of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, father of the paper, by means of an infernal machine.

The bomb was discovered in a suitcase hidden under a bench in the rear of the house. Had it been exploded as it was hurled into the street by a passer-by, the damage would have been slight.

Another internal machine was found earlier in the day at the residence of F. J. Zeehandelar, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association.

General Otis and the other responsible heads of the paper charge the bomb outrages to a conspiracy to avenge the alleged attempts at further destruction of life and property in labor union circles. The property damage is estimated at $500,000.

With equal emphasis the leaders of union labor here and throughout the state repudiate the accusation, and have offered all aid in their power in the effort to detect the culprits.

For twenty years, following a quarrel with the typographical union, which resulted in making the Times a nonunion paper, General Otis has fought unionism with every resource at his command. He has been ably seconded in this fight by the Merchants and Manufacturers' association, whose secretary was the object of unsuccessful dynamiting.

The president of the local typographical union issued orders that union printers may work in conjunction with the nonunion printers of the Times in any of the local newspaper offices in getting out the edition of the Times.

The city council met in special session and appropriated $25,000 for the purpose of determining the cause of the Times explosion and provided a reward of $2,500 for the capture of those responsible for the outrage.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Searchers in the ruins of the Los Angeles Times building, which was destroyed by an explosion and fire Saturday morning, came across charred bodies at the foot of the elevator shaft Monday. The bodies could not be recognized.

Five bonds, bearing the date of 1861, were recently recovered. The management of the Times announces that it now guarantees the bonds of any one were lifted.

It is asserted by physicians in charge of the injured that probably none will die, though several may be crippled for life.

FOUR KILLED IN AUTO RACE

Score Are Injured—Mechanicians in Charge—Harry Grant Wins Cerdebilt Cup in Record Time.

New York.—Four persons killed and twenty seriously injured—several of them probably fatally—was the sacrifice on the altar of speed at the sixth Vanderbilt cup automobile race Saturday.

Mismanagement and poor policing of the course were declared responsible for the slaughter. Many of the victims were spectators, cut down when the racing autos crashed into the crowds lining the parkways.

The race was won in electrifying fashion by Harry Grant, driving a 120 horsepower Alco. He defeated Joe Dawson, driving a Marmon, by the narrow margin of twenty-five seconds. John Aitken, in a National, was only a minute and six seconds behind Dawson.

BREAKS ALL FLYING RECORDS

WALTER BROOKINS SOARS 186 MILES AND WINS $10,000.

Young Aviator Surpasses All Cross-Country Flights in His Chicago to Springfield Trip.

Springfield, Ill.—What is looked upon as one of the most remarkable feats in aerial navigation was accomplished by Walter H. Brookins, in a Wright biplane, Thursday, when he successfully flew from Chicago to this city, and in doing so he broke all cross-country records.

With only two stops, neither of which was actually necessary, he made the trip from Chicago to Springfield, a distance of 185 miles, in five hours and forty-nine minutes, maintaining an average speed of 32.7 miles an hour, and won the $10,000 prize offered by a Chicago newspaper.

Along the entire route, from Chicago to the state fair grounds here, "thousands of thousands of people cheered the darling young aviator as he passed.

As the great mechanical bird came to the ground here in the presence of 10,000 people he was cheered vociferously for fully half an hour.

Brookins left Chicago at 9:15 a. m. He dropped out of the clouds over the fair grounds in Springfield at 1:46.

Forty-seven minutes after Brookins rose from the ground in Washington park, Chicago, the "Daylight Special" left the Park Row station over the Illinois Central. A special car had been attached in which traveled Wilbur Wright, the airship inventor. Roy Knabenshue, special representative of the Wright brothers, members of the Aero club of Illinois and about forty newspaper men.

After a flight of two hours and twenty-eight minutes Brookins came to Gillespie, where he arrived at 11:45. He was far ahead of the train and he decided to alight and await the arrival of the train.

The train arrived at Gillman at 12:15 and orders were given by the division superintendent of the railroad to hold the train until the biplane should reach the fair grounds. The gasoline and water tanks were replenished, and after the engines had been gone over carefully by Wright and Knabenshue, Brookins resumed his flight.

From Gilman to Springfield the special train and the aeroplane ran neck and neck first one forging ahead, then the other, but never at any time more than a quarter of a mile apart.

Brookins was forced at 2:25 to descend at Mt. Pulaski for fuel, only twenty-four miles from the state fair grounds. The landing was one of most remarkable that has ever been seen in the history of aviation. The aviator was surrounded within all sides and with perfect control he picked out a spot, after soaring about in a short circle, scarcely more than half a block square, and landed squarely in the center. The special train was held up, the aeroplane's supplies again were renewed, and at 2:45 he succeeded again. From Pulaski to the fair grounds a speed of thirty-five miles an hour was maintained.

30 INJURED IN COLLISION

Excursion Train Collides Head-On With Freight Through Blunder Latter's Crew at Laporte, Ind.

Laporte, Ind.—Running 20 miles an hour, with its engineer unconscious of the blundering of the crew of a freight train, a Lake Erie & Western passenger train carrying excursionists Monday dashed head-on into a string of freight cars on the main track. Thirty-three persons were injured, several seriously.

The most seriously injured are:

J. A. Davis, Danville, Va.; hurled through door of the smoking car, receiving gashes in the head, right arm and right side.

Andrew Gussen, Grand Rapids; left arm cut off below the elbow; internal injuries.

Nell Brooks, Grand Rapids; both feet crushed, internal injuries.

Michael Hassett, Peru, scalded, and other minor injuries.

The collision took place within the city limits.

OUTLAW HEMMED IN

JOHN F. DIETZ PRACTICALLY A PRISONER IN HIS LOG HOUSE.

BRIDGE IS BADLY WOUNDED

Death of Desperate Man Is Predicted When He Attempts to Emerge From Woods—Home Town Is Under Martial Law.

Winter, Wis.—With his daughter in a critical condition, and his wife and one son in jail with a bullet through his arm, and another son with him in the woods, armed with a gun wound, John F. Dietz, the desperate "outlaw of Cameron Dam" fame, was hemmed in prisoner in his log cabin in the northern Wisconsin wilderness, he being entirely surrounded by a sheriff's posse.

Meanwhile all northern Wisconsin is in turmoil. The death of Dietz seems certain, for he has lost the support of his former friends, who surported him in the days when he won fame by his warfare against the Chippewa Falls Lumber company, a scion of the three Weyerhauser Lumber corporation.

While Dietz is surrounded in his forest clearing, the town of Winter is excited, because Dietz has threatened to invade the place and shoot every person involved in the shooting of his two sons and his daughter. The town is under martial rule, the sheriff having deputized about thirty live men, most all of them friends of Dietz, the man shot on election day.

For two days the officers prevented the newspaper correspondents sent here from various cities from sending out anything of the battle in which the Dietz children were shot. However, the rule has been so modified as to allow the wires to be used although there is a dead line around the village and the word is absolute that any person crossing that line will be shot. This is to prevent any help being sent to Dietz.

The officers are in fear the arrival of Dietz for they believe they have him surrounded. Dietz, in his woods cabin, is now unable to leave the house, for the woods about the clearing are surrounded with officers, picked shots who will try to pick Dietz off such a target if he makes a move out of doors. Dietz has his cabin stocked with enough food to last until spring.

In the chance that Dietz escapes, however, Winter is kept under guard. All of the sheriff's men are crack shots, able to pick off a target at a mile, but Dietz, his children and his wife are also dead shots.

Dietz says he will die fighting, and he certainly will be his death by a shot of an officer.

TRACTION CARS ON McKINLEY SYSTEM COLLIDE NEAR STAUNTON, ILL.

ONE CREW OVERLOOKS ORDERS

Two Coaches Running at High Rate of Speed, Heavily Loaded With Human Freight, Crash Into Each Other on Curve.

Carlinville, Ill.—In a head-on collision Tuesday afternoon between two interurban cars on the Illinois Traction line (the McKinley system) thirty-eight persons were killed and twenty-six others injured two miles south of Staunton, Ill. Three of the injured are not expected to live.

Both cars were going at a high rate of speed and as the curve where they met is at the bottom of a hill, both cars were plunging down hill. They met right on the curve and no sudden was the crash, the motormen having easily escaped with their lives by jump ing.

Both cars were demolished and the dead, dying and injured were piled in one heap between the sides the screams of the maimed and bleeding added horror to the scene.

Car No. 14, northbound, had orders to meet both sections of train No. 73 at Staunton. Its orders were carried out so far as the first section was concerned. The motorman supposed that the orders to wait for the second section of 73 had been cancelled.

Old employes of the company refused to go on duty Tuesday night. They complained that new men, employed for the state fair trial, were disobeying orders and studying by switches where they were under orders to sleep. It is reported that four full crews mutinied and refused to go out. The system has been taxed to the utmost since the state fair. Saturday by the immense crowds hastening to the state fair. Many additional men, mostly motormen and conductors employed by various lines of central Illinois, have been pressed into service on the high speed crowded interurban cars.

The special train from Staunton bearing 28 of the dead was sent to Carlinville. So badly mangled are some of the dead that they cannot be recognized even by those who are sure they have relatives among the unidentified. Most of those killed were riding in the smoking car, which was almost completely telescoped by the north-bound car.

The scenes attending the wreck are indescribable in their horrors as the injured screamed for help while imprisoned beneath the wreckage. The few who escaped without injuries heroically went to work in the mangled mass of bleeding bodies, and endeavored to extricate the dead from the dying and injured.

A large number of the injured were taken to Granite City and attended in hospitals there.

Good Advice, but—

A traveler entered a railway carriage at a wayside station. The sole occupant of the compartment consisted of an old lady and her son, who appeared to be about 18 years of age. It was 11 o'clock—and soon I heard her running downstairs crying. When she got to the foot of the bed she called out:

"Jimmy, the traveler underneath is a black figure sitting in the corner opposite the door—the empty one—and he's got your boots! Shout out to him to pull the blinds down." Jimmy, in his pajamas, shouted from the top of the stairs: "Mind, my father's underneath. Don't let him see you." Jimmy's father, in his pajamas, shouted from the top of his bed: "Blinkey! Pictures! Issues! He finds that he has to pay for them!"

CHAPTER XIV.

The Trap Door.

By Sunday evening, a week after the wreck, my forced inaction had goaded me to frenzy. The very sight of women in the street or in hansoms, always with their fluttering skirts, kept me constantly exasperated. It was on that day that Jenkins came to me to confess, a burning glass of events that Blakeley, junior, could not.

I dined alone that evening in no cheerful frame of mind. There had been a great deal of rain in Pittsburg and I had lost a pony, which is always a bad thing to do. Jenkins had recommended her shoulder, besides helping to the pony home. It was still raining in town; the temperature was 50 and climbing, and my left knee had persistently refused to be bandaged.

Mrs. Klopston herself saw me served, and seemed to think that I was doing my meat ready for me internally, obviously trying to cheer me.

"The paper says still warmer," she ventured. "Shall I have your coffee now?"

"And this coffee is 250," I said, putting down my cup. "Where is Euphemia? I haven't seen her around, or heard a dish smash all day."

"Euphemia's gone," she said, with a sigh. "Left us. Left us without a word! Ungrateful, I call it. Ungrateful, and after we had taken her in and given her Christian fortitude. "But I warn you, I am going to have the police search the premises."

I was half inclined to tell her that both it and we were under police surveillance at that moment. But I like Mrs. Klopston, in spite of the fact that I make her life a torment for her, so I refrained.

"I know Euphemia," I said, "and it was going to storm, I sent Euphemia to the roof to bring in the wash. I hope she had slipped out, although it was her evening to go downtown. Is she at the roof—it was 11 o'clock—and soon I heard her running downstairs crying. When she got to the foot of the bed she called out:

"The special train from Staunton bearing 28 of the dead was sent to Carlinville. So badly mangled are some of the dead that they cannot be recognized even by those who are sure they have relatives among the unidentified. Boys Love of Adventure

Not the Slightest Reason for Alarm if He Looks Forward to the Life of a Pirate.

The love of adventure is an expression of the boy's wonderful vitality; there is always hope for the boy who wants to become a pirate and carrying the Jolly Roger through the seven seas—provided that at the same time he is willing to accompanies with other aspects of life which may perhaps prove more or less tedious, as library, dexterous a writer in the Dialisarian.

A child's nonsense is his child's play and safety valve, which may be developed into a sense of humor that will help to keep him sane, or degenerate into a love habit of foolish and cruel practical joking. His curiosity may prove a key wherewith to unlock many a secret, or a means of purveying lawe and even vile things to his mind, while his sentiment—which may be sure that it is present in the average boy's strangely assorted spiritual baggage—may sink to a sentimentality which shall sap his manhood or be refined into an attribute of honest manhood.

Mistake Somewhere.

"Miss Fangle is a homogamist, isn't she?" asked the hostess.

"Weally, I—aw don't think so," replied young Feathertry. "At least she is—aw—newah at home when I call, doncher know."

In and Out.

Wigg—There seems to be quite a difference between a 5th and a 13th street.

Wagg—Oh, yes. For instance, when isn't she? Wigg—Why, I was only thinking how it would be if the two streets were joined together.

The Wrist Was Slender.

"Very likely," he said grimly. "Have you a revolver?"

"All kinds in the gun rack," I replied, and I supposed it was a rear sailraze. He came up again in ten minutes or so, this time with the policeman.

"He's gone, all right," he said ruefully. "If you'd been attending to your business, Robison, you'd have watched the back door."

"I'm not twins," Robison was surly. "Well," I broke in, as cheerfully as I could, "if you are through with this jolly little affair, suppose you get down my ladder without having my house-keeper fire the burglar alarm. I have had enough excitement for one night."

They came without a second invitation, across the roof and with them safely away from the house I breathed. "Well, I suppose I ought to be glad I fulfilled my promise, which Johnson thought I couldn't, and kept my left eye." He examined my gun rack with the eye of a connoisseur, and then I saw that he was second of the lot, a loving eye back at the weapons.

"Ever thought of the army?" he inquired.

"No," I said with a bitterness that he noticed but failed to comprehend. "I'm a chocolate cream soldier. I don't mind Shiloh I suppose, Johnson?"

"Never heard of him," the detective said inattentively. "Well, good night, Mr. Blakeley. Much obliged." At the door he hesitated and coughed.

"I suppose you understand, Mr. Blakeley," he said awkwardly, "that this—er—surveillance is all in the day's work. I don't like it, but it's duty. Every man has his duty, sir."

"Sometimes when you are in an open mood, Johnson," I returned, "you can explain why I am being watched at all."

CHAPTER XV.

The Cinematograph.

On Monday I went out for the first time. I did not go to the office. I wanted to walk. I thought fresh air and exercise would drive away the blue devils that had me by the throat. McKnight indeed for a long day in his car, but I refused.

"I don't know why not," he said sulkily. "I can't walk. I haven't walked two consecutive blocks in three years. Automobiles have made legs mere ornaments—and some not ornamental. We really are becoming out there chasing us over the country at $5 an hour."

"He can chase us just as well at five miles an hour," I said. "I am not sure McKnight, is why I am under surveillance at all. How do the police know I am accused of the thing?"

"The young lady who sent the flowers—she isn't likely to talk, is she?"

"Not if she knows what is good for her," I groaned as I tried to get my splintered arm into a coat. "Anyhow, I'm not sure that I have any right to victim, and McKnight laughed.

It had rained in the early morning, and Mrs. Klopston predicted more thunderstorms. I had to fix up a bandage and so determined her over that I took the umbrella she proffered me.

"Shall I send a cab?" she asked.

"Thank you, no; I have a story to tell you Hickey, and I prefer to be undisturbed."

McKnight was puzzled, but he followed me obediently around the kitchen entrance of the yard and through the back alley, and expecting Hickey. We ate dinner in the upper floor of a restaurant and saw a play at night.

"It's the finest thing I ever heard of," McKnight said, staring up at the ladder and the rope. "Suppose you had fallen, or it would make! Only you caught not to have put your foot on her hook. They don't do it in the best circles."

I wheeled on him impatiently.

"You don't understand that attempt at an escape," I exclaimed. "What would you say if I told you it was the hand of a lady? It was covered with rings."

"A lady!" he repeated. "Why, I'd say it was a damned romantic lady, in addition, and that the less you say of it the better. I ask you, Lawrence, do I think you dreamed it. You've been in the house too much. I take it all back; you do need exercise.

"She escaped through the twilight, suppose," I said as calmly as I could. "Evidently down the back stairs. We might at least try that way."

"According to the best precedents in these affairs, we should find a glove about here," he said as we started down. But he was more impressed than he cared to show. He examined the dusty steps carefully, and once, when a bit of loose plaster fell just now fellow looked as startled as a boy but mean."

"What I don't understand is why you let her go," he said, stopping once, puzzled. "You're not usually quixotic."

"When we get out into the country, Hickey," I replied gravely, "I am going to tell you another story, and if you don't tell me I'm a fool and a coward, you are the worst of it, you are no friend of mine."

We stumbled through the twilight of the alley into the blackness of the shuttered kitchen. The house had the musty smell of closed buildings; even on that warm September morning it was damp and chill. As we stepped into the sunshine McKnight gave a shiver.

"Now that we are out," he said, "I don't mind telling you that I have been here before. Twice I came here the night you left, and the face at the window.

"When you speak of it—yes."

"Well, I was sure it was a ghost that thing." he went on, as we started up the street, "said I was back from the grave, I was shocked, and I exclaimed every room. I was Mrs. Klopston's ghost that carried a light, and clunk.

"Ever had any fainting?"

"Only a clean place rubbed on the window opposite your dressing room. Splendid view of an untidy interior. If that house is ever occupied, you'd better get stained glass in that window of yours."

PARTY NOT SINCERE

TRUTH ABOUT DEMOCRATIC ATTITUDE ON THE TARIFF.

At Heart, Protection Is Demanded Wherever its "Special Interests" Are Concerned—Some Facts the Voters Should Know.

Representative Slemp of Virginia, who is making an active campaign for re-election, is telling the people of his district some things about the Democratic party's real attitude toward the tariff which should have wider circulation, through the press, for illustration of minds that may have become befogged by the continuous misrepresentation that has been carried on by Democratic opponents of the protective system.

For general publication, for appeal to the unthinking and the ignorant, the Democratic party is for tariff reduction or free trade, and makes the false plea that by such means it would bring about a lower cost of living. At heart it is for protection wherever its "special interests" are and insite the competition of the world. Its "cry" is for protection until we return to the revenue system of taxation, free trade.

In a speech in which he fully and unmistakably discussed the tariff, Mr. Slemp told his hearers that he had learned what the Democratic policy of tariff for revenue only" really means. It may be defined, he said, as—

"Protection for what you have to sell, and

Free trade for what you have to buy.

Mr. Slemp told of his surprise when he saw some of his Democratic colleagues, consulted by their party declarations to tariff reduction, vote for tariff increases for particular interests. "I thought," he said, "that, from their lofty tariff reform platform for the past 50 years, that they looked on labor and industry as robbery," and would not dare participate in any benefits to be derived from it. On the contrary I found—

"Forty Democratic members of Congress from the south voted with the party pledge and asking for protection for their industries.

"Some—"Illinois asking for a tariff of ten cents a pound on tea.

Mr. Maynard and Mr. Lassiter, from Virginia, asking for 400 per cent increase on peanuts.

"All the Florida representatives in Congress asking for an increased duty on pineapples, citrons and long staple cotton.

"The Democratic delegation from Texas saying: "You may take the tariff off everything but lumber.

"Representative Saunders of Virginia, asking for an increased duty on certain grades of tobacco.

"Both Senators from Virginia asking for an increased duty on extract of quebacho wood.

"Every Louisiana Congressman clamoring for a tariff on sugar and cooperating reductively."

It is known to all who keep themselves informed that the Democratic party is not sincere in the attitude which it is maintaining, for partisan effect, toward the Republican policy of protection; but there are many who do not keep themselves informed, and such exposition as that made by Representative Slemp should be frequent, for their instruction.

The Republican party holds to the contention that all Americans keep themselves informed about matters of nation, and indirectly the labor which their employ, should have the benefit of such protection of tariff as is proper and reasonable.

The Democratic party shouts in public for tariff reduction, and then its representatives in the Congress, working in committee rooms and otherwise out of sight of the public, seek to secure protection as a special benefit for sectional interests.

"New Tariff Breaks Record," is the caption of a Washington dispatch. Customs receipts during the last year amounted to $312,000,000, which is more than $17,000,000 in excess of the previous year under the Dingley act.

As Usual.

As usual the Democrats will talk tariff—as usual they will tell the people in their speeches and literature that protection is robbing the people, but they will not be able to convince the farmer or the laborer that he should change the prosperity of today for the adversity of 1893-96. The people realize just what a Democratic house of representatives would mean. They realize that even though no destructive legislation

RATTLESNAKE BITES.

Simple Rules For Treatment If You Have the Nerve to Use Them.

The treatment of a rattlesnake wound resolves itself into the application of a few very simple rules. In the first place, a person wounded by a snake usually does the very thing he should not do—that is, goes tearing off at top speed for the nearest human habitation, thereby increasing the circulation and disseminating the virus through the system more rapidly. The man should sit calmly down and bind his handkerchief around the limb if it is a limb, break off a stout twig and insert beneath the handkerchief, producing a rude tourniquet, and twist until the circulation is effectively shut off.

With a sharp knife make an X incision over the wound, taking care to penetrate deeper than the fangs have done. If he has good teeth and no cankerous sores in his mouth, he may suck vigorously upon the wound. It does no good to suck the original wound. It is quite difficult to get any virus back through an healing scar greater in caliber than a fine needle.

If all this is done without delay the chances are that the patient will suffer no greater inconvenience than his experience. If he chances to have handy a stick of silver nitrate he can cauterize the wound thoroughly. Failing that, a brand from the fire will serve. After a time he may release his tourniquet somewhat and permit a portion of the retained blood to enter the circulation. The system is capable of taking care of a great deal of poison if it is allowed to flow into the blood gradually.—Outing.

SET HIM THINKING.

The Reason His Wife Gave For Dispensing Postponements.

Just when Mrs. Ackroyd had finished packing her trunks and after William Ackroyd had bought railway tickets for her and their two daughters little Jessie came down with a severe case of whooping cough. The doctor positively refused to let the child start on a long journey, and even if he had thought it safe for the little one to leave home he assured Mrs. Ackroyd that she would not be permitted to take the patient into a hotel anywhere.

"Isn't it a shame?" the distressed lady wailed. "Here we are with everything in our trunks and my husband has even bought our berths in the sleeper."

"It is unfortunate, but I don't know what you can do except sit down and wait four or five days. It may be safe then for you to start away."

When her husband got home that evening Mrs. Ackroyd was weeping.

"Don't take it so hard, dear," he said, "it might be a good deal worse. Our little one is likely to get along all right. The doctor says the case isn't an unusually severe one, and when I telephoned him this afternoon he said he thought it might be safe for you to start away by the end of the week."

"I know. He told me the same thing. But I feel that we'll never go. I never postponed anything yet that didn't turn out badly. I once postponed a wedding, and the marriage never took place."

Half an hour later William Ackroyd was still sitting in a corner alone thinking it over.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Carrying a Bundle.

A stylish looking woman who looked as if she had rather die than carry a bundle that wouldn't go into a handbag went into the women's suit department of a big store lugging a pasteboard box half as big as herself. Other customers present wondered at her undignified action, but the saleswoman did not wonder.

"There is one time when the proudest woman on earth will carry a bandle," she said. "That is when some garment has been sent home finished of body and has to be brought back for alterations. If the customer would only telephone to the store we would send for the garment, but that would take time. She wants it back in her out delay, and rather than wait she brings it down herself."—New York Sun.

Alaska's Coast Region.

The coast region of Alaska has a mild climate not rather than the northern part of Puget sound or of Scotland. The annual rainfall is about 70 inches, and it does not snow much. The dense forests are of hemlock and spruce, the latter being a small species, the western hemlock does not produce as large individual trees as the spruce or western red cedar, the former occasionally showing a diameter of six feet with a height of 150 feet and the cedar diameters of from three to four feet.

Three Questions.

Wadsworth (at the telephone)—Hello! Is this Main 20077? Voice at the Other End—Yes. Who do you want to see? Wadsworth—Is Mr. Hammerley there? Voice at the Other End—Yes. Do you want to talk to him? Wadsworth—No. I want to kiss him.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A ROMANCE IN SIGHT.

Started by the Unmasking of the Pair of Frauds.

Not until boarding houses cease to deal with all their romances be written. Shabby romances, some of them are, like that of the young woman who got so tired of being called "poor thing" because she received no invitations and had to eat all her meals at the boarding house table that she took to eating alone—also in sensible at a cheap restaurant and then brazenly lying about the friends who had invited her to dinner.

There was a young man in that house who never went anywhere either. The first night he first stayed out life's desolation nearly overpowered him. Even that poor little white faced soul has made friends who want her!" he said. "Nobody wants me. I'm no good on earth."

Then on rare occasions his place at the table was vacant. "New friends?" asked the landlady.

"Yes," he, too, had the young man.

One night the man and the girl met in a twenty five cent restaurant. They blushed—they feared—they finally confessed.

"We're a pair of frauds," said the girl. "It's awful to think that tonight when we go home we will have to swear that we have been dining with friends."

"Well," said the young man, "ain't we?"—New York Press.

SHE WAS AGGRESSIVE.

Lucky For the Little Man He Was Not Her Husband.

The lady in the other corner of the tramcar possessed a truculent air and a disturbed eye.

"Funny thing any one can't take a penny ride without everybody glaring at 'em," she remarked, fixing a small gentleman wearing gray whiskers and a sunset hat that look out with her aggressive gaze.

The small gentleman suddenly became interested in a soap advertisement.

"If any one can't give a black eye without 'em, Bob and Harry sitin' upstairs thinks they're quite to a petty pieces," continued the lady.

Somewhere, allied with soap advertisement, study, though eminently discreet, was ineffective.

"You I'm a-talkin' to," The lady prodded the small gentleman's knee with her umbrella "yes, you! Ever this last ten minutes, you live, woman, don't it my 'ndsor' gives it to me. If it'll ease yer mind, I'm dead. Is there anything else?"

"Madam," the small gentleman commenced, "I had been your husband"—

"I should a 'ope so! I'd ought to be married with a wretch instead o' gettin' 'ter the 'evenpitial with a visitor's ticket," snapped the lady, "and the wrength wouldn't 'a' been expensive either."—London Ideas.

A Weary Celebrity.

When Mrs. Roger A. Pryor was a young woman living in Charlottesville, Va., visiting authors seldom reached that secluded university town. "Thackeray, Dickens and Miss Martineau passed me by," says Mrs. Pryor in her book entitled "My Day—Reminiscences of a Long Life." But Frederika Bremer condescended to spend a night with her compatriot, Hiram Sybele de Vere of the university faculty, on her way to the south.

Sybele de Vere invited a choice company to spend the one evening Miss Bremer granted him. Her works were extremely popular with the university circle, and every one was in throes of pleased anticipation.

While the waiting company eagerly expected her the door opened—not for Miss Bremer, but for her compatriot, who announced:

"Miss Bremer, she beg excuse. She tired and mind quite gone. I'ab come the gape in your house."

Dropsy

Given up by Doctor

"I had dropsy, and was told by my family physician that there was no chance for me. My family also gave me up. My limbs and body were swollen one-third larger than natural, water collected around my heart and I had to be propped up in bed to keep from smothering. I took Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy until I was entirely cured. This was in 1900, and I am now able to do any kind of work on my farm. My cure was certainly marvelous."

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy has been wonderfully successful in relieving heart trouble. Its tonic effect upon the heart, nerves and muscles is a great factor in assisting nature to overcome heart weakness.

Liquid Lighting Gas.

Blau gas, named for its German inventor, has come into remarkable prominence lately because of the uses to which it can be put. The gas liquefies under pressure, shrinking to 1-600th of its normal volume at atmospheric pressure. It is therefore transportable in steel bottles as easily as oil or alcohol, and is usable in places where gas could not otherwise be readily supplied. For car heating and lighting, in welding and metal cutting tools, for high speed soldering, it is invaluable. It contains most of the same elements, although in different proportions, as ordinary illuminating gas, and is similarly made, but is without carbon monoxide, and therefore is nonpoisonous. Also, its chemical inertia is so great as to make it practically non-explosive. Its range of explosion is one-twelfth of acetylene and one-third that of ordinary coal gas. It is cheaper to produce than acetylene.—Youth's Companion.

In Picturesque Burano

by Dr. Habberton Lulham

AN OLD WOMAN OF BURANO

HOUSANDS of travelers hospitably seek Venice year by their imaginations long before they the pictures and places who have pictured the beautiful city to them and whom, which, though it may be true to their own highly cultivated senses, tend to bring no little disappointment to the ordinary beholder. For Venice, but too often, proves to the latter not quite the fairy Venice of his visioning, his ended disappointment being, perhaps, its lack of those glowing colors which he has been led by books and picture galleries to expect. And nowadays this failing (about it blind is increased) by the valiantring effort of the penny steamboat—the vaporetto, with which the Venetians seem so enamored—that sets his gondola rocking as it passes, and stirs up that in the sleeping canal waters which has better been let lie; to say nothing of the motor-boat, which, in threatening to do for the gondola what the "bus" is doing for our hansoms at home.

If such a traveler be leaving Venice with a sense of disappointment, let him by no means depart till he has visited the sister island of Burano; for, if he but choose his day and hour well, he will assuredly take home with him a satisfying picture of one spot at least, glowing with color and teeming with a picturesque life, that has custom his most hopeful imaginings.

There can be few more pleasant experiences on a fine, warm afternoon in spring or autumn—in early May or mid-September for choice—than to take a gondola, with two good rowers, and with one's first sight of Burano.

A gondola it must be, not the vaporetto, that one may arrive alone or with a well-chosen companion, and not as one amongst a crowd of chattering, sight-seeing snapshotters.

The way to Burano takes one through about six miles of lagoon landscape to the eastward of Venice. The island is situated about five miles northeast of Venice, in northern Italy. The chief industries of the people are market gardening, building of boats and fishing; the women are employed principally in lace-making. The island of Torcello was between Burano and Venice. It is located on an adjacent isle and the principal attractions that would induce travelers are the two churches of antiquities and the cathedral, which was built in the seventh century and was rebuilt during the year 1008. This cathedral contains many valuable mosaics.

It is a populous little place with a busy community of fishermen and inventrkers in the struggle for existence it has fared better than its elder and once more prosperous neighbors, Murano and Torcello; the former it has in fact, annexed by means of a long, arching, wooden bridge, which, seen from the low seat of a gondola, looks like one of a willow-pattern plate.

Approaching the island, one may find one's gondola passing or passed by increasing numbers of fishing boats racing each other home to Burano; finely bronzed, statuesque men stand leaning lightly on their oars, their half-clad forms showing many a fine play and modeling of muscle. The sails of these boats are of delightful colors—saffron and sienna, orange, red and burnt umber—and are often emblazoned with fantastic designs, or with stars, flowers or portraits of patron saints.

Then the island, with its leaning campanile, appears before one, its many-tinted walls basking in the late sunlight. Approaching it on his way and slow glides past the opening of a canal that intersects the island, the traveler now sees it reveals a scene that must live long in the memory of any lover of movement and color. Newly gay skiffs are being moored to their lowly home, many with their gorgeous sails still swaying idly and glowing in the level rays of the late afternoon sun. Sunburnt, earringed men are hoeing piles of glittering fish before the cottage doors, helped by the women, who add still more color to the scene with the shawls and kerchiefs worn over their heads. These most becoming garments are, however, not as a rule very brilliantly hued, but of mauve, brown, olive, or a tawny red, the stronger colors being reserved for the bodices. Shoals of brown children laugh and dance about the quays, their shrill voices, as ever and there, little hair feet to touch and make, bear some strangely shaped, brilliantly hued fish. All is swift, picturesque, glowing colors and vicious sound, the whole picture backed by the cottage walls, which themselves display many a soft, weather-stained tint, for the thirnwell are fond of washing up the cottages and painting them.

A TYPICAL FLOWER-DECORATED CHURCH ON THE ISLAND OF BURANO

One is loath to leave the little island and row home at last. But the traveler is quieting down to a poetic gray in the evening light, though still limbed, to westward, with a faint rose, which touches like the faraway peaks of the Euganean hills. Presently the moon rises behind Murano, and we long a welcoming path of reflected lamp-tinted shines on the water, from Riva and Piazzetta, down the Grand Canal and through Venice to our home.

Enemies Necessary

Have you enemies? Go straight on and mind them not. If they block up your path, walk around them and do your duty regardless of them. A man who has no enemies is seldom worth while for anything—he is made of that kind of material which is so easily worked that it resists nothing, while every one who thinks for himself, and speaks what he thinks, is always sure to have enemies. They are as necessary to him as fresh air; they keep him alive, active. A celebrated character was surrounded by them—he used to remark, "They are sparks which, if you do not blow, will set you on fire!" Let this be your comfort, when you find a feeling, which proceeds from the scandal of those who are bitter against you. If you stop to dispute with them, you do but as they desire, and open the way for more abuse. Let them talk—there will be a reaction if you perform your duty, and hundreds who were once alienated from you, will flock to you and acknowledge their error. Follow this advice, and you will never have cause to regret.—R.—A. F. H.

Star Song.

When sunset flows into golden glows,
And the breath of night is near
Love, find star you yearning star—
That is my thought of you.

And when your eye doth scan the sky
Your lonely lattice through,
Choose any one from sun to sun—
That is my thought of you.

And when you wake at the morning's break
To find rose and dew,
The star that stays in the longing rays—
That is my thought of you.

Millicent's Masquerade

By MARTHA McCULLOCH-WILLIAMS

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

Behind the frowning providence of a sudden summer railroad accident, she had for Millicent Ware a smiling face. She stood in the uncertain shelter of a roadside tree trying vainly to shield her hat with a ridiculous parasol, and speculating what chance had such an object as she knew she looked of getting to place she sought.

To be exact, the place was that of nursery governess in the Alstyne family—the agency had sent her on the barest long chance. Because she needed work so desperately, she because the morning had promised so fairly, she had put on her neatest best—her white linen suit, multitrimmed hat and patent leather shoes.

She had been particularly proud of herself as she stepped from the train at the nearest station. There was nobody to meet her, and her purse forbade even another car ride. Armed with confused directions and the rash courage of youth, she had set out on foot for Overhill, the Alstyne place—and this was the result.

"Hopelessly disabled," she said half aloud, looking herself up and down as she spoke. "And at least half a mile to go if this rain ever lets up. Helpless! If ever there be rich why in anybody permitted to own an auto?"

As though answering the question an auto, a big limousine, dashed out of a cross track upon the hard wide roadway—and in making a turn skidded, fetching up, at last, less than two feet from Millicent, but not until it had splashed her almost from head to foot.

"Oh, I'm so, so sorry!" a girl's voice said. The door was flung open and Millicent's 10 she saw a fair double of herself, a girl, bloodged and tall as she, but with a willowy grace and straight nose and yellow hair. The voice, too, sounded her own, as it went on eagerly.

"Get in! You must! I shall take you home with me—and send you to the laundry.

There was a bubbling laugh after the last word. Millicent got in, and was whisked forward, hardly knowing whether she were awake or dreaming.

A few hours later she was puzzling herself to determine. This although she sat at tasle linghtson in a fine country house, clothed in fine silken garments, eating strange things. Her double sat opposite her, smiling soft coaxing smiles, and saying every little while

"You will! That's a darling! I'll love you forever and ever—and I can't be half so bad, no matter how I try! Why, I'm to be a governess—these Alstyne children are young savages."

"I've Got a Perfectly Good Check Book."

Two days later, still dazed, but full of forward chuckling, she was welcomed by an elderly couple as their long dear grandchild, Lily Haughton. They were childless, but had a grand-nephew and nieces, who, if not quite handsome young person, who looked as though he did not know how to laugh.

"I hear he's a frost and a funeral in one—this Arden Gloster," Lily Haughton had explained to Millicent. Lily, orphan and heiress by nature and birthright, by bringing up much oppressed, had been due to visit the land the record of all time for brilliant readiness in the tribune, master of a thousand lies. Yet no one has ever seen him open a book or take a note.

He still loves his ease in his cafe. You cannot be with him five minutes without feeling the amusing, easy-going companion, building with the joy of life that is sure to make old cronies feel a negligent force that secures them. No one can be more familiar than Briand; but no one can be familiar with him, nowadays, without liking him.

Born in the dull Boston port of St. Nazaire, he conquered a degree of law. Would he have been content to plead poor boy—all cases, mark, for $5,000 dot, play the violin, sing admirably, beat them all at billiards, and talk politics at the Cafe du Commerce?

When does he prepare those speeches that charm, equally, in cold blood and in the heat of debate? Nobody knows. He lets himself go everyone listens. Every listener feels the spell of a mighty intellect, perhaps, a great heart. Yet every foreigner, at least, wonders how he can be his prime minister. He is so negligently easy, almost indolent. And yet—and yet, with all those easy ways, one feels a gamester who betwixt time and the stranger, worn young man.

What will he do? Nobody knows. What does he do? He steps through great difficulties, as Napoleon, nephew, chalant, cigarette on lip, the young gamester, with his dark, sparkling eyes, gray-headed or bald, grow up, slowly, to the great prize, and instantly he stepped into it almost a tenderfoot. He never steps into a rut.

SUM CHEWING IN AMERICA

Omnipresent Habit Strikes Visitors From Abroad as One of the Country's Wonders.

Washington.—Twenty-nine students and three professors of the University of Commerce, in Cologne, now in this country, find the gum chewing habit amazing beyond the wonders of America. This ought to cause no surprise to Americans as all are familiar with the omnipresent nickel-in-the-slot gum machine, the inexhaustible sticks of chewing gum in Jew and gentile on candy stores and drug stores and gum boxes, the jaws almost unanimously in activity in subway jaws, trolley car crashes and crowds at large.

Baseball players chew gum to keep their nerves steady, children and matinee girls chew it because it tastes sweet, many persons chew it because it shows they are sliding their digestion, but most people chew because they have got the habit. Probably a final analysis would reveal an intimate relation between nerves and habitual gum chewing.

There have been attempts to establish a gum law. The results are as yet inconsiderable. However, the demand right here in the United States calls for the manufacture of 1,000,000,000 pounds of chewing gum and gives prosperity to a very healthy eleven-year-old trust. If one doctor said that gum is harmless, another doctor says that it overworks the salivary glands, that it is the stranger within our gates the wonder of the busy Jews remains.

CONTRAST ON OREGON TRAILS

Seattle Capitalists Traveling in This Modern Day With Touring Car

LIVES

In contrast to the caravans that traversed the Oregon valleys fifty years ago a party from Seattle left Portland on a four-months' tour of an extensive trip through the southern part of the state, in a comfortable automobile, says the Portland Oregonian. The equipment consisted of a 7-passenger car and a large automobile in which was a complete kitchen, the bed, hair mattresses and all the comforts of home, in charge of a professional chef.

The party consisted of Mortimer Thomson, of Seattle, Dr. H. Bennett and M. H. Young, Seattle capitalists who are seeking rest and recreation in a manner that will lead them away from all business and cares. The automobile, with its elaborate equipment, but the roads were so rough that the two hair mattresses were shipped from Keizer to Portland. At 10 o'clock yesterday morning the party left the Oregon hotel with no particular destination in view, but they intend to visit the city of fishing tackle, guns and ammunition, and will spend several weeks in the mountains of Oregon and California, where fishing and hunting are good.

The chef is also a chauffeur and has charge of the kitchen. His kitchen is complete in all details. When a stop is made over night or for a few days camping sleeping tents and a dining tent are erected. The party will probably return to Seattle by a different route.

A Compromise.

"Sir," began Lord Brokeleigh, pompously, "I've come to ask you for your daughter's hand in marriage."

"Young man," said the gentleman, rather pleased, "I don't want to seem selfish or charitable, so here's five dollars for you."—Catholic Standard and Times.

STATE NEWS

State May Try G. T. Officials.

Lansing.—Among all the officials of the Grand Trunk who have been questioned by the state railroad commission relative to the wreck at Durand, all have stuck by the original theory advanced by the railway, that Engineer Spencer, whose engine crashed into the helpless sleeper, with its load of human lives, was alone responsible for the wreck.

Hawley secured that declaration when he had been asked by the railway officials how they explained the fact that if Spencer had been properly warned of the train ahead he allowed his engine to continue on its way unchecked to be the one would be risked as much as anyone's when the collision came. No one of them has thus far attempted to explain a reasonable theory why he thought Spencer would take such a chance.

Richard Doyle, master of transportation for the Grand Trunk, was before the commission, and he also was asked the question, and he could not aid the commission in solving the mystery. He examined Conductor Lacey and Brakeman Graham, who were in charge of the wrecked train when the men were not at work during the strike, and declared that he was satisfied by his examination that they were both competent trainmen.

Nothing new was developed by his testimony. At its conclusion the commission announced that as soon as the testimony taken at the inquest in Durand had been transcribed so that it can be examined, the commission will announce a verdict of its own, pinning the responsibility where the commissioners believe it should be placed, and if the facts warrant prosecuting will be asked to take such steps to bring those named before a court for trial.

Pick Bargains for State Meet.

For several years it has been the established custom for James McGregor of Detroit to be accorded-at-arm of the Republican state conventions when they were held on this side of the state, and for Roy C. Lyle of Grand Rapids to be given the office when they were held on the other side. When McGregor was at the state's the lower he was chairman of Marinus Landmann, the aged secretary of state, who succeeded Fred Warner, who was assassinated and robbed, on the outskirts of the city a week ago.

Port Huron.—The Trade and Labor council has protested against the national scheme of the U. D. D. to decrease the number of regular cars between this city and Detroit and at the same time increase the number of limited. The labor men claim the cancellation of an hourly schedule providing for all stops will work a hardship on them.

Lexington.—The township of Riverton has been wrought up over the sudden disappearance of Clara Shappee, the 20-year-old daughter of J. Shappee, a prominent farmer of this county. Posses of farmers are searching. The girl's mother is sick at Scottville in the frantic endeavor to find some trace of the missing girl.

REBELS SEIZE KING

CAPTURE PORTUGAL'S RULER AFTER FIGHTING IN LISBON.

BATTLES RAGE IN STREETS

Reported Army and Navy Have Revolted Against Manuel's Government and He is Held Captive—Palace Shelled by Ships.

London.—Republican revolutionists have seized King Manuel of Portugal and he is a prisoner.

Most of the army and navy joined in the revolt and warships bombarded the royal palace of the Necessidades at Lisbon.

The defenders landed down the royal flag and a green and blue flag of the Portuguese republic now floats over the palace.

The uprising was accomplished by severe fighting in the streets of Lisbon. Many are reported killed and wounded—both loyal troops and revolutionists.

Details of the outbreak are meager, as the revolutionists have cut off all communication with the capital and a strict censorship has been established. All advices now being received are coming by wireless telegraph.

The outbreak started Tuesday in Lisbon. The plans of the revolutionists had been laid so carefully that the government was taken by surprise, although it was generally known that the country was in a state of extreme unrest, and on the verge of an armed uprising.

No communications passed between Lisbon and the Portuguese legation here Tuesday.

An official at the legation, while declaring his ignorance of the happenings, asserted he could give no reason for the dislocation of the telegraph service unless the wires had been cut.

No confirmation of this has been received by the foreign office in Paris.

OPERATE ON LA FOLLETTE

Doctors Take Eight Gall Stones From Patient—Recovery of the Senator Is Expected.

Rochester, Minn.—Senator Robert M. La Follette underwent a surgical operation Tuesday at the Mayo hospital here. The senator proved unusually susceptible to the anaesthetic. Yet it was not the anaesthetic, it was asserted by Dr. Charles Mayo, an unusual circumstance except in cases of great delicacy. An incision for three inches was made. Eight small stones were opened and removed. A minute examination disclosed subacute inflammation of the gall bladder.

Prospects of his recovery are good, and the danger from the operation will not be removed for several days.

JUSTICE W. H. MOODY RESIGNS

Supreme Court Judge Will Preside in Peace Tribunal, Health, Is Reason Doctors Give.

Beverly, Mass.—William H. Moody resigned his position as associate justice of the United States Supreme court Tuesday. President Taft accepted the resignation in a letter expressive of deep regret that the continued ill health of the justice rendered it impossible for him to continue as a member of the court. The resignation is effective November 20. Months ago it was almost certain that he would never be able to resume his public duties and at the last session of congress a special act was passed which enabled him to retire on full pay instead of retaining full age requisite for retirement.

BABY'S SKIN TORTURE

"When our baby was seven weeks old he broke out with what we thought was heat, but which gradually grew worse. We called in a doctor. He said it was eczema and for three times we doctored six months with three of the best doctors in Atchison but he only got worse. His face, hand and hands were a solid sore. There was no end to the suffering for him. We had to tie his little hands to keep him from scratching. He never knew what it was to sleep well from the time he took the disease until he was cured. He kept us awake all hours of the night and his health wasn't what you would call good. We tried everything but the right thing. Finally I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies and I am pleased to say we did not use all of them until he was cured. We have waited a year and a half to see if it would return but it never has and to-day his skin is clear and fair as it possibly could be. I hope Cuticura may save some one else's little ones suffering and sleep, their pocketbooks. John Lesson, 1440 Atchison St., Atchison, Kan., Oct. 19, 1909."

Why He Wouldn't Hurry.

There were riding to church and were late. Several of the party were worried and one remarked: "This audience will be waiting." "Well," observed the old pastor (who was a French Cast foreseen), "dont let's fret over it. If we are a little late it reminds ids of the man who was being taken to vacation. His guards were greatly exercised over the fact that they could not possibly get there on time. Never mind, said the poor fellow, philosophically. 'Don't fuss over it. The people can wait. There'll be nothing doing till I get there.'"—Christian Herald.

A Question.

Vera (eight years old)—What does transatlantic mean, mother?

Mother—Across the Atlantic, of course; but you mustn't bother me.

Vera—Does "trans" always mean across?

Mother—I suppose it does. Now, if you don't stop bothering me with your questions I shall send you right to bed.

Vera (after a few minutes' silence) —Then does transparent mean a cross parent?—Idea.

THE GENTLE SHEEP AS A RAPID-FIRE MONEYMAKER.

An enormous number of sheep are coming into the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, which are being sent there by Western growers on account of the scarcity of feed in that section of the country, and which must be sold at heavy prices.

The states of Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois are well provided with good feed and an opportunity offers this wind if offered by one of the great dry goods houses or department stores of Chicago, would double three quarters of the homes of that city of his womenkind inside of half an hour after the notice appeared. All they would want would be time enough to throw a few clothes over them, some wouldn't even stop to put "togs" in their hair, thousands would forget the "powder," none would stop to "paint," but every "Tailor's daughter" of them would make a "fit" like to bubbles' rants and extract thereof from without leave. Hence or consent, all that thereto was to be found in the shape of cash, and then tumble over each other to be first on the spot.

Lots of these women would buy much more than they required, and would carry home over their purchases until the close of the sale, and then let loose their surplus stock on their less wide awake friends, and reap thereby a harvest of "shekels" which we may take for granted would be at once returned to the trouser pockets of their husbands with the gentlest of gentlemen stilt slept. That is the woman of life.

Let us take a lesson from her thrifty and honest example. Extracting from the pockets of a slumbering spouse, under such circumstances be non robbery; it is only borrowing, and more than that. It is borrowing on account of that most beautiful of all female characteristics — thoughtful consideration—She did not wish to disturb the peaceful rest of her softly sleeping consort.

Sheep feeding at this particular time, and after the season of Western drought just experienced, will be most profitable to those who are fortunate enough to have the feed, and such as have, can in the course of thirty days turn over their money to such a satisfactory way as will add very largely to their bank account.

These be nothing in night at the present moment, that offers a better and safer investment than the purchase of these sheep, in numbers that will keep our barns accommodate, and nothing that offers so speedy and so certain a return.

Flirting With Fashion.

That insane tendency on the part of the fair consumer to flirt with fashion, playing fast and loose with her own commodities, is responsible for the uncertainties that have prevailed during the month. There was such a lack of confidence as to the ultimate acceptance of the various lines prepared by distributors and manufacturers that buying was somewhat minimized. Prosperity or adversity has nothing to do with the uncertainty, it has been alone makes or breaks.—Millinery Trade Review.

The Pere Marquette is soon to join the already long list of railroads using the telephone to dispatch trains, supplanting the telegraph, which was considered the standard for handling train movements for a great many years. The Ann Arbor has ordered instruments, selectors and line material to equip a line from Saginaw, Michigan, to Toledo, Ohio, approximately 130 miles in length, with the telephone for train dispatching. This is understood to be the beginning of the adoption of the telephone system over the entire road, extensions to follow the completion of the first circuit.

Frank A. Munsey, the magazine publisher and the owner of the Washington Times, is now visiting in Jordan. Mr. Munsey's American publications have both advocated extreme tariff revision and tariff reduction. But speaking from the standpoint of an American citizens now confronted by actual conditions Mr. Munsey sends back word from Europe that it would not be wise for the United States to make reductions in the tariff in direction that would greatly increase shipments of manufactured goods from Europe. Speaking from a point where he can observe the wages paid to foreign workmen the cost of production there and the expense of shipment to America he says a low tariff would add to them when he was at home is now enabled to realize to what an extent each point of lowered tariff would add to the sale of foreign made products to American importers. Mr. Munsey's advice is worthy of practical consideration.

Evidently Chase Osborn knew what he was talking about when he warned the republicans of Michigan against assuming further responsibility in connection with the present chase administration. It will be recalled that the name of Arthur C. Bird was one repeated made use of by Mr. Osborn in his contest against the men who had violated the trust reposed in them. It is of course no part to Patrick Kelly to charge him with an participation in the offenses of the others connected with Warners administration, but the fact that nearly all the present state employes were working for Kelly and doing their utmost to defeat Osborn made an issue for and against Warner him which the republicans of the state did not disregard. The recent revelation as to the improper character of A. C. Bird's business relations and of his handling of state funds, even though no loss came to the state through Bird, is a further, justification for Osborn's campaign and a further proof of wisdom on the part of the republicans of Michigan in so emphatically upholding Osborn.—Cadillac News.

That vigorous efforts will be made in the next legislature to amend the new Michigan primary election law, is evident on the eve of the convention of the two chief parties. It is the primary law which has caused embarrassment not only within the party, but between those naturally opposed to one another. Democrats are grumbling over the provision whereby their convention must meet Friday, the last of the week, immediately following the republican convention of Thursday. According to the law the two parties were required to use their conventions within a certain definite time from the primary, and when the republicans chose Thursday, Oct. 6, the democrats either had to take Friday or go over to the following week. More serious are the gymnastic feats required of men who were bitter enemies before the primary, when the fight was within the party, but who must line up together and try to forget the scars of the primary battle, when they turn to face the opposition party. It is safe to predict that with the lessons learned in 1908, when the new law had not impressed itself on the campaigners, there will be a tendency in future to less bitterness among men contesting within a given party for political honors.

More than $300 return from a patch of ground 18 by 60 feet in size! That sounds big, but it is the amount realized by Henry J. Korthase, a farmer living eight miles southwest of Boyne City from a little patch of stump land bought of the W. H. White Company. Mr. Korthase raised ginseng on his land.

The Boyne City Journal and the Citizen have been purchased by the White interests and will be consolidated. J. E. Worthington, former manager of Senator Burrow's campaign, will have charge. C. E. John stayed down there to the other extremes of other places, and consequently has seen little of the wonders of the world. Recently John was subpoenaed to appear before the United States district court at Marquette to act as witness in the case of the United States vs. Fred Avery, trespass. John went to Marquette, quite naturally, on the railroad, and that was the eye opener to him. He has never in his 53 years of valid, never seen a railroad. John returned next day and perhaps will never cease to marvel until he goes to the happy hunting grounds.

At the County Convention of the Granges of Charlevoix County, held at Ironton, October 4th, the following groups were represented out of a total of 15 in the county; Boyne River, Barnard, Marion Center, Norwood, Peaks Cross, South Arm, Wilson Harmony and Ironton. The county is entitled to six delegates to the State Grange to be held in Traverse City, the second week in December and the following delegates were elected: John Hegby and wife, of South Arm and O. D. Wilson and wife of Harmony Grange. The district system of electing delegates was discontinued. The next convention will be held with Pine Lake Grange at Boyne City.

During a dense fog Wednesday morning of last week the Packet Line steamer, Rutland, Ogdensburg, N. Y., ran on the beach about one half mile south of the Point Betsy. The Rutland went on the sand 800 feet from shore. The station was blowing her fog signals but south of the station owing to atmospheric conditions they could not be heard and the first signal of the boat in distress was made while she was going on the beach giving the usual distress signals. Immediately the Point Betsy Life Savers went to their assistance, also a call was made for the Frankfort station. At first it was thought that the freighter was hard on but it afterwards developed that by unloading a large quantity of flour, sides and canned goods her engine with the assistance from the Life Savers got her free. She went on the beach at about eight in the morning and three hours later was steaming north, leaving behind in the neighborhood of 1500 barrels of flour in from 12½ pound sacks to barrel lots; also a large quantity of bran, linseed meal, canned goods and shoes.

County Surveyor E. A. Robinson left Monday morning for Hortona's Bay, where he will be busy for several days laying out a resort property for Floyd W. Dilworth of that place. The resort is to be located on Horton's Bay Point where Mr. Dilworth owns several acres of land and will be in an excellent location. Mr. Robinson will cut it up into lots as expected will be placed on the market before long. Another indication that Pine Lake is coming into its own as a resort territory is to be seen in the work done by Mr. Robinson last week for John Stuart of Chicago at Bedwin point near the Ironton ferry. Mr. Stuart, who is known to fame as "The Quaker Oats Man," owns 160 acres of fine land overlooking the lake at this point and is going to build a bungalow as a summer home. Mr. Robbins laid out the grounds and outlined a plan for the home which is to be an expensive one. It is such acts of enterprise as these that tend to bring Pine Lake, and with it Charlevoix county, to the front. It will not be many years until the entire shore of the lake is lined with cottages and summer homes and the farmers will profit by the increased market for their supplies.

The Commanding Style of "Miller-Made" Clothes

CLOTHES are a great force in modern business. They will push you up or hold you down. You cannot point us out a successful man who dresses carelessly or in poor style -- who wears clothes which have no class or character. These are days of good business and good dressing---days when clothes actually count, socially and in business.

"Miller-Made" Clothes

are business clothes and social clothes. They are low enough in price to impress the economical man and high enough in quality to inspire one who is extravagant. They are worthy of your attention and will stand your most severe investigation. They are the kind of clothes that young men want, that middle-aged men cannot get along without, and that old men have to have to be satisfied. $15.00 to $40.00

The executive committee of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society, held a meeting at East Jordan Monday according to the Enterprise and decided on making extensive improvements on the Fair grounds. The work will be commenced at once. The old dining hall will be torn down and its place will be erected a residence for a caretaker who will be in charge of the grounds at all times except during the annual exhibit. A wing will be built on the east end of the caretaker's residence to be used as a dining hall and kitchen at Fair time. The fence on the east side of the grounds will be moved back 20 rods to make room for a park and driveway. The present horse and cattle sheds will be torn down and comfortable quarters provided for these classes of exhibits in three barns, one for horses, one for cattle and one for sheep and hogs. These barns will be located east of the speed way and will have stalls and pens for the exhibit on either side of an area or driveway, while quarters for the caretaker will be provided overhead. A similar barn for the speed entries will be provided at the southeast corner of the track. The plans also contemplate the erection of a new hotel barn and administration building, making more room in the present structure for the display of fruits, grain and vegetables, but it is not probable that this will be done this year as there is greater need for the other improvements. The present administration building will receive a new roof and necessary repairs.

Detroit News: One of Chase Osborn's representatives call attention to Cass Ilenton's interview in The News Wednesday in which Mr. Benton is quoted as saying that the democrats have been saying that Chase Osborn is a mining man and if elected governor the tax commissioners he will appoint to make the next equalization will favor the mining interests. Mr. Osborn's representative thinks Cass must have misspoken himself, or been misquoted. The constitution directs that there shall be a general equalization of all taxable property of the state every five years by a state board of equalization. The board is, by law, composed of the lieutenant governor, the auditor general the secretary of state, the state treasurer and the commissioner of the state land office. There must be an equalization next year. If the republican ticket wins in November the new equalization will be made by Lieut.-Gov. Ross of Muskegon; Auditor General Fuller, of the upper peninsula; Secretary of State Martindale, of Detroit; State Treasurer Sleeper, of Sanilac county, and Land Commissioner Hussell, of Grand Rapids. The governor has no more to say in making this general equalization, or in designating who shall make it, than any other elector of the state.

Children's Food.

Certain little suggestions are always to be followed when planning the diet of the little ones. To have healthy little stomachs in the nursery never serve hot stewed fruit to the children. Plenty of stewed fruit and baked apples they enjoy and yet they must be invariably cooked the day before and chilled up cold. The nursery potatoes ought always to be baked or boiled in their jackets. Stewed and fried potatoes, or potatoes boiled without their skins, supply starch with a loss of all the wholesome potash salts that the skin gives during the process of cooking into the white part of the vegetable.

Manufacture of Sandpaper.

Old fashioned sandpaper was made with selected sand—hence the name. What is known as sandpaper now is all made with crushed glass and is really much better than the old-time produce. Old bottles, etc., are first crushed and then ground, and the various grades of furniture are secured by sifting. To get the powder on the paper hot glue is applied as it passes through a machine and the powdered glass is sifted on at the same time. Then a wooden roller passes over the sheet and presses down and smoothes the sand.

There was to be a wedding in the church opposite the Jones house and the Harriet Jones sewed at the parlor window looking cheerily out. "Oh, mamma, mamma," she cried, all excitement, "come quick! here's the hearse with the bride in it."

—The government dredge General G. G. Meade, (formerly the Gillespie,) arrived here last Thursday, and, as we go to press, has done a week's work in the vicinity of the harbor entrance, leaving a good twenty foot depth where it needed it the most. She has the work about completed.

—Wm. Rogers, a brother of Mrs. Alex. Cameron, has been a resident of Glenwood Minnesota, which was recently wiped off the map by fire with great loss of life. Mrs. Cameron has been advised that the family barely escaped with their lives and what they could carry in their arms.

—All this week thus far, hug mining weather, Sunday morning, the most magnificent of autumn weather has prevailed—indeed, if it were not for the change of color of the leaves we might easily have imagined ourselves translated back to midsummer. In fact the month, thus far, has been marked by ideal weather.

—W. F. Mann's Pastorial comedy drama, "The Fighting Parson" will be presented at the Charlevoix Theater for your approval on Thursday October 20th. It is a well written story far above the ordinary plays of this sort. The lines are bright, the situations intense with a strong heart interest all through the production. It's very interesting. The struggle of the young minister; his hidden love for the girl whom he married his wayward brother, all goes to make up a strong realistic production with the stamp of success from all newspaper critics in cities it has visited. Prices, 25, 35 and 50c.

—An important point brought out by Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction E. L. Rexter in his talk before the school officers at the courthouse last Wednesday was the fact that supervisors and township clerks are not eligible to be school officers. There are instances in Charlevoix county as doubtless there are in nearly every other county in the state where township officers are holding office as school directors as well. This must be stopped according to the superintendent of public instruction. The question of handling transfer, the hiring of teachers, the responsibility of school directors and many similar points were taken up in Mr. Keene's speech. School Commissioner J. H. Milford was greatly pleased at the excellent attendance and feels that the interest shown must result in great good to the county schools of Charlevoix county.

Notice to Subscribers.

We are arranging for a marked improvement in the typography and make-up of the Sentinel—improvements that are expensive but necessary. Therefore society is the all important consideration. Will subscribers save us the cost of paper, postage and labor by responding with the cash?

—Mrs. John Nessen, of Kewaunee's on two trees, full-blown roses, picked in her yard last Friday. Floyd Blair, of Mackinac Island, tells us he picked ripe strawberries from his garden last Saturday. All around Charlevoix the porch-boxes with their burdens of blossoming geraniums and foliage plants are as bright in their glorious coloring as they were in August. And they call this the cold, dark month.

—The foot-ball boom meeting at the high school room Saturday night was a rouser. The room was packed with lusty lungs for school spirit and fond friends and patrons, all bound to make the season one full of vim and victory for the local team. There was very much enthusiasm, into which was sandwiched much good singing and an abundance of the high-school yell. There is already victory in the air.

—H. P. Parmelee went to Ludington Monday to pay Mrs Grace S. Leetham, widow of engineer Eel H. Leetham, three thousand ($3,000) dollars, being the full amount of his New York Life contract. The lost bags not been recovered, but the company waive the usual rules, not even requiring a bond, being satisfied that both he and Capt. Kilty, who also had a policy in the company, went down with the ill fated P. M. Car Terry No. 18.

THE SECOND BATTLE

The Saloon Interests Working for Re-Submission in January.

The SENTINEL was evidently in error, in a recent issue, in stating that in the matter of re-submission of the local option question, "the joke was on the drys." It is true that petitions were in circulation, but the required number of names was not secured.

Now, we are given to understand the wet campaign will be resumed with the purpose of securing re-submission by the board of supervisors at its January session. Therefore, this being true, the friends of law, order and decency may as well girt up their loins for the first phase of the contest—the prevention of re-submission.

This proposition may be laid down as irrefutable: The movement to re-submit finds its source and inspiration in the councils of the liquor traffic interests. The trade has been hard hit wherever local option has been adopted. The statement that "as much liquor goes into local option territory now as there did before" is the illest sort of nonsense. It is unworthy of discussion. The man who does not know that conditions in Charlevoix county are better than they were two years is either blind or he does not want to see.

We have nothing to say of "individual rights" or "personal liberty," we fight the open saloon as the greatest enemy of society since the first sin was committed in the Garden of Eden. There is not an honest-minded person alive today who, in his heart of hearts does not know this to be true. We become weary even at the thought of enumerating the evidences of this fact. They are as the ocean to the spring fresher when measured against the specious pleadings of the distillery.

Moreover, the saloon liquor traffic, per se, is not all. It is the sine-breed accessories, that attach to the saloon which do as much to deprave the youth of our country as the decanter.

Since local option came in vogue the liquor interests are loud in their advocacy of the enforcement of law in the conduct of saloons. The wholesalers tell us that they will be the first to denounce and punish violators, if the saloons are restored.

When the devil was sick the devil a saint would be.
When the devil got well the devil a saint was he.

It will be so if saloons are restored. It is the nature of a saloon to breed trouble—trouble for the home, trouble for business, trouble for the immortal soul of man.

THE BOOTH FREEZES

A Perfect Cold Storage Plant Now in Commission—Cords of Fish Ready for the Market.

The big 50-ton freezer and cold storage plant of the Booth Fisheries Co., in this city went into commission last Friday, and the regular warehouse force has been doubled for the work of caring for the large catches that are coming in daily from the lake and the Island.

It is an interesting process. The fish are put up in covered pans of a capacity of twenty five pounds and footed in crushed ice and coarse salt. They remain in this freezing room but one night, when they are taken out and literally "corded" up in the cold storage room adjoining—the metal ceiling and walls of which glisten with the frost produced by the tons of ice that surround it.

In this room Saturday were piled up the "batch" of the night before—six tons of lake, mostly splendid Mackinaw trout, but Mr. Nordrum points to a section of whitefish that came from Arbor City, and which were swimming in the lake the day before. Another section of fish that show their striped bellies through the transparent ice consists of perch, and opposite them is a rank of plebean chubs. All these fish are in condition to retain their freshness and flavor for an indefinite period.

Every few days a carload is boxed up and shipped to market or placed in the cold storage plants of the company in the larger cities. From now on until well into January the Booth plant will be a busy place, with the exception of the brief period between the close of spawn taking and the termination of the close season, for the spawn gathering catches are usually large, and embrace a good portion of the prohibitive term.

A MONUMENT

Perpetuating the Memory of a Stupendous Municipal Mistake—A White Elephant.

Down at the public lighting plant on a solid concrete foundation, there stands a mind puzzling conglomeration of cast iron, brass and other components, that for two years has been spoken of in whispers and which bears the same relation to municipal usefulness as the dream of perpetual motion does to the realm of mechanical science.

It was placed there as reserve power for the pump. The city paid $1,000 for it before it ever pumped a barrel of water. The combined mechanical genius of the plant has for two years failed to make it work. An outside expert was called in, at an expense of $100, and he reported that it would cost approximately $1,400 to make it go.

Meantime the city is paying from $800 to $1,200 per month to the Ludington power plant and keeping a steam and electric plant against the day when disaster comes to the dam Ludington outfit—we mean the Ludington dam outfit.

There are those who believe that the change of system was, in the first place, a mistake. We do not go that far. There are cores of cities and villages in Michigan and elsewhere which derive their light and motive power from similar sources. The proposition was reduced to cold figures and the showing was unquestionably in favor of the change. Even now, in the midst of our vexations, we are not prepared to say that a return to the old system would be desirable. But it requires no argument to show that the big nonsilly gas engine transaction was a stupendous mistake—not in the proposition itself, but in the manner in which it was done—the expenditure of $2,000 on a local experiment.

We brag about our municipal light and water plant, yet we are daily standing on the brink of possible disaster, and keeping up an expensive auxiliary steam plant, with still another "in reserve" that is fit only for scrap-iron.

The Solemn Truth of the Matter

Mancelona Herald: There is some value of concern to the saloon interests of Michigan in the repeated statement that they succeed in having made in their behalf, that there is nearly as much liquor sold in the dry counties as before the local option law went into effect. But there is not a single city or village or township or ward in any dry county of which that statement is true. There is not a dry county in which there is one sale of liquor now made where there were fifty when the saloons were there. There is not a dry county in which drunkenness is one tenth as prevalent as before the saloons were driven out. It is further true that there is not a dry county in which the sentiment in favor of local option is not stronger than before its local option experience was entered upon. Every vote that far taken on the local option question in Michigan after the people had noted it's result showed more strength for local option than before it was tried. This was true of every county in which local option was adopted for the second time, and it was true of the two counties, Oakland and Wexford, in which local option was not adopted. In every ward in Pontiac and every ward in Cadillac and in the townships of the counties in which these cities are located there were more votes cast for local option after the law had been on trial for two years than there were before the results were known. This record of local option experience effectively disposes of every argument and question as to it's practical success.

Branch Railroad Contract Signed.

Chief engineer Sloan and Dr. Cromer returned from Detroit last week, with a contract signed by the Pere Marquette railroad people for the construction as the two-mile branch from the main line to the Cement factory grounds.

While the Cement Co. pay for the transfer, the railroad company will have charge of the construction, and a work-gang is expected here this week to do the work.

The work of putting the line producing plant in commission is seriously delayed by the non arrival of machinery, but the company hope to have that portion of the plant doing business this month. A strong force of men is still at work.

A NOTABLE EVENT

Board of Supervisors and Boards of Trade Meet at Banquet Board—Boom for County.

About one hundred gentlemen surrounded the banquet table at Baker's inn Tuesday evening on one of the most enjoyable occasions of recent years. It was a gathering of the boards of trade of Charlevoix, Boyne City, and East Jordan, and the board of supervisors, now in session here.

Director D. S. Payton, of the West Michigan Development Bureau, was the instigator of the proposition to bring all these citizens of the best county in Northern Michigan together, and, as usual in all his work well, Harry Nicholls, president of the Charlevoix board of commerce, presided, and, when the courses were disposed of and the coffee and cigars come in, he opened the post prandial feature of the event in a welcoming speech, and called Payton to his feet.

Mr. Payton set the pace that was maintained for two hours—a wide awake, earnest and concerted boom for the Development Bureau. Mr. Payton reviewed the work of the Bureau and the great results achieved, and appealed to Charlevoix county, through its commercial and agricultural representatives there assembled, for a better and more homogeneous organization as auxiliary to the Bureau.

The general talk that others, and all felt into line with enthusiasm to bring about the result suggested. Following the general discussion of Charlevoix county development opportunities the Charlevoix County Chamber of Commerce was organized with the following officers: President, Harry Nicholls, of Charlevoix; 1st vice president, Lisle White, of Boyne City; 2d vice president, L. A. Brintnall, of East Jordan; treasurer, George Glenn, of East Jordan; secretary, Peter Collier, of Boyne City. Directors—James Wagner, of Hudson; John Hughes, of Norwood; Chas. Cameron, of Evangeline; W. J. Gallagher, of St. James.

The voting members of the organization are the supervisors and the officers of the several boards of trade. The honorary membership is given wide scope.

The gastronomic feature of the event was beyond criticism, and the good fellowship and enthusiasm manifested demonstrated the fact that Charlevoix county proposes to be an active and aggressive factor in the work of the West Michigan Development Bureau. We regret that the hour of our going to press, and the urgency of other duty prohibits following the Tuesday night council meeting prevents a more extended review of the gathering.

His Memory Good.

"I have not forgotten these things," said Lawton T. Hemans, the Democratic candidate for governor, in the course of a recent address in an upper peninsula city, when he was referring to an action taken by the last Democratic legislature of Michigan through which he was justifying decided opposition to the tax manage tax proposition. The question as to whether Mr. Hemans was correct in his reference to some phase of the record of the last Democratic legislature of Michigan is not onehalf so important as is his statement that he has not forgotten the record of that legislature. If Mr. Hemans memory is so good with reference to the last page of actual history created by the Democratic party of Michigan he probably remembers the further fact that that last Democratic legislature of Michigan was referred to by eyes the leading Democratic papers of Michigan as one of the most disgraceful organizations that had ever convened in any state in the Union. He probably further remembers that for extreme partisanship and for utter disregard of every promise they had made and every expectation relating to their performance the last Democratic legislature of Michigan was not equal. When that legislature adjourned it was declared by the Detroit Evening News that "there would never be another Democratic legislature in Michigan so long as the last one was remembered." It is well for Michigan and its people that a large majority of the voters of Michigan can say with Mr. Hemans, though the memory may not be pleasing to him, "We have not forgotten these things."

HOW THE GOVERNMENT TESTS TAXIMETERS

IN ALMOST every large city in the United States taxicabs are rapidly displacing horse-drawn cabs and carriages as public vehicles for transportation in those horseless vehicles are almost always based on the distance traveled as shown on the registering dials of the taximeters it obviously becomes of the gravest importance that these automatic records shall be honest and accurate in their chronicling. Indeed, in many cities there have been loud protests due to alleged overcharging dollar attributed to the faulty operation of the taximeters. Whether such false accounting was due to a desire to cheat the travelling public or merely to faulty mechanism in the mechanical bookkeeper could seldom be determined, but in either event the outcome was the same—the public got the worst of it.

Various cities have made efforts to devise some means of testing taximeters, but to Uncle Sam belongs the credit of first solving the problem. The system is now in successful operation at the capital of the nation, where, by the way, there are probably more taxicabs in operation than in any other city of the size in the world. The matter of keeping tab on the taximeters was placed in the hands of Col. W. C. Haskell, the United States superintendent of weights and measures, and he invented the first machine specially designed for testing the accuracy of the "taxi."

The first apparatus was rather cumbersome and the most conspicuous feature was a large wooden wheel which was turned by hand. The principle of operation involved the insertion of a small wire through the shaft of the meter to be tested and turning the same a certain number of times to cover distance, verifying this test over an official mile-post. Instead of this, the large machine when fitted with the same size eccentric, sprocket wheel and chain shaft to use 24 taxicabs pass a correct test, but it was a time-consuming process, the revolutions of the large wheel being required to show one-quarter mile of travel.

After much study of the subject Colonel Haskell perfected the small machine which has lately been introduced for this work. With it one revolution of the crank wheel—through the aid of a system of cogwheels—represents a quarter of a mile of travel. With this, multiplying attachment direct to the shaft of the meter to be tested it is possible to test ten meters in the time formerly required for trying out one. Moreover, the system of cogwheels is so adjusted as to give an absolutely accurate test. The government now requires that all taximeters attached to cabs at the seat of government be tested at least twice a year, and when a meter upon test is found to be accurate a round bun seal is affixed to the face of the meter showing that it has been "approved." Incorrect meters are given a yellow seal with the word "Condemned" stamped thereon and must be withdrawn from use under a penalty of $100 fine.

One of the latest ideas evolved for a safety attachment for automobiles is a "cow catcher." The "cow catcher," or man catcher, is attached to the front of the motor car and, when not in active use saving the life of some one who steps in front of the moving machine, it looks exactly like the pilot of a big locomotive. Used in this way, it was feared that pedestrians might be hurt, for the car would throw them to one side, hence an attachment was added, operated by a foot pedal arrangement by the seat of the driver, which, when pressed in time of danger, drops the cow catcher so that it is similar to the fender of a street car, and it catches and holds unlucky person and carrying him with the machine until rescued by the driver of the automobile. According to the inventors of this contrivance, the idea came to them because of serious accidents it played on this front of the automobile.

The frequency with which the claim is made that the automobile is largely an extravagance and that the people have grown enamored and are wrecking themselves to power conveyances with a rapidity and lack of discretion that threatens the stability of the country, is largely borne out by the results of recent investigations.

An editorial in a recent issue of the World's Work, under the caption, "Burning Irish Ends of the Candle," makes the startling statement that in the city of Minneapolis alone 1,500 homes have been mortgaged to enable their owners to purchase automobiles. It is stated that about $375,000,000 represents the total amount of the money still spend for motor cars next year, and the editorial adds that "there are plenty of indications that it is time for the average American to stop and think."

Look out of your office window, no matter what city you are in, and you will see an automobile. Try to cross the street and some of them is more than likely to come along with sounding horn warning the pedestrian to get out of the way. It's mass is deaf or a little slow in his footsteps he is too frequently run down and the chauffeur sets up as a defense that the accident was quite unavoidable. Every one knows that more than half the "unavoidable" accidents could be avoided if the cars were run slower and more attention was paid to the rights of others in their use of the public streets. The automobile almost monopolizes the public roads and has become a positive menace. It looms large in the annals of accidents as reported by accident insurance companies. The accident insurance companies recently found that the automobile is also a menace in a financial way. According to his report covering the months of April and May, he issued 1,500 policies for automobiles for the two months. Assuming an average of $1,000 for each car, it would of course appear that $1,500,000 had been spent for automobiles in Indiana within a period of sixty days. The statement has been made that in Indianapolis alone more than 1,000 homes have been mortgaged during the past year in order that householders may buy cars.

Purchasers of automobiles have been deceived in the matter of cost and upkeep, the difference in the representations in this respect is considerable. Coupled with actual experience, makes it unwise to take a car even on a gift.

The menace of the automobile now threatens the stability of the home, and the danger is by no means confined to the poorer classes, because poor farmers are buying them. Perhaps you can hear or see one of these "dwell wagons" within you read this paragraph about them. It would be worth while to think of them seriously, with the view of reducing the hazard they undoubtedly signify. The bankers of Kansas are alive to the seriousness of the situation, for they know that the farmers of the southwest who are dependent on the Kansas city banks have agreed to lend no money to anyone who buys a car, with which to buy a motor car. The Bankers of Kansas are alive to the menace of the automobile, for they know that when it is understood that $32,000,000 were invested in motor cars in that state during the last twelve months.

BUILT UP COUNTRY

RECORD OF REPUBLICAN POLICY OF PROTECTION.

Splendid Prosperity Now Universal Thanks Made a Boon Market Into Result of Principle of Fostering Home Market.

The following from a recent speech of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson is well worth the reading:

"For the last century we have had Republican policies. When the party came into power there were few railways, few factories and little population in the west. The western country yielded grains and meats abundantly, but there were no markets beyond the requirements of new settlers. The people were intelligent and saw at once that home markets were needed. It cost too much to ship our crops to Europe. We wanted shops, forges, factories and we got them by encouraging them. A protective system was adopted that made a home market into which the outside world has wanted to enter ever since. The Republican policy then was to give priorities equal to the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad.

"While we were building up our manufacturing system the public lands were being given to the people, which resulted in very little profit for many years, not very profitable to the farmers. Building transportation lines to the Mississippi valley and beyond, opening mines and erecting manufactories resulted in complete settlement of the lands in the humid regions of our country and has greatly increased population in all vocations until home demand for food products is so great that prices are higher than they have been for years. Throughout all these years have sustained the protective system because it established a home market for their products. They paid more for their factory goods, but they were made at home and the maker bought farm crops. Now it is proposed to let farm products come in free or at lower rates.

The farmers of the country had no price fixing to their products, public lands were to be had for taking up. The farmer enriched high prices for factory goods while those industries were being developed and the west was being settled. It now costs him more than it did before. The land investment is greater and labor costs much more. Is it now to be put in the same class as farmers in new sections of country and sell his goods in an open market in competition with pioneers of other lands? We had experience between 1893 and 1897 along this line. The factory lost its customers because goods made cheaper abroad came in. The factory lost its market because idle factory people could not buy.

"We have good times now, and have had since McKinley became the advance agent of prosperity. Our country is very prosperous. The revision of Lemon of Kansas let me see his job who wanted to work; no panic has followed."

The American Standard.

The Democratic idea that a tariff for revenue only would reduce prices shut to their natural level and the matter of wages take care of itself is an Republican and un-American. This is a matter with all the markets in the world put together. The farmer has his products to sell and the laboring man has his labor to dispose of. Neither of them will be protected if we do work while to think of them seriously, in the view of reducing the hazard they undoubtedly signify. The bankers of Kansas are alive to the seriousness of the situation, for they know that the farmers of the southwest who are dependent on the Kansas city banks have agreed to lend no money to anyone who buys a car, with which to buy a motor car. The Bankers of Kansas are alive to the menace of the automobile, for they know that when it is understood that $32,000,000 were invested in motor cars in that state during the last twelve months.

Physiognomy of the Salesman

The nose of a traveling salesman generally bears the appearance of breadth just above the wings. This is the nose that indicates the ability to acquire prospects, land sales, secure contracts through bargains and fine talking, and large orders from buyers, persuade people to accept what they did not wish to buy or make a bargain. The lightness of his nose shows the wings in the true facial sign of acquisitiveness, and a traveling salesman and a good business man have generally this characteristic well developed. We find it large in George Peabody, Andrew Carnegie and the Rothschilds, all of whom have made large fortunes.

The lips of a good salesman are regular and fit appropriately together.

The chin and face of a successful salesman are indicated by their squareness and roundness combined. The roundness gives the power of appeal, and the squareness gives the capacity to close the bargain.

The voice of a successful salesman is bright, cheery, optimistic. Its inflections are hopeful and strong, not heavy and dull. The salesman possesses a silvery tone, voice which is so oiled to its subject that it knows exactly what to say, and says it without hesitation.

The handwriting of a good salesman is neat, regular, connected, moves rapidly and has the lines that cross the t's and ambition is manifested in the tails of the g's and in the height of the b's, l's, etc.

PART OF WISDOM TO WAIT

Voters Should Consider Well Before Trusting Guidance of Country to the Democrats.

The Payne tariff act is not perfect, therefore may the country over to the Democrats, in the Democratic cry. No tariff act ever enacted was perfect. Even the one enacted that the McKinley bill or the Dingley bill or the Payne bill was perfect. There is a difference, however, in the attitude of the two parties. Because the Payne law is not perfect, destroy protection and return, as Champ Clark says, to a revenue basis, is the Democratic attitude. Because the Payne law is not perfect, let us remove the imperfections but preserve protection, is the Republican attitude. The law itself provides for a tariff board whose duty it is to collect facts upon which to base wise legislation to that end. This was a point upon which there has been no disagreement among Republicans. Let us secure all the information possible as to cost here and abroad, and then if any rate is found unjust change it in the interest of our own people. That is the Republican position. It found expression in the debate in congress over the tariff, the position of tariff law preparation and the certainty of imperfection in the completed measure were fully recognized. It finds expression now in newspaper and speech and party platform. President Taft, former President Roosevelt, Senator Lodge, Speaker Cannon, Congressman Serene E. Payne, Congressman Nortel of Ohio and hundreds of other Republican leaders are of the opinion that it is the part of wisdom to await the report of the tariff board with definite information and evidence upon which to base an opinion and then to act upon any schedule which may be found to be wrong. They all recognize the certainty of disaster to the Republican party if we should follow Democratic supremacy and they all appeal to their Republican friends to stand together in this campaign and fight for Republican candidates and Republican principles.

The Farmer and Politics.

It has been stated by veteran politicians that never before in their lives have they interested on the issues pending in a campaign, that he devoted greater and more painstaking thought to the things that must be settled at the polls than he did this year. That is why an overwhelming majority of the farmers of this country vote the Republican ticket. They know that under Democratic administration they have not been prosperous and that they have been under Republican administration, on the contrary, they have to remind any farmer of the dismal years of Democratic tariff legislation. This year there are more potent reasons than ever before for the farmers' support of the Republican party. No other class of persons in the United States is so prosperous as they are. Their prosperity since the return of the Republican party to power of 2 years ago has been astounding. It is a matter of history that with the prosperity and Republican rule are coincident.

Get Together.

Let Republicans stop taking counsel of their despondent fears and let them cease echoing the noisy and discordant defamation of Republican leaders by the Democratic press. Let them take counsel together as Republicans and take courage from the splendid traditions and achievements of our party and the patriotic

HOW THE GOVERNMENT TESTS TAXIMETERS

IN ALMOST every large city in the United States taxicabs are rapidly displacing horse-drawn cabs and carriages as public vehicles for transportation in those horseless vehicles are almost always based on the distance traveled as shown on the registering dials of the taximeters. It obviously becomes of the gravest importance that these automatic records shall be honest and accurate in their chronicling. Indeed, in many cities there have been loud protests due to alleged overcharging of taxicab patrons—the alleged overcharging being attributed to the faulty operation of the taximeters. Whether such false accounting was due to a desire to cheat the traveling public or merely to faulty mechanism in the mechanical bookkeeper could seldom be determined, but in either event the outcome was the same—the public got the worst of it.

Various efforts have been made in Chicago some means of testing taximeters, but in Uncle Sam lebanon the credit belongs to the problem. The system is now in successful operation at the Bureau of Standards in Washington, so that there are probably more taximeters in operation than in any other city of the size in the world. The matter of testing taximeters at the taximeters was placed in the hands of Col. W. C. Haskell, the United States superintendent of weights and measures, and he invented the first machine specifically designed for testing the accuracy of the "tax."

The first apparatus was rather cumbersome and the most conspicuous feature was a large wooden wheel which was turned by hand. The profession of taxicabbing involved the insertion of a small wire through the shaft of the meter to be tested and turning the meter a certain number of times to cover distance, verifying this test over an official mile and therein lies trouble. The large machine when fitted with the same size acquisite, sprocket wheel and spiral shaft by use "A taxicabs gave a correct test, but it was a time-consuming process, ten revolutions of the large wheel being required to show one-quarter mile of travel.

After much study of the subject Colonel Haskell started the second machine which has lately been introduced for this work. With it one revolution of the crank wheel—through the aid of a system of cogwheels—represents a quarter of a mile of travel. With this small machine attached direct to the shaft of the meter to be tested it is possible to test ten meters in the time formerly required for trying out one. Moreover, the system of cogwheels is so adjusted as to give an absolutely accurate test. The government now requires that all taximeters attached to cabs at the seat of government be tested at least every year, and when a meter upon test is found to be accurate a round blue seal is affixed to the face of the meter showing that it has been "approved." Incorrect meters are given a yellow seal with the word "Condemned" thereon and the meter withdrawn from use under a penalty of $100 fine.

One of the latest ideas evolved for a safety attachment for automobiles is a "cow catcher." The "cow catcher" is a man catcher, attached to the front of the motor car and, when not in active use saving the life of some one who stops in front of the moving machine, it looks exactly like the grill of a big locomotive in that respect. It is feared that pedestrians might be hurt, for the car would throw them to one side, hence an attachment was added, operated by a button fixed conveniently on the seat near the driver, which, when pressed in case of danger, drops the cow catcher so that it is similar to the fender of a street car, adapted to catching the unlucky person and carrying him with the machine until removed by the driver of the automobile. According to the inventor of this contrivance, the "cow catcher" will prevent any serious accident if placed on the front of the automobiles.

The frequency with which the claim is made that the automobile is largely an extravagance and that the people have always somehow and are amusing themselves to power conveniences with a rapidity and lack of discretion that threatens the stability of the country, is largely borne out by the results of recent investigations.

An editorial in a recent issue of the World's Work, under the caption, "Burning Both Ends of the Candle," makes the startling statement that in the city of Minneapolis alone 1,500 houses have been mortgaged to enable their owners to purchase automobiles. It is stated that about 75,000,000 resources of the people of this country are spent for motor cars next year, and the editorial asks that "there are plenty of Indian tribes that have to lose far in advance American to stop and think."

Look out of your office window, no matter what city you are in, and you will see an automobile. Try to cross the street, and one of them is more than likely to come along with sounding horn warning the pedestrian to get out of the way. It is a man is deaf or a little slow in his footsteps he is too frequently run down and the chauffeur sets up as a defense that the accident was quite unavoidable. Every one knows that more than half the "unavoidable" accidents could be avoided if the cars were run slower and more attention was paid to the rights of others in their use of the public streets. The automobile almost monopolizes the country roads and has become a political issue in some states large in the annals of accidents as reported by accident insurance companies. The secretary of state of Indiana has recently found that the automobile is also a menace in a financial way. According to his report covering the months of April and May, he issued 3,564 licenses for automobiles for the two months, of $1,000 for each car, it would of course appear that $3,564,000 had been spent for automobiles in Indiana within a period of sixty days. The statement has been made that in Indianapolis alone more than 1,200 horses have been purchased during the past year to order that householders may buy cars.

Purchasers of automobiles have been deceived in the matter of cost and upkeep, the difference in the representations in this respect in comparison with actual experience, makes it unwise to take or own a car even as a gift.

The menace of the automobile now threatens the stability of the home, and the danger is by no means confined to the "poor" automobile. Even farmers are buying them. Perhaps you can hear or see one of these "devil wagons" while you read this paragraph about them. It would be worth while to think it over seriously, and from the view of reducing the hazard they undoubtedly signify. The bankers of Kansas City and of the southwest who are interested in farm mortgages have agreed to lend no money to anyone who intends to use it with which to buy a motor car. The bankers of Kansas are alive to the menace of the automobile, and it is time to be when it is understood that $32,000,000 were invested in motor cars in that state during the last twelve months.

What He Found Out

An Italian journalist, Sig. Tommaso Gilioni, has just had some disagreeable experiences. Desirous of knowing something of the lunatic asylums from within, with the object of ameliorating the lot of the insane, he pretended himself at the gates of the "Charenon asylum and asked for an audience of the King of Italy. The attendants showed him the door, and then he ran foul of the police, and in the end found himself in the asylum.

The doctors examined him, and filled big him far from treatable admitted to the asylum. Then they gave him a shower bath and sent vaccinated the interpreting journalist. After that they held a consultation in the presence of the "lunatic"—whose howls rises they evidently suspected—and unanimously agreed that the only treatment in such a case was imprisonment for a cancer on the brain. By this time Sig. Tommaso Gilioni thought the joke had gone far enough. This he did, and found himself at the police station. The magistrate, however, released him, observing that he thought the doctors had administered sufficient punishment.

Modern Strolling Players.

M. Demier, manager of the Theater Antoine, Paris, France, is said to be nearly completing a motor-caravan playhouse of his own invention. This will enable him to go in for really up-to-date touring. The theater—house, seats, stage, wings, flies, scenery, properties, costumes, wigs and all—will be contained in a road train of several cars linked together. It will travel easily from town to town, and there will be no more negotiating with local lessees or difficulties with rail way transportation of dresses. M. Demier and his company will be the strolling players of the twentieth century.

BUILT UP COUNTRY

RECORD OF REPUBLICAN POLICY OF PROTECTION.

Splendid Prosperity Now Universal Throughout the Land the Direct Result of Principle of Fostering Home Market.

The following from a recent speech of decretary of Agriculture Wilson is well worth the reading:

"For half a century we have had Republican policies. When the party came into power there were few railways, few factories and little population in the west. The western country yielded grains and meats abundantly, but there were no markets beyond the requirements of new settlers. The people were intelligent and any at one that home markets were needed. It cost one month to send cross to Europe. We wanted shops, forges, factories and we got them by encouraging them. A protective system was adopted that made a home market into which the outside world has wanted to enter ever since. The Republican policy then was to give protection equal to the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad.

While we were building up our manufacturing system the public lands were being given to the people, which resulted in settlement of the west, and years, not very profitable to the farmers. Railroads transportation thus to the Mississippi valley and beyond, opening sales and prices, which again disastrous resulted in complete settlement of the lands in the humid region of our country and in greatly increased population in all vocations until home demand for food products was in so great that prices are higher than they have been. Our farmers have sustained the protective system because it maintained a home market for their products. They sold more for their factory goods, but they were made a home and the maker bought farm crops. Now in the present tariff farm products come free or at lower rates.

The farmers of the country had ten years of prosperity, while their lands were to be had for taking up. The farmer obtained high prices for factory goods while these industries were being developed and the time has now arrived. It now costs him more than it did before. The land is valuable, it is greater and labor costs much more. As for now to be put to his share of the uniform law of all incast countries and sell his goods in an open market in competition with producers of other lands? We had an experience between 1883 and 1887 along that line. The factory lost its customers because goods made cheaper abroad came in. The farmer lost his market because his factory people could not buy.

"We have good times now, and have had since McKinley became the advance agent of prosperity. Our country is very prosperous. The revision of the tariff has lost us no trade. Those who wanted to work; no panic had followed."

The American Standard.

The Democratic idea that a tariff for revenue only will bring prosperity to their natural level and the matter of wages take care of itself is to Republicans and un-American. This is a market worth all the markets in the world, and we have it. The Republican policy is to make and sell the goods in the home market with the labor of the automobile. According to the inventory of this contrivance, the "cow catcher" will prove more accident if placed on the front of the automobiles.

The frequency with which the claim is made that the automobile is largely an extravagance and that the people have always somehow and are amusing themselves to power conveniences with a rapidity and lack of discretion that threatens the stability of the country, is largely borne out by the results of recent investigations.

Let them take counsel together as Republicans and go into the campaign with splendid traditions and achievements of the past behind them.

More Than Actual Free Trade.

The threat of Mr. Champ Clark that if given power the Democrats will revise the tariff to a revenue basis is a worse threat than one of absolute free trade would be. To revise the tariff to a revenue basis would mean the destruction of protection and the imposition of duties on articles the like of which we do not and cannot produce in the United States instead of on articles from abroad that come into competition with the products of our own farms and factories. Such a system would operate again as it always has operated—it would lower the wages of our workingmen and demoralize the market for everything the American farmer has to sell.

Both the serious panics since the Republican party was formed resulted directly and entirely from the election of a Democratic majority in congress. That is history.

"You do not have to guess what the Democratic party will do. The world knows its purpose. It has embodied them in a law and recorded them in administration."—William McKinley.

Patriotism—protection—prosperity—the Republican ticket.

The construction of the canal is now an assured fact; but most certainly it is unwise to entrust the carrying out of the enterprise to a party to those who have endeavored to defeat the undertaking. — Ex-President Roosevelt.

One thing that can be said in favor of our recent revision is that it is much better than was that which the Democrats could enact founded upon the exploded theory of levying duties for revenue only. It would be fatal to permit the country to say such doctrine.—Senator Cummins.

Better Prevent It.

"A further reduction of the tariff would hit the working people first."—George Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture.

WASTED A FORTUNE ON SKIN TROUBLE

"I began to have an itching over my whole body about seven years ago and this settled in my hands, from the knee down to the ankles. I spent a lot with physicians, a matter which cost me a fortune, and after I noticed that I did not get any relief that way, I went for three years to the hospital, but they were unable to help me there, I used all the medicines that I could see but became worse and worse. I had an inflammation which made me almost crazy with pain. When I showed my foot to my friends they would get really frightened. I did not know what to do. I was so sick and had become so nervous that I positively lost all hope.

"I had seen the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies a great many times, but could not make up my mind to buy them, for I had already used so many medicines. Finally I did decide to use the Cuticura Remedies and I tell you that I was never so pleased as when I noticed that, after having used two set of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, the entire inflammation had gone. I was completely cured. I feel so glad to write with similar disease would come to me and find out the truth. I would only recommend them to use Cuticura. The elderly stranger, by invitation of the superintendent, was addressed the Sunday school.

"Here you children! tell me," he asked "which is the longest chapter in the Bible?"

Many hands went up.

"This little boy may answer," he said, pointing his finger at an urchin in one of the seats near the front.

"Which is the longest chapter in the Bible?"

"Psalm double one nine!" shouted Tommy Tucker.

HUNDREDS ARE DEAD

FEW SETTLERS IN NORTHERN MINNESOTA ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE ESCAPED.

SEVEN TOWNS OFF THE MAP

Fifty Miles of the Rainy Lake Country a Mass of Fire—Martial Law for the Stricken District—Whole Families Are Destroyed.

Rainy River, Ont.—It was estimated Monday that at least 500 lives and $100,000,000 worth of property had been lost in the forest fires prevailing in this region.

The tales of horrible suffering brought in Monday by refugees is almost beyond narration. Oscar Johnson, wife and three children stood five hours in the Baudette river dooking their heads when the heat became too intense. They say the water in the river was heated to an uncomfortable temperature and the steam arose from the surface.

The property loss in the three towns alone, including the Hat Portage Lumber company's plant and yard at Rainy river and the yard of the Sheriff-Mathieu Lumber company at Spooner, will total $1,500,000.

It will be some time before the loss of life is known even approximately, and in fact it may never be known. The residents of Rainy River, Ont., are doing everything possible to assist the homeless residents of the two American towns.

Poverty of the worst kind is added to the woes of the demoralized people. Many of them have lost everything. Small towns sprung up along the line of the road, and many of these towns are still thriving, but the passenger trains do not seem to be sufficient to meet the requirements of the road.

Hereafter a safe and effective system by the Manistique Lumber company secured control of the road. Not whistle to operate it, they have served notice that bids will be received by the company for all or part of the road and that the road will be dismantled and sold to the highest bidder. Night trains are in demand by the residents of these towns are wondering where they are coming in. The only news that will not be affected is Soney, which is fortunately on the line of the Duluth and South Shore. But it is 21 miles, the way the crow flies, from Soney to Grand Marais, and how the residents of this town, which is quite a burg, are going to gain assistance to the outer world is a puzzle.

Motor Cars Pay $56,000 Tag Tax.

Five people in the state realize the amount of money that is annually expended in the state of Michigan for the small number of plates used on automobiles. Figures on file at the secretary of state's office show that so far this year the state has received from the sale of number plates and the issuing of licenses approximately $55,000. Of this amount the state will reap a profit of approximately between $56,000 and $57,000.

The new supply of numbers, which has just been received at the department, reaching upwards of 42,000 in number, about 2,000 of this number being plates that will be sold manufacturers of automobiles in the state to be used on cars used for demonstrating purposes.

These plates cost on an average to the state of 27 cents per pair and are sold at three dollars per pair or a profit of $2.73 on each pair. In the state simply furnished the license and the owner could purchase a number plate wherever he desired, but this method was found to be entirely impracticable on account of the lack of uniformity in the color and size of the plates used in a law was drafted by which the state would furnish the number plates at the same time the license was issued.

The money derived from the sale of the license goes into the general fund and distributed to the various counties therewith, but it is being seriously talked of framing a bill to present to the next legislature whereby this additional money received from the sale of automobile licenses may be turned back into the highway fund of the state and used to better the condition of the roads.

The number plates for this year were black figures on a white background, but the plates that are now being received and which will be used on all 1911 machines will be just the reverse, a black background with white letters.

LORIMER HEARING IS ENDED

SENATORS ADJOURN BUT MAY MEET AT WASHINGTON.

Speaker Shurtleff Goes on Stand—Testifies More About Assembly Factions.

Chicago. — The senatorial subcommittee which is investigating the election of United States Senator Lorimer concluded its three weeks' session in Chicago without hearing arguments.

Before the report on Mr. Lorimer's right to his seat is presented to the full committee on privileges and elections, by which the seven investigators were delegated, there is the prospect of further stilings at Washington preceding the convening of congress next December. Moreover, it is possible that additional testimony will be heard.

This will depend in part upon whether Representative Robert E. Wilson, now in hiding, is found by the deputy United States marshals, who have been hunting for him to serve him with a subpoena.

Chairman Burrows made plain that he was regarded as a highly desirable witness, whose absence at this time suggested special reasons for securing his presence and testimony.

Speaker Edward D. Shurtleff was stated one of the last witnesses heard. Mr. Shurtleff denied paying or receiving money "or other valuable thing" in consideration of voting for Lorimer. Most of his testimony was devoted to apportioning the house legislators into factional groups.

Up to the last moment there was uncertainty as to whether Senator Lorimer would be a witness, but he did not go on the stand.

STANDARD CUTS OIL PRICES

Reductions Made in Europe and the Far East in Campaign to increase Use of Kerosene.

New York.—J. I. C. Clarke, through whom the Standard Oil company makes its official announcements to the press, has issued a statement to the effect that the company has entered on a thoroughly dapper out campaign to increase the consumption of kerosene in European countries and the lands of the Orient. The first move in this campaign is the reduction of the prices of oil in those countries. Mr. Clarke's announcement says in part:

"The Standard Oil company has inaugurated a campaign to increase the world's consumption of refined oil. The level of prices for refined oil today in the United States is lower than at any time during recent years, and as a direct result of these prices the consumption of refined oil in this country is increasing. The same policy is now being actively pursued abroad."

As indicated by this statement, the Standard company began trying out the policy of lower prices in the United States, though without announcement, in the Ohio field, a campaign that would cover the world. In August the price of refined oil in Ohio was reduced from 6½ to 5½ cents a gallon, and the price of refined oil in Lacrda at Pittsburg from 7½ cents, from 9½ to 8½ cents a gallon.

Toilet Will Get $100,000.

New York.—Five people in the state realize the amount of money that is annually expended in the state of Michigan for the small number of plates used on automobiles. Figures on file at the secretary of state's office show that so far this year the state has received from the sale of number plates and the issuing of licenses approximately $55,000. Of this amount the state will reap a profit of approximately between $56,000 and $57,000.

The new supply of numbers, which has just been received at the department, reaching upwards of 42,000 in number, about 2,000 of this number being plates that will be sold manufacturers of automobiles in the state to be used on cars used for demonstrating purposes.

These plates cost on an average to the state of 27 cents per pair and are sold at three dollars per pair or a profit of $2.73 on each pair. In the state simply furnished the license and the owner could purchase a number plate wherever he desired, but this method was found to be entirely impracticable on account of the lack of uniformity in the color and size of the plates used in a law was drafted by which the state would furnish the number plates at the same time the license was issued.

The money derived from the sale of the license goes into the general fund and distributed to the various counties therewith, but it is being seriously talked of framing a bill to present to the next legislature whereby this additional money received from the sale of automobile licenses may be turned back into the highway fund of the state and used to better the condition of the roads.

The number plates for this year were black figures on a white background, but the plates that are now being received and which will be used on all 1911 machines will be just the reverse, a black background with white letters.

FEAR INSOLATION, APPEAL TO STATE

TOWNS PROTEST AGAINST DISMANTLING OF RAILROAD AS INTENDED.

QUESTIONS UP TO WARNER

Governor Receives a Petition Containing Over 510 Names of Residents of Towns Along the Manistique Railroad.

Lansing.—Governor Warner, during his three terms of office, has had some perplexing questions put up to him, and he has solved many of them in a manner satisfactory.

A petition containing over 500 names of residents of towns along the Manistique railroad, with terminus at Williams, in Mackinaw county, and Grand Marais, in Alger county, reached the offices of the state railway commission, asking that body and the governor to use their united efforts in an attempt to prevent the dismantling of the railroad which serves the towns of Curtis, Eliot, Ackley, Germfask, Seney, Little, Steer, Bennett, Shiff and Grand Marais.

Several years ago the railroad was built, principally for carrying lumber and logs from that portion of the state, then in the prime of its lumber industry. The lumber has long since been exhausted, and there remains only the hardwood timber. Small towns sprung up along the line of the road, and many of these towns are still thriving, but the passenger trains do not seem to be sufficient to meet the requirements of the road.

Hereafter a safe and effective system by the Manistique Lumber company secured control of the road. Not whistle to operate it, they have served notice that bids will be received by the company for all or part of the road and that the road will be dismantled and sold to the highest bidder. Night trains are in demand by the residents of these towns are wondering where they are coming in. The only news that will not be affected is Soney, which is fortunately on the line of the Duluth and South Shore. But it is 21 miles, the way the crow flies, from Seney to Grand Marais, and how the residents of this town, which is quite a burg, are going to gain assistance to the outer world is a puzzle.

STATE G. O. P. PROGRESSIVE

Platform Pledges Party to Promote Political and Industrial Welfare of Michigan.

TAFT RECEIVES ENDORSEMENT

Republicans Congratulated Upon the Nominations of Townsend and Osborn—Publicity of Sources of Campaign Funds Recommended—Extension of Good Roads System Favored.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 10.—The platform of the Republican party of Michigan, as adopted by the convention, it is said, is as follows:

"We, the Republicans of Michigan in state convention assembled, reaffirm our fidelity to the principles of the political party which our state gave to the nation more than a half century ago.

"We renew our faith in, and express our admiration for the president of the United States, whose leadership and personality strengthen the confidence of the American people in their institutions. William Howard Taft, jurist, diplomat, governor general and cabinet officer in the administrations of William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt, has, as president, increased our prestige with foreign nations, and vigorously dealt with international problems of vital interest to the country. His presidential career has been conspicuous and consistent in its labors for the people.

"We commend congress for the beneficent legislation which it has enacted.

"We approve most heartily the establishment of the tariff commission, whose labors will be directed to the removal of any inequalities of the law.

"In state affairs the Republican party declares for that probity and efficiency in the affairs of the commonwealth which are epitited in the character of the eminent scholar, traveler, author and statesman, Chase S. Osborn, whom we offer to the people of our state as a candidate for governor worthy of the suffrage of every voter who loves ability, courage and honesty in high places. The moment of the ticket which he heads is ample assurance to the people of Michigan that under Republican rule the state will be given an administration which will be honest, economical and businesslike.

"We stand for efficiency in public office and pledge our nominee to an administration in which every public dollar shall buy as much as a private dollar, whether in services or supplies. We regard dishonesty in the public service as a form of treason worthy of the severest punishment. We stand pledged to the exposure and punishment of all wrongdoing in public station, of whatever name or degree. We likewise stand pledged to a business-like administration with the fewest possible employees, boards and other governmental agencies consistent with good service.

"We believe that the operation of the primary law has increased the interest of the electorate in the choice of the political candidates. We recommend the passage of a primary election statute which shall require the publication before election of statements showing in detail the expenditures by candidates for nomination to public office, and the source of contributions to their campaign funds, and such amendment to the primary law as will best serve to connect it to the active interest of the voter.

"We believe in the conservation of all natural resources.

"We urge upon the next legislature the desirability of a commission of experts which shall review the entire system of taxation in the state, with the purpose of securing for the people the full measure from every species of property taxed; equal property within the commonwealth is entitled to draw, and the correction of inequalities in taxation wherever found.

"We favor the creation of a nonsectarian, non-partisan commission which shall be empowered to control the conservation, propagation and protection of the state's wild game and fish.

"We favor the extension, where possible, of the good roads system.

"We congratulate our party upon the nomination for United States senator of Hon. Charles E. Townsend, one of Michigan's most distinguished sons.

"In conclusion the Republican party is the party of progress. It has stepped forward to meet the great responsibilities of the past. It must solve the problems of the future. Under its control of state and national affairs a marvelous material prosperity has been attained. That prosperity is attended by evils which must be controlled. Material prosperity and business decency are not incompatible.

"The Republican party wages no war on corporations honestly conducted, or wealth honestly acquired, but it wages relentless warfare against lawlessness and abuse whether practiced by the big or by the little.

"We pledge our party to promote the moral, political and industrial welfare of our state so far as legislation and administration can accomplish."

Osborn Says Ex-President Is Not Aiming at Personal Political Gain.

PROGRESS G. O. P. WATCHWORD

Republican Candidate For Governor, In Speech Before State Convention, Says Pinchot Was One of First Progressive Leaders—People Are Now In Power, He Says.

Chase S. Osborn, in his speech before the Republican state convention, said, in part:

"Michigan Republicans are concerned first for the state and secondly for the party, but always for both, which is as it should be. They are determined that their state shall be the best governed in the nation, and they are equally insistent that the Republican party shall be the instrument of that accomplishment.

G. O. P. Reflects People's Character.

"It is profoundly satisfying to see the internal activity of the grand old party in its successful efforts to purge and purge itself, accomplish a potent development in harmony with the times and take a position of new usefulness to nation, state and all the people. There can be no organic or fundamental weakness in the Republican party that does not exist in or of the people, because it has been for ages the party of majority and must have taken on the character of the majority of the people. The Democratic party has lost its best men to the Republican party because they could find within the Republican party opportunity to serve their state. They found that in failure the Democratic party had only to a dismal nowhere, and it waned to a point where it even lost the powers of adequate criticism, all so necessary to a government by a free people. To compensate for this loss the Republican party instinctively took itself over to careful introspection, asked itself a number of most pertinent questions and out of it all has come a new band of progressive Republicans led by the most fearless and able public man in the world today, Theodore Roosevelt.

"Thus, out of the old party chrysalis will come a newer and better Republican party, more alert than ever to guard the interests of all the people and guide the nation to the highest achievement of human destiny.

M. C. Dunmore Hits Politics.

"Under the old regime the Chicago, Northwestern, and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad companies owned Wisconsin politically, the Michigan Central dominated Michigan politics; the New York Central, United States Express company and allied interests ruled in New York. There came a LaFollette in Wisconsin, a Flagler in Michigan, a Roosevelt in New York. Similar conditions existed in almost all the states, and nearly all have developed progressive leaders to wrest them from the powers of privilege. Pinchot, Bryce and John C. Spooner tried to run over LaFollette with the car of political impotency. This submitted the young fighting man and made of him an extremist. The Michigan political machine fought Pingree, but the people saw in him a champion of their rights and supported him. Pitatt and Depew fought Roosevelt to the last ditch and denied him.

"So the people find themselves in power, that is power they must be right and just. Individual injustice is bad enough, but to its destruction it cannot be compared with the power for evil of public injustice. The future will show the public viewpoint to be fair.

Roosevelt Marvelous Leader.

"I may be pardoned for calling attention to the rather unusual fact that all, or nearly all, of the progressive leaders are great political lawyers who have never had business experience and for whom it may be difficult to see the commercial viewpoint. They will undoubtedly appreciate that we do not seek counsel of honest and patriotic business men of wide accomplishment. Selfishness may be trusted, usually, to care for the commercial side of the nation's interest, leaving another and, in the past, rarer instinct to devote and guard the ethical interest. Personally, I believe that Theodore Roosevelt is not only a marvelous leader, but is unselfish and is not aiming at personal political gain; that he is a teacher and preacher whose power for usefulness is greater as a private citizen than as president.

"Our race will not be one for material supremacy of the world, but for love and mercy and justice. The immoderate and unhealthy of wealth will disappear before the better attribute of heart. There will be a new and no master, but a friendship and brotherhood where the strong will help the weak. Under these things come to pass the rich veneer of civilization will slip concealed the barbarian beneath.

"So let us work together for our mutual refinement and improvement, by fearing Pope's lines:

"Truths would you teach or save a sinking land?
All fear, none aid you, and few understand."

FRANZ C. KUHN FOR ATTY. GEN.

Mt. Clemens Man Wins Out In Only Contest of Republican State Convention.

GOVERNOR WARNER IGNORED

No Mention Made of Name or Administration of State's Chief Executive. Convention Short and Harmonious. Expected Fight on Platform Failed to Materialize.

REP. STATE TICKET.

Governor—Chase S. Osborn.
Lieut. Gov.—John Q. Ross.
Supreme Court Justice—John E. Bird.
Sec. of State—F. C. Martindale.
State Treas.—A. E. Sleeper.
Auditor General—C. S. Fuller.
State Land Commissioner—Hartley Russell.
Atty. Gen.—Franz C. Kuhn.
Chairman State Central Committee—W. F. Knox.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 11.—Enthusiasm and oratory were the two marked features of the Republican state convention at the Wayne Gardens, in this city. Only one serious contest developed, that for attorney general, in which five candidates lined up for the honor. Franz Kuhn of Mt. Clemens, who now holds the position by appointment, and Grant Fellows of Hillsdale were the chief contenders, the former winning a flashing victory after a hard fight.

Wayne, Kent, the Thumb and the upper peninsula were Kuhn's strongholds and they turned the trick for him. On the first ballot Kuhn received 594 votes and Fellows 452. This left Kuhn 51 votes short of the required majority, but before the ballot was announced Clare county swung from O'Keefe to Kuhn, and this ended the battle, a dozen others clamoring to change their votes. Kuhn was thinking over the result. A movement was started to delay the proclamation of Supreme Justice Bird until after the attorney generalship on the theory that this might affect the result, but the committee on permanent organization and order of business refused to permit the judiciary to be made a political lever, and Justice Bird was placed first on the list. With the other state officers who were renominated, his selection was made unanimous.

With all the talk of insurgency it became evident in the convention, Wednesday, in calling the convention to order, and by Senator William Alden Smith, who presided as chairman, as well as the platform which was adopted, all were tempered with sense and good judgment. Instead of the tariff being attacked, it was expected in some quarters. It was commended with the recommendation for perfecting the various schedules by the aid of a tariff commission.

A sharp fight was expected over one of the planks in the platform, but when read it was greeted with applause, and there was nothing in it to create any friction.

Some intensity was exerted in the resolution for an expression of Governor Warner's name or administration, but it was accomplished by commending the legislature for the good laws that were passed at the last session and indorsing the candidates nominated by the convention.

The usual committees were appointed. The committee on credentials reported that there were no contests; that all the counties were represented, and that all the delegates whose names were presented were entitled to seats in the convention.

There was practically not a vacant seat in the space reserved for delegates, and the rest of the room in the big auditorium was packed with an ever increasing crowd as the convention progressed.

When Chairman Dickema in his opening address sounded the keynote for a progressive campaign in Michigan the delegates rose in their seats, waved straw hats and handkerchiefs and cheered again and again.

Charles E. Townsend, nominee for the United States senate, was called for and he paid a glowing compliment to the speeches of Congressman Dickema and Senator Smith, saying that they were the things that impressed him most in connection with the convention and that they had practically made the platform for the party in this campaign.

Lieutenant Governor Kelley was called on for a speech, and he pledged Mr. Osborn his loyal support.

Frank C. Kuhn was called before the convention, and he pledged himself, if elected, to give Osborn the best help there is in him to make his administration a clean and efficient one. John Q. Ross, nominee for lieutenant governor, made a similar brief address. The election of W. F. Knox of Sault Ste. Marie as chairman of the new state central committee and the reading of the resolutions wound up the convention.

Altogether the convention was in actual session about four hours, and about half of that time was consumed by speech making.

NEW GUINEA PYGMIES.

The Spear and Bow and Poisoned Arrows Their Chief Weapons.

Our knowledge of the pygmies of New Guinea shows that in habit they are nomadic, nowhere tilling the ground, but depending for their living entirely on their skill in hunting and fishing. Their chief weapon is the bow, their arrows being generally poisoned either with the famous upas or some other similar vegetable poison, in some cases a species of strychnine. They also make use of the spear and an ingenious form of spring gun which is common in numerous other forest tribes. This is formed by setting a flattened bamboo spear attached to a long sapling, which is fastened to a trigger in such a way that it is released by the passerby stumbling against an invisible string stretched across a game track. These weapons are really set for game, and to the foliage they are obvious enough, so their presence is always indicated by certain well known signs, such as a broken off twig placed in a cleft stick. In war these signs are removed, the removal being equivalent to the moving of trees in a tabled channel. The wounds inflicted by these hardened bamboo spears are necessarily serious. The mental qualities of the Negritos are extremely undeveloped, none of them being able to express a higher numerical idea than three, but all observers who have met them unite in saying that they are a merry little people, with great ideas of hospitality when their confidence has been gained and provided they have not been previously ill treated. They are not cannibals and are generally monogamous.—London Times.

LIGHTNING FLASHES.

Many Things Concerning Them That Science Cannot Fathom.

A young girl in charge of two children, sheltering under a tree on Chisledurst common, was struck by lightning and killed—one of those dreadful instances of the sort of person singled out with which lightning seems to select its victim, for, though one child is reported to have been thrown to the ground apparently was injured. There is a well authenticated case which happened some years ago at Chatham, in which three young women were walking across an open space of ground, and the middle one of the three was struck dead, while the others were unscathed. The inquest showed that the young girl who was killed had nails in his boots, whereas the others were wearing leather shoes.

The phenomena of thunderstorms have been the subject of much study in America. But if thunderstorms can be classified, they are still not thoroughly understood. We do not yet know what are the exact conditions which lead to a discharge of electricity in the form of a lightning flash from cloud to cloud or from cloud to earth. We cannot reproduce thunder and lightning in a laboratory. We do not know what is the origin of the electrification manifested in a storm.—London Spectator.

Tickling the Cobbers.

John Barrett was not, in private life, one from which President Cleveland appointed his minister to Siam. The writer important job which confronted the youthful envoy was to press a claim against the Siamese government for $1,500,000. Experienced statesmen warned him against using threats in obtaining the money. "Be cunning, avoid arrogance," they said.

"This is," responded Mr. Barrett, "you favor tickling with a straw to tickling with a broyard."

The statesmen nodded sagely.

When the young minister had finally succeeded in collecting the claim the statesmen shared in astonishment. "How did you accomplish it?"

"By tickling," explained Barrett. "I had to tickle them almost to death, though, before they agreed to pay it."

The Pipts.

It was at a seaside resort, and along the board walk came marching a band of Highland bagpipe in full costume. They were tremendous fellows, but their music, to my untutored ears, was like the squealings of forty stuck pigs. Yet I have never heard anyone go so far as to express a desire to die for one's country, I think the bagpipe music must have been fashioned back in the old days by some demon of perversity out of the scientific arrows, the shrieks of cinnymoes, the weighing of war steeds, and the shrieks of the dying. When I hear it I think of the wheel of torture, the Car of Juggernaut, the pills of the gods, and the inquisitorial rack and screw. It whirls along with a stylomic energy that sets the feet to tramping and the blood to boiling.—Robert M. Gay in Atlantic.

LIGHTNING FLASHES.
Many Things Concerning Them That Science Cannot Fathom.
A young girl in charge of two children, sheltering under a tree on Chisledurst common, was struck by lightning and killed—one of those dreadful instances of the sort of person singled out with which lightning seems to select its victim, for, though one child is reported to have been thrown to the ground apparently was injured. There is a well authenticated case which happened some years ago at Chatham, in which three young women were walking across an open space of ground, and the middle one of the three was struck dead, while the others were unscathed. The inquest showed that the young girl who was killed had nails in his boots, whereas the others were wearing leather shoes.
The phenomena of thunderstorms have been the subject of much study in America. But if thunderstorms can be classified, they are still not thoroughly understood. We do not yet know what are the exact conditions which lead to a discharge of electricity in the form of a lightning flash from cloud to cloud or from cloud to earth. We cannot reproduce thunder and lightning in a laboratory. We do not know what is the origin of the electrification manifested in a storm.—London Spectator.

FARM BUSINESS.

Methods of Farmers' Co-operative League in Germany.

American Agriculturists, Particularly Grangers, May Get a Hint From Their German Brothers in the Matter of Co-operating That May Be of Advantage to Them.

During this inter-half of the nineteenth century a association formed among the individual classes of Germany did much to promote scientific farming, and in more recent years they have extended their influence with the advancement of technology. Three local societies, says a recent consular report of Consul General Thielen at Berlin, have united into branch societies, district and district societies, which form the basis or nucleus of the two great German agricultural organizations of the present time.

On May 15, 1909, the Imperial Agricultural organization, according to its annual report, the last available, embraced sixty-seven circuit unions, made up of 4,853 local societies. The total membership of these societies was then 1,753,000. There were 12,581 living societies, 2,198 co-operative purchasing societies, 1,360 dairy societies and approximately 3,500 societies devoted to various other objects.

A summary of the operations for the final year for which reports were received, showing the business and loan societies of the imperial organization, with a total individual membership of 1,059,348, showed the following:

Total assets	$218,204,209
Total liabilities	23,304,598
Excess of assets over liabilities
Loaned to members	88,202,202
Loaned to members for definite purposes	23,107,363
Deposits of members who are members of the society	18,204,696
Credit balance due to members at end of year	4,231,264
Total receipts and expenses	62,113,153
Net of membership	1,421,488
Total deposits of savings	86,591,361

The General Organization.

The annual report of the General Agricultural organization, made October, 1908, shows it to have a membership of 3,172 local societies. The intermediate statistics of this group are for the year 1907. At that date there were 1,167 local societies, having a membership of 405,350 persons. The following data are given in this report:

Total assets	$156,714,804
Total liabilities	156,437,767
Total loans to members	79,267,027
Outstanding loans to members
In 1907	17,066,451
Credit of institution	4,463,[illegible]
Savings deposits end of 1907	2,[illegible]
Borrowed from other institutions	2,[illegible]
Total receipts and expenses	62,[illegible]
Net gain during year
Total deposits of savings	220,[illegible]

The following statistics represent the business transacted by the savings and loan societies of the German Agricultural organization for the year stated above:

Loans and money paid out for
Year ending 1907	19,[illegible]
Value of property in course of year	28,[illegible]
Number of members	12,[illegible]
Deposits on loans	12,[illegible]
Total receipts	19,[illegible]
Cost of administration	[illegible]

The Co-operative Purchasing society of Germany is numerically and in importance of any group of the imperial organization. There were on May 15, 1909, 2,198 local societies, having an average membership of 150 persons in each society. The report for the year of 1907 gives the latest data of the business done by the members of the imperial organization. At this date there were twenty-seven circuit unions, consisting of 1,144 local societies, with a total membership of 216,674 persons:

Total assets	19,[illegible]
Liabilities	12,[illegible]
Credit balance of members	1,[illegible]
Credit balance of members and society	89,[illegible]
Value of merchandise purchased	23,[illegible]
Total receipts	22,[illegible]

The average purchase per person during the year 1907, is as follows: $25.59; per family, $108.24; per society, $4,690, respectively. The principal articles sold up this account in the following order of value: Seeds, fertilizers, feedstuffs, wood, coal and agricultural implements. The working capital of the co-operative purchasing societies for this period was, during the year 1907, $103,026,004, approximately 62 per cent of the value of purchases made for the members, or for the year 1907, $12,793,969, or about 60 per cent of the value of the purchases made. The surplus shown in the report given amounts to $4.28 per member. It will be observed that the cost of administration is less than the favorable balance accruing to the members and is approximately $3.00 for each member.

CHANCE TAKERS.

A practical railway man, F. P. Roesch by name, and master mechanic of a southwestern railroad by occupation, advances a new reason for the many accidents on American railways. Mr. Roesch says it is summed up in two words—"chance takers." In a speech before the Railway Surgeons' association this western master mechanic declared that the only way to do away with railroad accidents is to eliminate the "chance takers," says Indianapolis star. His position is well taken, and his terse description of a vital reason why railroads of this country kill so many people is rather startling. When one comes down to the only phase of railroad operation that so far has been beyond absolute control, Mr. Roesch says the element of human fallibility stands as the primary cause in 99 out of every 100 cases. This view of the matter, while not questioned, is rather out of the usual in summing up causes for accidents on railways. The American people are the greatest chance takers on earth. They not only take chances in business, in commerce—they take chance—but they take chances in politics, education and in social life, and they rise into their lives daily without the quiver of an eyelash merely to get somewhere quickly. Automobile racing is considered in some quarters because of the great danger; football scores under the same basis; horse thrills racing is risky, as are prize fighting, polo and numerous other sports.

Though some of the Germans are stirred up, nobody else in Europe seems to be unduly excited over Emperor William's affirmation of the divine right of sovereignty. It is regarded just as he said incidentally the same effect before. But it is also remembered that constitutionalism and liberal government have gone right along. Even Russia, where absolutism appeared to have such a hold, has been the creation of a Duma or parliament which affords the people a measure of representation. There are Turkey and Persia, both formerly in the grip of despotism, now enjoying progressive rule and constitutional privileges. And Germany is not the only constitutional government that the emperor would not think of molesting.

Prof. William L. Garner says that Susie smiles on him. Susie is a little chimpanzee, and the one who lives and loved in a cocoanut tree, but the one the professor recently kidnaped from her home in Africa. The savant maintains that Susie's smile proves her kinship with humanity. Before accepting this statement at its face value the public is entitled to know whether the young African wrinkles her nose when she chortles. She is only seven months old and failing this contributory evidence, it is fair to assume that she may simply be suffering from colic and in need of a little castor oil.

A feature of the census returns that surprises many is the population growth of the east as compared to that of the west. Despite the tremendous development of the west and the great number that have sought fortune in that section, the east is showing up gains almost as great, and even greater when considered in proportion to the respective territorial areas. According to present indications the center of population will not cross a great distance eastward and will still be at some point in Indiana.

The young woman in New York who shed tears because she did not make an expected literary success, now wants to live and cry again. She ought to succeed. In these sentimental loving days, she has secured quite an advertisement for her work. Count Ian Hamilton, of the cannon's mouth is a well known operation, but it is sometimes no to own literary success at the pistol's point.

Oakland, Kokomo, Kalamazoo, Oconomowoc and Hackensack have all made remarkable gains in population. Now, who says there is no advertising in paragraphic publicity?

Montana census enumerators are under arrest for padding their returns. And yet we are told that figures will not lie.

DIETZ SURRENDERS AFTER KILLING ONE

Wisconsin Outlaw Holds Cabin Against Force of Officers Until Storm of Bullets Forces Him to Send Out Daughter with White Flag---Cabin Shot Full of Holes---Weakens as Wife Collapses.

Winter, Wis.—John H. Dietz, wounded and weakened from loss of blood, but accordingly handcuffed nevertheless to a special deputy sheriff nearly twice his size, was brought to Winter Saturday night under armed guard.

It was a funeral procession as well as a march of triumph that wended its way slowly through the eight miles of dense woods between this village and the little district homestead from which the outlaw of Cameron dam and his family were dragged after six hours of fierce fighting.

Last in the line of march four stalwart deputies bore aloft the shorted form of Oscar Hargy, their former comrade, who was found shot dead on the lift back of the Dietz cabin when the battle was over. Stumbling along beside the body was the Chief Colleen, whose right ear was shot off in the fight. William Rankin, a deputy, also was shot in the ear.

Mrs. Dietz Expects the Stork.

Although Dietz surrendered at 3:25 o'clock in the afternoon his captors did not reach here with him until a late hour at night. The slow progress was due in part to the delay occasioned in starting from the homestead with the entire family, and to greater part to the fact that Mrs. Dietz, expecting a visit from the stork in the near future, was so wrought up that fast travel was impossible for her.

In fact, it was his wife's delicate condition and partial collapse during the battle that forced Dietz to send his younger daughter into the clearing in front of the cabin with a flag of surrender.

A number of the men who remained in Winter while the fighting was going on made wild threats of lynching Dietz. Although little fear was felt that they would attempt to molest Sheriff Madden's prisoner, the saloons were ordered closed, and precautions were taken to check any disorder the minute it started.

Sheriff Madden took John and Leslie Dietz to Hayward, the county seat, in an auto soon after the party reached Winter.

Buildings Are Riddled.

Dietz did not surrender until his cabin and every other building in his clearing had been riddled with bullets. For six hours and five minutes every volley fired by the attacking forces was replied to vigorously from the loopholed walls of the cabin, and Mrs. Dietz is sure that not a bullet fired by her husband was wasted. Count the bullet holes in the cabin if you care to, she says, but don't count those made by her husband.

When the officers had been convinced that the appearance of Helen Dietz in the clearing with a white flag was not a ruse they went to the cabin and beheld a remarkable sight.

Almost every inch of the floor was covered with flattened, twisted bits of lead that had been bullets until they tore through the cabin walls, knocking splinters from the heavy beams and falling harmlessly to the floor.

Mrs. Dietz Sobs at Surrender.

Sobbing on a chair in one corner of the room, with an apron thrown over her head, was Mrs. Dietz, while Leslie sat on a chair across from her, leaning savagely but making no attempt to resist the officers' entrance. The youngest son, John, jr., was cuddled up from the cellar, where he had been hidden from the bullets.

"I don't know how I ever lived through it," sobbed Mrs. Dietz. "It was terrible. I sat through it all in a corner of the sitting room with Helen, and we did not move during it all. I did not fire a shot, nor did the children. If I hadn't argued and argued with John we all would have been dead before tomorrow morning."

Dietz himself was too weak he could not stand. He had been shot in the head, but had kept on shooting his repeating rifle and automatic pistols until the threatened collapse of his wife brought him to a realization that he was at best a losing fight.

Ale Is Cabin Full of Smoke.

More than 1,000 shots had been fired into the house by the 100 picked sharpshooters who made up Sheriff Madden's posse. There is no telling how many times Dietz had replied, but the floor of the cabin was littered with empty rifle and automatic shells.

The first shot in the battle was fired at 9:45 o'clock Saturday morning. At that time Leslie Dietz was out in the clearing after the cows. He was about an eighth of a mile from the cabin and each step was bringing him closer to a horseshoe shaped breastwork of stones built by the other Dietz during his trouble with the lumber companies some years ago.

In this breastwork, which Dietz calls his "stronghold," Deputy Jack Britten was concealed, having crawled to it before daybreak from the woods a hundred yards or so in the rear. In these woods, along the edge of the clearing, a score or more deputies covered Britten's position.

At the time Leslie Dietz was out after the cows the other members of the family were busy at their usual morning tasks. Dietz and his wife were in the cabin when the firing started, but their daughter, Helen, was starting to help Leslie round up the cows.

As Helen approached her brother Deputy Britten called upon the latter to surrender. Leslie made no reply, but turned toward the house and ran as fast as he could. Britten fired at him, and then four other deputies, the Hanks brothers, Con. Holien and J. T. Campbell jumped up a hundred yards in the rear and also fired.

Leslie continued to run, unhit by any of the bullets, while Helen sought refuge in the barn.

When Leslie reached the shelter of the barn he turned and fired three shots from his revolver at Britten, without effect. He then made his way to the house safely.

After that there was no cessation in the firing on either side.

History of Dietz Battle.

John F. Dietz came into the limelight years ago when he defended Cameron dam on Thornapple river against one of the largest companies in the state. He claimed the dam was on his property and tied up several winters' cuts of logs, valued at thousands of dollars, refusing to allow them to pass the dam without paying toll.

He was fought in the courts by the lumber company, but defied the order of judges and held off at the point of a gun all officers who attempted to serve papers upon him.

Dietz won. The lumber company paid him a large sum and he allowed the logs to go through.

The sheriff deputized men from all over the state to make the arrest of Dietz, and several were shot in fights in one engagement Dietz's son was killed in the battle, he claims.

Make Self-Defense Claim.

The latest controversy between Dietz and the authorities of sawyer county dates from September 6, when Dietz shot and seriously wounded Jerry Horrel in Winter, Wis., in a wrangle, it is said, over rent due on a school house.

Horrel had quarreled with C. G. O'Hara, president of the Winter school board. It is said, and Horrel, taking O'Hara's part, struck Dietz. Dietz then shot and has since claimed it was in self-defense.

Since the shooting Dietz has defied the sheriff to serve a warrant on him. In all there were eight indictments against Dietz, and nearly as many against his son Leslie. Many times deputy sheriffs have met Dietz and talked with him, but none dared serve the papers they had in their pockets.

Feared for Wife and Babes.

With Palmer Flom and Deputy Sheriff Thorbahn, when they went into the cabin to arrest Dietz, were a number of newspaper men.

Dietz submitted to arrest quietly, saying: "I could not hold out any longer with myself and Leslie crippled. The bullets came so fast I looked like the wife and babies would see it, too."

Dietz' left hand was in a sling and he was smiling and spoke cheerfully to the newspaper men. He posed for several pictures with the sheriff, in one of which he was shaking hands with the official.

"Why didn't you give in when asked of a fair trial by the attorney general?" a reporter asked.

"They kept on changing their plans," he replied, "and I did not know what I could depend upon. Besides, we thought we could have lasted it out, and we could have lost if the little baby we expect."

Even the wheat crop turns out to be only 45,000,000 bushels behind the big field of 1909 and has been exceeded but four times in the nation's history.

COURT HAS A BIG DOCKET

SUPREME TRIBUNAL ENTERS UPON IMPORTANT TERM.

Tobacco Trust, Standard Oil Corporation Fine and Other Cases of Great Significance.

Washington. — Owing to the illness and deaths of the members of the United States supreme court during the past two years that august body, when it reassembled Monday, found the docket piled high with important cases which prenged a busy and prolonged session.

Although the tobacco trust, Standard Oil, railroad and the corporation tax cases are regarded as the most important ones now before the supreme bench, there are a number of other cases of considerable national significance. One of the latter is the original act of the state of Virginia against its next-door neighbor, West Virginia, in which several million dollars are involved as a result of the division of Virginia in its original state. The suit consists of an attempt to compel West Virginia to shoulder part of the debt that existed in Virginia at the time of the division.

There are two passage cases appealed by the state of Florida; the appeal of a number of railroads in the western territory in the suit brought by them against the railroad commission of Missouri; three criminal cases brought by the United States on account of alleged violations of the pure foods and drug act; the appeal of the United States from the United States circuit court for eastern Missouri in

WHY NEW ORLEANS

CITY IS LOGICAL POINT FOR WORLD'S PANAMA EXPOSITION.

Its Geographical Position and Many Other Considerations Mark It as Most Suitable Spot for Dedication of Great Work.

Public sentiment has decided that the exposition of the Panama Canal in 1915 shall be celebrated with a great International Exposition in which all the nations of the world shall may participate; and the question of where this Exposition is to be held will be settled by Congress at its approaching session.

New Orleans and San Francisco are contending for the honor of holding this Exposition, and both cities have guaranteed immense sums of money as an evidence of their ability to finance so great an enterprise.

An Exposition worthy of the term "World's Fair," such as New Orleans proposes to hold, will be a great economic movement. Its benefits are such, however, will depend entirely upon the percentage of our population who can secure its educational advantages, this in turn, depends upon its location, as the time is travelling to and from the Exposition, and the cost in railroad and Pullman fares, are the most important factors. Considering these matters, New Orleans' claims to being the "Logical place" for this Panama Exposition, seem to be fully substantiated by the following facts:—

New Orleans is 500 miles from the center of population in the United States. San Francisco is 2,500 miles distant therefrom.

Within a radius of 500 miles from New Orleans there are 17,500,000 people. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 2,000,000.

Within a radius of 1,000 miles from New Orleans, there are 30,000,000 people. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 6,000,000.

At an average of 900 miles from New Orleans, there are 70 of the principal cities with a combined population of 19,000,000. Averaging 900 miles from San Francisco there are only 8 large cities, with a combined population of 1,500,000. The average distance of all these cities to New Orleans is 1,000 miles,—to San Francisco 2,407 miles.

Over 78 per cent. of the people of the United States could go to an Exposition there at an average expense for railroad fare of $12.50, as against an average of $37.50 to the Pacific coast, and for several millions of our people, the Pullman fare and Dining Car expense alone, which is the cost of the Pullman, would amount to more than all their transportation expenses for a trip to New Orleans.

Climate is an important public question to be settled by Congress at the session which convenes in December. Many of our readers will wish to visit the World's Panama Exposition, and held in New Orleans a great many more could spare the time and money for the trip that could go to San Francisco. There are over 1,000 miles farther to go for the two senators from this State and the congressman from this district, representing them to support New Orleans in the contest.

Meeting of School Officers

About 100 of the school officers of the county responded to the call of the Department and assembled at the Court house in Charlevoix on last Wednesday.

Supt. Wright was scheduled for this meeting but was forced to change places with Deputy Keeler, Mr. Wright going to Petoskey in order that he might reach his engagement in the Upper Peninsula on the following day.

The meeting was called to order at 10:00 a. m. and from that time until 5:00 p. m. there was a busy time in the court house.

The officers were not backward about asking questions and Mr. Keeler showed himself to be well up in the matter of school law.

The officers proved themselves to be pretty well informed so far as the general and older laws of the state are concerned and turned their attention to a better understanding of the workings of some of the latest laws.

Their questions were well selected and brought out many interesting points.

The matter of the paying of tuition to high schools was thoroughly discussed.

An eighth grade diploma from the state examination line not been required this year in order that a student may have his tuition paid but it was the intention of the law that he should have one and by another year the diploma will be required.

Mr. Keeler says that unless the parents of the pupil have made the required application for tuition the board cannot legally pay the tuition and that if the application is made they cannot refuse to pay it.

Tuition is paid by the district board to the school board of the high school and not to the pupil or his parents.

If the parents of the pupil whose tuition is to be paid are paying a school tax in the district where the high school is located the amount of school tax paid in said district will be deducted from the amount of tuition to be paid by rural district.

In other words the district is simply taking the place of the parent in the matter of tuition.

If the direction of Mr. Keeler is followed and a technical application of the law is made it will be necessary for a number of districts in the county shall elect new officers. The reason for this is that a member of the town board cannot legally be a member of the school board and Mr. Keeler tells us that the last office accepted vacates the first one accepted.

A legal voter is a person who is 21 years old, a citizen of the district in which he offers to vote and who owns in his own right or by contract some property or is the parent or guardian of children of school age.

A young man who is 21 and native born cannot legally vote at a school meeting unless he can qualify in other respects.

The truancy law came in for its share of the discussion but this law is now pretty generally understood and school officers in general are helping to make it operative.

Mr. Keeler explained to the officers that the department had authority and in some instances had ordered investigations regarding the safe keeping of school funds and that the one who was doing the investigating had authority to count the money of the district.

In the matter of a school library a district may vote to establish one even if they do not vote money for it and the fact that they have voted to establish one will entitle them to a share in the penal fines of the county.

Surely every district in the county will now vote to establish a library.

Officers were urged to look carefully into the sanitary conditions and to the heating and lighting of buildings.

A matter of ten to twenty dollars judiciously expended in the average school house will make the school life of the pupils very much more enjoyable and beneficial as well.

Many other interesting things were discussed and Mr. Keeler was busy all the time and we are sure that the officers present enjoyed the day and felt that the meeting was a valuable one.

AUCTION SALE of horses. About 40 head will be sold at O'Leary's barn in Charlevoix October 28. Also buggies, harness and sleighs.

Democrats and Primary "Reform"

One plank in the Democratic state platform pledges that party to interest itself in the perfection of the primary nominating law. This same plank appeared in the Democratic platform two years ago and four years ago, but interest in the primary election law on the part of the Democrats of Michigan ended there. In not more than two or three counties in the entire state have the Democrats indicated the slightest regard for the primary election law. Although through recent weeks the Democrats of Michigan have insisted that they would elect state candidates and congressional candidates in Michigan this year, no attention whatever has been given to the responsibility which such an expectation should create. In most cases when Democrats have attended primary elections at all they have voted for Republican candidates in order to embarrass their political opponents and have permitted their own nominations to go by default. In hardly one county in the entire state was even an invitation extended by Democrats to Democrats to attend the primary, or any organized effort made by Democrats to secure attendance at the primary election. This far in the history of the primary nominating law in Michigan the only attention it has received from Democrats has been when they sought to use it to confuse and disturb Republican movements. Such a record, so far as the relation of of the Democratic party to Michigan's primary law is concerned, will probably not create any desire on the part of the people to entrust primary election changes or primary election details to Democratic hands for any purpose.

The Foot Ball Game

The Charlevoix High School football team is still an undefeated eleven by playing the heavy Boyne City team to a 0 to 0 score. Both teams tried their utmost to carry away the game but at the end of all their efforts, they had to be content with an even break. Everybody however will agree that the team had a little the best of their opponents for twice if Fate Fortune had favored them the game would have been theirs while Boyne City never had a chance to score. Powers drop kick came within a foot of going between the posts and Hull's pass would have brought them within five yards of the goal had it been thrown legal.

The evening before a great deal enthusiasm was aroused by a large mass meeting held in the high school room. The boys have no game the coming Saturday but a week hence Harbor Springs plays the eleven on the local gridiron.

County Normal Notes.

Deputy Superintendent, F. L. Keeler, visited the county normal Wednesday morning, October 12 and gave an interesting talk on some practical problems for country schools, which will prove very valuable to the county normal students when they are teaching next year.

Hetta Carr is appointed gardener, Hattie Ion and Florence McKee editors, and Jennie Hunderman and Edith Cady as housekeepers.

Lila Shapton taught the seventh and eighth grades Monday in the absence of Miss Kouth.

The normal class attended the meeting of the school officers at the court house Wednesday of last week and were greatly interested in the discussion of the school law.

The supervisors of Charlevoix county visited the normal class last week to inspect the work. Mr. Wagner, chairman of the board, Mr. Miller, chairman of committee, Mr. Correll, member of committee, Mr. Harnett, Mr. Zellner, and Mr. Sedlbauer gave interesting talks after which they visited the training room. All expressed a general satisfaction with the work.

Teachers' Examination

The regular examination for October will be held in the high school building in East Jordan on Thursday and Friday, October 20, 21, 1910, beginning at 8:30 a. m.

The questions in reading will be taken from "Reading in the Public Schools" one of the Reading Circle Books.

Only second and third grade certificates will be issued from this examination.

"Miller-Made" Means Economy

JUST What Keeps You From Wearing "Miller-Made" Clothes?

The expense? It's really not worth while considering, because "Miller-Made" Clothes are priced so reasonably that the word expense should not be used in connection with them. They are exceedingly smart, expressively good and exceptionally well made, but they are positively not exorbitant in price.

If you have $15 to spend for a Suit or Overcoat we'll show you the best garment for that price in America. If you have twenty-five dollars to spend we'll show you the best for that price. We know right now that "Miller-Made" Clothes contain the best value to be obtained. If you'll investigate to-day, you'll know to-morrow that such sweeping statements are justified.

Northern Michigan

The Grand Traverse Board of Supervisors at its meeting lately voted an appropriation of $600,00 for the work of the Western Michigan Development Bureau. This is the second county in Western Michigan territory to make the appropriation. The first county was Leelanau, the home county of the president of the bureau, Mr. D. H. Day.

Judge Mayne in Antrim circuit court Tuesday sentenced Barbara Hirth Rudolph Ruff to pay a fine of $100 and $25 costs, and Rudolph Ruff to pay a fine of $200 and $25 costs, each for violation of the local option law. The former sold wine at her farm house to logs and has for years, it is alleged, while Ruff offended with hard cider which he made at his cider mill at Elk Rapids, Mich.

Traverse City Eagle: Dr. H. Day, president of the Western Michigan Development bureau, arrived in the city in his automobile from Leland, and reported that the superintendent of Leelanau county voted yesterday for the regular appropriation for the continuation of the work of the bureau in that county. This makes Leelanau the first of twenty counties in the bureau to vote an appropriation this year.

Boyne City: The petitions asking for resubmission of the local option question will not be submitted to the board of supervisors until the January meeting. This inquiry was started Monday by one of the "wets" leaders who is in position to know just exactly what will be done. He said that there are plenty of names on the petition now but did not state why they were not to be presented at the October session of the board. The law requires a petition containing names of one third as many voters as took part in the last general election. As 3683 voted in 1908 it is necessary to get the names of 1227 petitioners. It is claimed that 600 names have been secured in Boyne City alone.

Happenings Among Ourselves

Will somebody tells us what under the sun has become of bill mears?

The steamer Beaver drops back to tri-weekly Island trips November first.

Egbert Carpenter left Tuesday for his winter home at Port Orange, Fla.

The council room and city clerk's office are now in the basement of the library.

Lou Comfort is still at work at Beaver Head installing a steam fog signal plant.

The board of supervisors designated the SENTINEL the official paper of the county for the ensuing year.

Wilbur J. Pugh returned the first of the week from a business trip to Grand Rapids, Lansing and Muskegon.

Rev. H. A. Putnam writes us from Chelsea, Mass., that he will reach Charlevoix next Monday, the 31st.

Perch fishing along the docks is the order of the day, and some very fine catches are made. The fish are of good size and fine quality.

The Sentinel job department has turned out 25,000 impressions of work the past week, and it is work that will pass inspection anywhere. Call in and see some of it.

Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M., will celebrate its 50th anniversary the coming winter. There are but two of its charter members living—I. S. Webster and W. A. Smith.

The girls of Christ church choir and their friends under direction of Agnes M. Jarvis, are working on a play to be produced soon, to assist in the purchase of a new organ for the church.

E. C. Waller, a leading member of the Chicago Club of Charlevoix, and the owner of the splendid Waller farm just west of town, is in the city, in connection with building improvements being made at the farm.

The latest information from Asheville, N. C., is that Mrs. Dr. Thelen is improving in health. The Doctor is expected to return here next week, but it is uncertain whether or not Mrs. Thelen will return with him.

The new residence of Harry Nicholls, on Dixon avenue, is now receiving the heating plant, and work on the interior is progressing. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls hope to occupy it in the early winter. The home, when fully completed, will be one of the finest in Charlevoix, and none is more richly deserved.

Capt. Henderson, inspector U. S. life saving service, was here last Friday and inspected the local station. To the writer he expressed himself as highly pleased with station condition, discipline and general efficiency of Captain and crew. The improvements at the station are about completed, and Captain Pugh has plans for improvements of the grounds that will be a credit to the city and the service.

It was the intention of the council to have had the Dixon avenue sewer completed this fall, but unexpected delay in completing the plans and specifications have made it necessary to defer the work until spring. The work will be commenced as soon as the frost leaves the ground and completed before the next season opens. Paving will probably follow closely on the heels of the sewer, but that work may be deferred until the close of the resort season. Both, however, will be completed this coming year.

The Saturday Foot Ball Game.

The Charlevoix High School foot ball team took another of their worthy opponents into camp, last Saturday by defeating the Harbor Springs ineligibles by a score of 25 to 0. Considering the fact that the home team was greatly handicapped by the absence of Wallace, the team deserves some credit for the victory. However, in view of the fact that the visiting team was composed mostly of town players who were inexperienced in the game and were arrayed against only with the old style foot ball, we do not claim as much credit as any of the previous games.

It was at first understood that two of our star players Wallace and "Hully" were out of the game for the remainder of the season, on account of broken collar-bones. Since it was found that their injuries were not so serious and both will be able to get into the game in a couple weeks.

There is no game scheduled as yet for the coming Saturday, but Nov. 5th, the East Jordan warriors invade our camp determined to carry back home a victory. Don't forget to come out and root for the team.

The Republican County Ticket.

The republicans of Charlevoix county are not on the defensive in this campaign because the record of the party requires no defense.

A ticket has been nominated that appeals to the common business sense of the voters. It embraces men of unquestioned ability and integrity. It represents efficiency and official gratitude.

We cannot believe that the people will be led away by any misconceived notions that are involved in the title of the opposition ticket.

A Needed Marine Utility.

There is an excellent opening in Charlevoix for a marine lifting crane, on or portable dry-dock, for ship repairing. Charlevoix harbor is already a marine center, and every winter boats are brought here to lay up, and many of the smaller class of craft are hauled out on old-fashioned ways for repairs.

We have the ship-yards and the ship carpenters, but our facilities for enlargement of this industry are limited for want of adequate docking appliances. There is no doubt of a good profit in such investment of this character, and no better work could not be done by the board of commerce this winter than to thoroughly canvass the proposition.

We are given to understand that it is the purpose of the lighthouse department to moor a number of the strong lightships at the busy station here, and the docks are now being repaired with this object in view. This emphasizes the demand. Charlevoix is the logical point for an enterprise of this kind, and the matter should be pushed.

A Deserving Candidate.

Independent of and aside from the faithful and efficient services that D. S. Payton has given the county as county clerk the past twenty-three months, the people of the county, irrespective of party, are especially under obligations to him for the energetic and effective work he has done as the Charlevoix county director for the West Michigan Development Bureau.

In this work he has in a greater degree than any other that we have in mind contributed to the forward movement that has been given the agricultural and pomological interests of the county.

The work in which every citizen is vitally interested, and we know that the time has not yet come when valuable services to the public will not be recognized and rewarded.

The record of Mr. Payton as clerk is without a flaw.

STORY BUT HALF TOLD

"The Best Resort Town in Michigan," But Also on the Road to Industrial Importance

At the recent business men's banquet, in speaking of the progress and prosperity of the three cities of Charlevoix county, a speaker characterized Charlevoix as "the best resort town in Michigan." And so it is, and so it will remain through unmuddered generations. The natural attractions of Charlevoix are assets that will not only be permanent, but will increase in beauty as the years pass.

But more than this can be said. Charlevoix is on the threshold of an era of industrial progress that will be equally permanent by reason of the character of the enterprises—industries that draw their substance and stability from inexhaustible sources. For Charlevoix, lumbering will come be but a memory, but the manufacture of building accessories will continue in an increased degree. The future of fishing industry is more or less of a problem, but it is now to be reckoned with among the chief activities of the section, and there are no discouraging indications as to the future.

The best sugar industry means very much more to Charlevoix than appears on the surface because it embraces a service from the most manufacturing of enterprises, being intimately allied with agricultural activity. But it is localized as a benefit to Charlevoix in being a power for the development of outlying territory. It is a market-builder and a market sustainer. Its stability rests in the undiminishing source of supply—the farm.

The cement factory, now in course of construction, is another industry the life of which will have no limitations, because its source of supply is inexhaustible, and the demand for its product equally as lasting. We may therefore draw the conclusion that all these industries, and others naturally allied with them, will be lasting winners long years after the last log is cut and the last cargo of lumber passes into Lake Michigan.

REINSTATED

Record Meeting of the S. S. S.—Stormy Session, But Winter Prospects Good.

The regular stated meeting of the Shiftless Shipmasters' Society was held at headquarters last Friday evening, over which the surprisingly prominent, Capt. Pete Campbell, was permitted to preside, against the protest of Capt. Billy Finneran and Capt. Pete McCafferty.

The founder was present in an appeal to the Society against the arbitrary action of the packed special meeting which struck his name from the roll of membership. A review of the benevolent and humanitarian work of the founder, among that degenerate and heartless class of mariners who hold owners' licenses, and the fact that the recent outrage was perpetrated by Lake Michigan skippers who wear gold lace, caused the low-tonnage boys to rally to a man and they soon made under the secrets of no make the second motion carried below. This was only accomplished after a most strenuous time with the presiding officer, who tried, inefficiently, to work the parliamentary tricks that he learned on the city council.

Then the old row broke out again between Campbell and Finneran, over a report circulated by the former that Finneran was trying to supplant Capt. Chas. Osborn as commodore of the steamer Cummings, 62 tons gross and 42 tons net, and of which steamer he was temporarily in command last week. Certain other derogatory remarks were threatened to break up the meeting in a riot, but here the beneficent influence of the founder was brought into play and harmony was restored.

It is but a matter of fairness to state that the story said to have been fabricated and circulated by Capt. Pete Campbell that Capt. Billy Finneran was guilty of "knocking down" fares on the steamer Cummings last week, is entirely without foundation in fact. This matter will be referred to the grievance committee at the next meeting of the Society.

Mr. Geo. D. Webb, of Chicago, who has done much to encourage the founder in his missionary efforts accompanied by whose names are registered in the Charlevoix entertainment, was proposed by the founder for honorary membership. The proposition brought out a vigorous protest from Capt. Billy, who has carried Webb back and forth for several seasons, on the grounds that certain letters written by the aforesaid Webb were lacking in respectful reference to the man on the bridge. Webb, however, was elected, subject to a written apology and the payment of one year's dues, the same to be remitted by the founder if handed through the bank, and payable only on the endorsement of the secretary, Capt. Geo. Weaver.

The old matter of vest was brought up and repatriated, also a bill for fuel and lights which Capt. William had the cheek to present. A bill for tobacco and peanuts, amounting to $1.25 was passed, but as the funds of the Society were low the payment was deferred until dues are collected.

No Campaign Assessments.

No campaign contributions from minor state employes will be accepted by the republican state central committee. The state board of auditors announced some time ago that $25 old assessment on state employes would not be followed this year, but the state central committee, refusing to adhere to the order of Chas S. Osborn, the nominee for governor, has declined to accept voluntary contributions and several checks have been returned to the donors.

In refusing to accept financial aid from state employes Mr. Osborn is consistent, as when he was a candidate for governor 10 years ago while railroad commissioner he would not allow the employes of his department to contribute to his campaign fund.

Mr. Osborn stated his position to the state central committee as follows:

"If a man is worth the salary the state is paying him, he is entitled to every cent and should not be compelled to give up a part of it to hold his job. If he isn't earning the salary he shouldn't be allowed to hold the job at any price."

Board Shut Out Wet Petition.

The board of supervisors adjourned sine die Saturday afternoon, after a two weeks' session.

As the law provides that local option petitions may be acted upon at a regular meeting, this shuts out the wets for the January meeting, as that will be a special meeting.

This means that the wets cannot bring the proposition to a popular vote before the spring election of 1912.

UNCLE SAM'S NEWEST SUBMARINE

UNCLE SAM'S newest and most interesting submarine has been the Salmon, it is an object of international interest just now and is hailed all both sides of the Atlantic as the most remarkable submarine boat in the world. This fame is due to the Salmon's recent record-breaking cruise from the Atlantic coast to Bermuda and return—a distance various of such as has had no parallel in the history of underwater craft. The cruise to Bermuda was not only the first cruise by a submarine to a foreign port or out of sight of land, but it was the longest virtually continuous run ever attempted by such a craft. The total distance covered aggregated nearly 1,700 miles and, as it happened, the little vessel encountered very rough weather during a considerable part of the run.

Not only did this nautical exploit establish a new record for success in the American navy, but it also passed all foreign achievements. The best performances previously recorded by American vessels of this type was found in the run of the French submarine Vipere from Cape Lookout to Annapolis, Md., a distance of about 463 knots, and the cruise of a flotilla of submarines from Brest to Newport, a distance of 355 knots. Among the foreign performances of such vessels there stands out the record of English submarines of about the same size as the Salmon, which made the constitutional run from Dover to Dunkirk, a distance of 312 miles, and the famous performance of the French submarine Pluvie, which on one occasion made a cruise of 1,200 miles. However, this French achievement is overshadowed so far the Salmon's cruise because not only was the distance of the latter much greater, but it was an open sea performance, whereas the Pluvie, cruised along the coast, and, finally, the French vessel is much larger than the new American record breaker, the Pluvie being of 550 tons displacement, whereas the Salmon is of but 200 tons displacement.

The Salmon, alike to most of the submarines which have lately been added to the United States navy, is a development of the original Holland type of submarines which the Lake Torpedo Boat Company built for the navy. The Salmon is 152 feet in length by 14 feet beam and is a relatively low boat, being driven on the surface by two gasoline engines of 300 horsepower each and provided with submerged by electrical power supplied from storage batteries.

By way of fulfilling her mission of destroyer the little vessel has four torpedo tubes outlaged to fire the latest type of torpedo—that is, a torpedo 17 feet in length and 21 inches in diameter, having a range of 4,000 yards and carrying an explosive charge of 200 pounds of guncotton. On her cruise to Bermuda the Salmon carried a crew of 21 men, but it was demonstrated on this cruise that under normal service conditions such a submarine can be operated, in so far as technique is concerned, by the men—two on the bridge and three in the engine room.

The Salmon is capable of a speed of 14 knots per hour when running awash or on the surface of the water and 11 knots per hour when running wholly submerged. Only three minutes is required to change from surface running to use the engines to submerged running by electrical power. The vessel has, on trial, dived to a depth of more than 200 feet without any sign of stress or leakage being manifest anywhere on her steel, cigar-shaped hull. A unique feature of the engine room of an up-to-date submarine such as the Salmon, is a double periscope, whereby, when the vessel is wholly submerged the officers on board can observe all that is going on of the surface of the water. Electrical storage is provided for cooking the meals of those on board, and there is a reserve supply of 4,000 cubic feet of air, contained in 28 tanks, so that if need be the vessel could be "sealed up" and remain under the surface of the water for one or two days and nights without those on board having any communication with the outside world or coming to the surface for fresh air. In the Salmon's lengthy cruise there were on board, in addition to the officers of the American navy, Capt. Arturo Cuevas of the Chilean navy, who went for the purpose of reporting to his government on the behavior of the vessel.

When Sleep Will Not Come

Five absolutely sleepless nights are enough to cause death, and two days more would be a serious hallucination, loss of memory, and all kinds of other troubles. The best advice for the treatment of insomnia, perhaps, was that of the Irishman, who said: "Do not go to sleep and only one—I'll do the rest." Narcotics are, generally speaking, equally bad. To earn actual sleep, in fact, there is only one way, and that is to follow Fatrow's system of Absolute Physical Relaxation.

First, lie in the most comfortable position possible, and this is generally on the right side with the knees slightly flexed. Then, with the lips closed, but not compressed, drop the lower jaw and relax the tongue, gently shut the eyes, and draw the belchfetter over the exposed left ear. This shuts out light and sound, and relaxes some muscles which are usually forgotten.

Now proceed to relax more muscles, beginning at the feet, legs, thighs, and arms, imagining each in turn a heavy weight bearing down upon the bed; and, lastly, imagine that the eyes are loaden far away to the distant horizon. The attention is taken up with the relaxing process that thinking soon ceases, and the imagination, instead of running riot at its wonted will, is set to play on the monotonous, soothing, and soon falls asleep.

At the same time it should not be forgotten that the bedroom should be flooded with pure air; and an important point to remember is that a higher temperature than 55 degrees Fahrenheit increases the activity of the heart, and turns sleep away; a temperature too low congests the heart, causing also to wakefulness. It is best to sleep on the right side, and in the mornin', to rest on the left side.

FREE WOOL AGAIN?

IS THAT WHAT FARMERS OF THE COUNTRY WANT?

Short Looking Over of Conditions That Prevailed When the Democrats Were in Power Will Just Now Be Profitable.

The last time the Democrats were in power in the United States they started out their Free Trade tinkered and put wool on the free list. The sheep industry of America was destroyed, wool sold for ten cents a pound and farmers took what they could get for their sheep. A dollar a head was the top price. And yet no man, woman or child got a yard of woolen cloth or a suit of woolen clothes a penny cheaper. The effect of free wool was destruction, that's all. The farmers of Missouri, and every other sheep-raising state, lost millions of dollars and nobody received any benefit. One of the Democrats who helped bring about that disaster of fifteen years of misery, Champ Clark, of Missouri, the greatest leader of his party, and he knew better than he knew his name, is from the awful lesson of free wool in the 70s of last May, while he was making a speech in the House of Representatives against the protection policy of Protection and announcing to the country what he and his party would do if it gets entrusted with power, Mr. Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, interrupted him as follows:

"Then, if I understand the gentleman, he is in favor of taxing any duty on wool or its products."

Mr. Clark replied:

"I think it would be a blessing to the American people if it was all wiped out of the statute books."

When he made that remark his Democratic colleagues in the House of Representatives, who knew that will write a tariff law if given the chance, so on so, groaned it with great applause.

What do the farmers think of it? In the years from 1891 to 1895 the wool had free, wool, there was no applause for the Democrats, and they knew it. There was only disgust and suffering.

He is a Republican.

Congressman Charles N. Fowler, of New Jersey, father of a Democratic lost week but he isn't sulking. He has issued a statement in which he says that the country prosperous in his people's action. "I am a Republican," he says, "indeed, I allow no man to go before me in loyal devotion to the principles and principles of the Republican party; and therefore I shall continue to fight for those principles in the future as in the past within the ranks of the Republican party."

That's the way to talk. The question now is as Democrats, will they do the same? Or shall have in the national house of representatives a Republican to a democratic majority. Democrats are greater than you. To uphold the principles of the Republican party must subordinate individual opinions and work together. That was why we made success. The only alternative is a Democratic victory.

Unintelligent Pretentionism.

In 1871 there were 25,000,000 sheep in Germany; now there are only 7,000,000. The unintelligent application of the principle of protection is responsible for the enormous decrease. Prices wool less made it impossible to continue the sorts of fabrics in demand, the selectible schedule law did not protect the wool industry, they were doing the right thing when they discontinued the industry. It is an open question whether the advantage gained by the manufacturers by the protection, had offset by the higher price of meat in Germany. The loss of sheep, reducing 25,000,000, produced an enormous quantity of meat. Germany should be held responsible for at least a part of the high price of meat.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Protection and High Prices.

The good prices received for farm products in the United States are cited as an argument in favor of free trade in Canada. Is this logical? In the United States had no protection to industry it is quite improbable that great manufacturing industries which the farm products are bought would have been created. The prices, therefore, would not be good. Again, if there were no protection to agriculture in the United States the demand for farm products might be larger and from abroad. We certainly could increase the supply. In that case the prices would go down if the price paid for produce by our neighbors points in any direction. It is protection and not free trade.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Encouraging to Foreigners.

The London correspondent of the New York Evening Post, writing under date of September 17, says: "The Republican England is jubilant at the victory of the Democrats in Maine yesterday. It means the downfall of protection in America."

The downfall of protection in America would be a great boon to British manufacturers and British traders. Free access to the greatest of markets would be worth millions of dollars to European producers.

If predictions could win elections Congressman Dick would be sure to soon have every office in the country occupied by a Democrat.

The blind senator from Oklahoma is a typical one. He can see plenty of his sheep his mouth not first and does his thinkin' somewhere else.—Spring field (Mo.) Republican

OBJECT LESSON FOR AMERICA

Wail From Free Trade England Should Be of Interest to the Voter Just Now.

Bread in London is up one cent a loaf (of four pounds). New price 13 cents a loaf is, ordinary, 13 cents for best quality, by agreement of the London Master Bakers' Protective society. In England the bakers' business is in a lamentable condition, because the United Kingdom skilled bakers are starving.—New York Press.

And this in free trade England, where for many years "the cheap loaf" has been the Manchester free trade cry. There is no tariff there to put up the price of bread. It would have been better if there had been a tariff on farm products, for then British agriculture would have thrived instead of almost disappearing as a productive industry, leaving the United Kingdom almost breadless, except for wheat and coal exports of the old type. As the case stands, bread is high; the "cheap loaf" is no longer cheap; dividend is a point where British bakers are starving, robbed by free trade of their employment and wages, going without bread. Has the tariff done this? Hardly, since there is no tariff in Great Britain on wheat or flour. No; it is not the tariff, but the lack of it, that has brought all this starvation and misery.

How Will You Vote?

The Republican candidate for congress in this district believes in protection and return to Democratic congress will result to the almost complete destruction of the policy of protection and return to Democratic control, and, whether yes, the tariff for revenue system.

The Democratic candidate for congress in this district does not believe in protection, but is free trade, or, were you to vote for his election system. Every voter knows that in congress he would count one in a majority against the policy of Republican principle of protection.

We tried the Democratic system to the year awful years from 1893 to 1897.

We have had protection and prosperity since that time.

Patriotism, as well as personal interest and the interests of the wife and children, points out the Republican path of duty.

Think is Over.

Democrats talk as if the country were on the verge of ruin.

Is it?

Wages were never higher.

Our factories were never busier.

Our railroads never had a greater volume of business.

Our farmers never had a better market for their products.

There never were on few idle men.

Farmers never had as good a market for their products of their farms.

Prosperity never was more marked to more general.

Where is the distress?

Where are the soup houses?

Where are the Coxey's armies?

What industry is on the ragged edge?

What working man who wants work fails to find it?

Think it over.

STORIES OF CAMP AND WAR

CAPTURE SMALL GRIST MILL

Detachment of Missouri Cavalry Make Raid and Big Lot of Rebels and Horses.

Our three years' service expired Aug. 9, 1864, and on the 17th I left home, in command of a mere of Co. A and 12 of Co. B, 7th Mo. Cav., left Pine Bluffs, Ark., at daylight on a secret march of 32 miles south to a grist mill, which Gen. Clayton was anxious to know whether the rebels were operating. We were guided by Cornelius Tiney, who lived in the neighborhood of the mill. He was loyal and brave.

About noon we stopped back of a field, where the guide's mother, a widow, lived, and about three miles from the mill. As soon as our horses were fed we started for the mill through the timber. We had not gone far until we could smell the burning of the engine, wines W. H. Craven, sergeant Co. A, 7th Mo. Cav., of Milton, Iowa, in National Tribune. We went within 50 rods of the mill, when the lieutenant commanding halted and called a halt and gave its orders to remain quiet until his return. He had the guide left.

In about an hour they returned, having gone inside the rebel camp to a house within sight of the mill, occupied by a Union family. As our guide was personally acquainted with the family and knew he could trust them, he had one of the girls go to the mill under the pretext of taking some milling done, and get all the information about a head regard to the location of their camp and the number of soldiers there, which was 50.

The lieutenant called us around him and said: "Boys, there is a moment most disgraceful to the county and the state. Our mounted rifles are absolutely unfit for the purpose for which they are used and there is not a mounted rifleman in the service, other than that the overcoat and mares are equipped and doing the best they can with what the county has provided.

"No problem is made for the separation or classification of inmates, and during the other inches the old people are huddled and packed together in a manner and under such conditions as to render it almost inhuman. In one room, the air space of which is sufficient for one person only with the means of heating and ventilation, five men were crowded, the best and cots occupying practically all the floor space.

Many Flaws in Home Rule Act.

The supreme court listened to a review of the arguments in the case of the attorney general on the relation of J. L. Hudson et al. against the common council of the city of Detroit.

Corporation Counsel F. J. M. Holly represented the city council, and Alexander A. C. Angell and Hiram S. Spalding appeared for the taxpayers. Angell and Spalding quoted numerous laws bearing on the question from many cases to show that the subsidiaries of a proposed charter amendment would enable the city to vote on a bond issue for the purchase of the street railway system would be unconstitutional.

The case was heard before a full bench. The whole question simply resolves itself into the legal inquiry as to whether the electors of Detroit will be given an opportunity to vote on the proposed amendment to the charter at the general election in November.

When a petition was presented to the city of Detroit last spring, asking that a special election be called for the purpose of determining whether the taxpayers desired to own and operate the street railway system, it was called for the purpose of determining whether the taxpayers desired to own and operate the street railway system. IS MR. HEMANS INTERESTED

In the Question of Equal Taxation in Michigan

OR MAKING A PRETENSE?

The Democratic Candidate Excitedly Arraigns Conditions in One Section of the State, but Overlooks Entirely Conditions in His Home County. Is Personal Gain His Sole Object?

Is Mr. Lawton T. Hemans, the Democratic candidate for governor, interested to the slightest extent in the question as to whether or not the corporations of Michigan shall pay their share of taxes, or he he playing the part of a political demagogue?

This far in his discussion of the tax subject, Mr. Hemans has referred only to the upper peninsula property. He evidently has it in mind that these properties represent a very limited territory and a comparatively small number of people and that, so attack in that direction will yield very largely to his political candidacy through prejudice and the sectional division he hopes to create.

But as a matter of truth and fairness, is Mr. Hemans at all interested in the question of equal taxation in Michigan? Is he even interested in the matter of having all the corporations of Michigan pay their fair share of taxation? Let us see as to that.

In Ingham county, where Mr. Hemans lives and which he has represented in the state legislature, there are 32 corporations. The aggregate amount of the real and personal property of these corporations subject to assessment, as represented in the secretary of state's sworn statement, amounts to $7,645,482.

Yet these Ingham county corporations are paying taxes on a valuation of only $1,495,575, less than 20 per cent of their actual value, as shown by the sworn statements filed with the state by the corporations themselves.

When Mr. Hemans says that the mining companies of the upper peninsula are not assessed to current 20 per cent of their actual value, he should also include the further statement that the corporations of Ingham county are assessed at less than 20 per cent of their actual value and on less than 17 per cent of their value based on the amount of capital stock authorized.

It is known to be true, however, that Mr. Hemans's complaint are not based on the value of mining properties as shown by sworn statements, but largely on the market value of their stock. It he will apply this same market value test to the corporations of Ingham county he will find that the percentage of assessed valuation to market value will not exceed 10 per cent.

The market value of the Ros Motor Car company, for instance, is over $50,000. Just recently it was announced through the newspapers that negotiations were under way for the purchase of the Ros company by the General Motors company and that the price asked was $7,000,000. This company is on the assessment rolls of Ingham county for only $38,800. Based on its market value it should be on the assessment rolls for $500,000.

When Mr. Hemans is discussing the question of dividends paid by the mining properties he should also mention the fact that the Ros Motor Car company has returned in dividends since its organization, less than ten years, $10 for every dollar of the original investment.

While these facts must be known Mr. Hemans, unless he has given his attention to the subject of taxation for political purposes only, he has made no reference to it as a citizen, and with the slightest effort to forge about any of the conditions of fairness or equity in the sharing of tax burdens to which he is giving so much of his time as a political agitator.

The purpose here is not to single out the corporations of one county or of a single section of the state, and criticize as Mr. Hemans has thought best to do, but to insist it very plain to the people of Michigan that the Democratic candidate for governor is either not possessed of the information which enables him to fairly and fully present this question or he purposely avoids fairness and truth in order to make his personal and party purposes.

One declaration made to the assembled representatives of the Republican party at Detroit that was generously applauded not only because it was in harmony with all the actions and movements of the state convention but because it brief, yet fully expressed the position earnestly indorsed and everywhere proclaimed by the Republican candidate for governor, Chase S. Osborn, was this: "We stand for efficiency in public office and pledge our support to an administration in which every public dollar shall buy as much as a private dollar whether in services or supplies. We likewise stand pledged to a business-like administration, with the lowest possible employes and the lowest limit of expense consistent with good service and satisfactory results."

MADE R. R. COMMISSION COUNT

Former United States Government Inspector Says Upper Peninsula Man Is One of the Squarest and Most Efficient in Michigan—Would Make Grand Governor.

"I saw that Lawton T. Hemans, the Democratic nominee for governor, is making campaign remarks to the effect that Chase S. Osborn, the Republican nominee, conducted the most expensive administration the state ever had, during his term as state railroad commissioner," said Charles S. Brown, of Grand Rapids, to a Detroit Free Press representative.

"I want to say, and say it with all the emphasis I can, that since the offices of state railroad commissioner was created, Michigan has never had a man in the position before or since, who accomplished so much good for the traveling public as Chase S. Osborn. Every commercial traveler in the state who knows anything about it will bear witness to that fact. He did things, and the office under him was not a sinecure, but a real and substantial benefit to the public. I take it for granted that it cost more to do business in that way, but we got results for the money."

Brown has been a commercial traveler for upwards of 20 years and is one of the best known in the state and throughout the middle west.

"He is the man who was selected by President Roosevelt in 1902 to be inspector of the government printing office at Washington, an office which the president created for the purpose of cleaning out the graft which had infested the big establishment for so many years that it required the strongest kind of an expert to ferret it out and get rid of it. Brown stayed there one year and made a home cleaning that made him famous all over the country. He was offered all kinds of inducements to remain, but after the cleaning was done he preferred to return to private life and business.

"I have known Chase Osborn," said he, "for more than a quarter of a century, and he is not only a big man mentally, but one of the squarest and most efficient men I ever met. Michigan will have one of its children for an administration if he is elected governor. He will do in that office just what he did as railroad commissioner, accomplish results for the good of the state and its people. I shall make it a point to be in Michigan on election day so as to vote for him."

15 YEARS OF PROGRESS.

State Banking Business Shows Increase of 600 Per Cent.

If the Democratic candidate for governor in this state cared to give a fair review of what has been accomplished in Michigan during the past 15 years, he could present a review that would not only add to his pride in his state, but would prevent the use of the sort of criticism upon which his sole hope for election seems to be based. Any intelligent line of development to which Mr. Hemans does not even, directly or indirectly, refer is that which is indicated through the recent history of the Michigan state banking department.

When the present banking law went into effect in 1889, there were 92 state banks, transacting an aggregate business of $20,000,000. According to the last bulletin issued by the commissioner of banks, dated Feb. 15, there are now 237 banks and five trust companies, with total footings of $200,000,000, constituting a gain of 520 per cent in point of number since 1889, while the volume of business transacted has increased over 900 per cent.

Since 1889 the increase in deposits amounts to the enormous sum of $220,000,000. For the same period loans have increased $200,000,000, and there has been added to banking capital $17,000,000, and by additions to surplus $10,000,000.

A large part of this increase has occurred since the year 1900, deposits showing a gain of $120,000,000, capital stock $10,000,000 and surplus fund $9,000,000.

In the ten years ending Dec. 31, 1909, the number of depositors in state banks increased from 395,000 to 745,000.

At the close of the year 1893 there had been made 92 examinations of state banks at a net cost to the state of $1,856.20, or at a cost of $20.12 per examination. Seven hundred and thirty-eight examinations of state banks were made in 1909 at a net cost to the state of $7,418.11, or $10.16 per examination, a decrease in actual cost to the state per examination of 67 per cent.

In 1893 the examiner was employed to insure the 92 state banks. At the present time the services of two examiners are necessary in order to make 738 examinations of state banks in 1910.

In other words, 46 banks, with an average total business of $400,000 were examined by our state in 1893, while in 1910, 738 banks, with average total footings of $2,980,000 each, were examined in our state.

The total reserve maintained by Michigan state banks, according to the last bulletin issued by the commissioner of banking, amounted to $66,000,000, or in 9.16 per cent, or $16,000,000 over the requirements of the banking law; the total cash reserve amounted to $17,200,000, or 16 1-10 per cent.

The mortgage and bond investments of Michigan state banks exceeded the requirements of the law by $21,000,000, and the total savings investments, including the savings reserve, exceeded the amount of the savings deposits by $2,500,000.

FOUGHT FOR TWO CENT RATE

Chase Osborn Also Was Instrumental in Forcing Railroads to Pay Their Share of State Taxes.

"I am appealing for a united Michigan, a greater Michigan, a Michigan that knows no Straits of Mackinaw."

This declaration by Chase S. Osborn, the Republican candidate for governor, was heartily cheered by the more than 500 Republicans of Berrien county participating in the fourth annual Republican banquet of that county held in the auditorium at St. Joseph, Wednesday night.

Mr. Osborn had been referring to the effort being made by Mr. Hemans, the Democratic candidate for governor, to create class and sectional divisions in Michigan, and to secure political profit for himself through creating dissension and arousing prejudice by methods not legitimately related to the present campaign or to any campaign.

Mr. Osborn called attention to the fact that the demand for equal taxation in Michigan had been a feature in his political faith and an important purpose of all his political efforts since the early days of his acquaintance and association with Governor Pingree.

He had made the demand for equal and equitable taxation applicable to the upper peninsula and to the great producing properties of the lower peninsula an important plank in his primary election campaign platform, notwithstanding the fact that he was many times told by managers of his own party that he would be ruined if he persisted in doing.

Mr. Hemans was making the growth of expenses in Michigan the most broadcast feature of his campaign speech, Mr. Osborn said, but in the Democratic candidate wished to be felt in this argument he should state the fact that no other state in the Union had so greatly increased its income during these same years as had the state of Michigan.

"It was a privilege I will always value higher than even a nomination or election to the office of governor that I had an early part and an important part in the general movement for equal taxation through which the railroads of Michigan are paying $1,000,000 or $5,000,000 each year into the state treasury, while when the fight was entered upon the total income from all the railroads of the state was less than $1,000,000.

"It is further true that when I became railroad commissioner there was a law on the statute books which compelled the railroads of the lower peninsula to grant a fare of two cents a mile when the earnings were a certain figure per mile, but no effort had been made to ascertain whether the earnings had reached the point fixed in the statutes.

"I took the matter up immediately, and, after fighting their through to the United States supreme court, compelled a half dozen of the big roads to grant the two cent fare. This saved hundreds of thousands of dollars to the people of Michigan and is today saving other thousands. The investigation which led to the successful prosecution of the suits cost money, and I spent it. I also enforced the law with regard to grade crossings, something which had been a dead letter, and more money was spent. I ordered statistics on freight and passenger rates, facilities and other matters relating to railroads, gathered from every section of the world, so that we might understand just where Michigan stood on railroad matters.

"The cordial reception given to Mr. Osborn and the earnest approval expressed for his position in this campaign and for the things he had stood for, and had assisted in accomplishing for Michigan, shown by the Republicans of Berrien county, made it quite evident that that section of the state will promptly and amically respond to the leadership and keep step with the onward demands that have given to Mr. Osborn his present position in the Republican party and in the state.

That the Democratic state platform was made up with the idea of including more or less "clinging deferiors" in opposition to the Republican candidates and Republican principles rather than with any thought of having its statements practically applied to real situations or actual conditions is taken note of by the Grand Rapids Herald in a very effective way. The Herald says the Herald, "the Taft administration is charged with 'wanton extravagance,' and yet it is the first administration in years to attempt scientific reduction of the public expense, the first administration to reduce American government to the budget system; the first administration to oppose 'work barrel' rivers and harbors bills; the first to reduce department expenses to such a degree that, for example, an annual postal deficit of $17,000,000 has already been wiped out in less than two years."

Cordial Greeting.

"One of my acquaintances is much interested in the Chagrin Falls Hunt club, and is an onlooker at most of the functions of that organization," said Ward Jackson to the Cleveland Leader. "The other night he said to me, with some show of enthusiasm, that gradually he was getting acquainted with the club members. 'Why, Ian Hanna came right up, and spoke to me today,' he said, exultantly. 'Is that so?' I replied. 'What did he say to you?' 'He said 'Don't get too near that horse there or he'll kick your darned head off.'"

Oregon Man's Insect Catcher.

In the country all sorts of homely devices are used to catch the bugs and kill them, and an Oregon man who probably had his apple orchard overrun by some destructive species, intended a true for the pests. A box red has pieces cut out of the upper portion and is half filled with rotten or bruised apples or some other odor-iferous truit. On top of the barrel is place a pan partially filled with water, oil or some poisonous liquid. From the apex of a tripod that holds the banda hom falling off the barrel hangs a lantern. In the daytime the insects will be attracted by the odor of the fruit, and in flying up to feast many of them are likely to fly into the water. At night the lantern is lighted and bugs will come from afar to fan her against it and meet their death in the liquid below.—Chicago Tribune.

THE BAY STATE.

Summary of Fifteen Field Meetings Held the Past Summer.

A Splendid Spirit of Enthusiasm and Interest Shown at the Meetings Which Were Held at Up to Date Farmers' Homes Instead of at Picnic Grounds.

The Massachusetts state grange made an certain ground the past summer in regard to its grange field meetings. Fifteen were held, which were attended by other people, representing 447 granges. The largest meeting was at Westfield, where the attendance was 1,800, representing sixty-four granges. A splendid spirit of enthusiasm and interest was shown at every meeting, and the speaking and other exercises on each occasion were full of life, of instruction and of inspiration for better work in all the grange fields. Patrons drove long distances to attend the meetings.

This year nearly every field meeting in the series was held in a good farm, where up to date methods, efficient effort and thorough cultivation were much in evidence, and for the most part the farmers was special inspecting the farm and its products. The holding of the meetings on the farms has been such a success and is so simply fit in with grange principles and purposes that a similar series will be arranged for next year, holding twenty such meetings instead of fifteen and additional ones as will be possible over the state. Already some of the locations have been selected, and very thorough plans for the series will be made.

The closing list was an excellent one. Among those who addressed the meetings and in this poster some thing more than a local reputation in the Bay State were Governor E. L. Draper, Dr. David Sandden, state commissioner of education; Professor F. S. Jones, of Amherst; Hon. Lewis Ellsworth, secretary of the state board of agriculture; Solomon Jones, E. Warren, editor of rural schools; President Kenyon L. Butterfield of the State Agricultural college; National Master N. J. Bachelder of New Hampshire; State Master O. M. Gardner, C. O. Richardson, past state master; State Lecturer E. E. Richardson, State Overseer E. E. Chapman and State Secretary W. S. Howard. Three representatives of the national department of agriculture assisted in the speaking—Dr. Dodge in Boston, Mr. Morse at Amherst and George M. Whitaker at Belchertown. And there were others just as good, if less noted, and these included some of the best state talent.

Those who welcomed the Patrons to their farms and homes exhibited unlimited hospitality and spared no effort to make the day a success. Dinner and supper were served on the basket lunch plan, while hot coffee, steaming tea, lemonade and watermelons were planning additions to the usual menu, and ball games added to the festivities, while at Lexington a splendid drill by the minutemen added a distinct novelty.

Massachusetts is chosen here to illustrate the interest and the grange work as an exceptional state in these states, but quite as exceptional of what is being done in every strong grange state in N. H., Maine, New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan, as well as minor states in New England, would no doubt compare favorably with Massachusetts in this excellent work.

NATIONAL GRANGE MEETING.

Announcement Made by the Chairman of Executive Committee.

The following announcement from the chairman of the executive committee of the national grange, P. G. Godfrey, of Massachusetts, shows about the next annual meeting that will be of national interest, and will be spent at Atlantic City, Nov. 16, combining the best of quality and service.

"There are a great many hotels at Atlantic City, N. J., ranging from $1 up to $5 a day. The hotel at which we will be located, however, is the only one at Atlantic City, Nov. 16, combining the best features of quality and service will allow. The Hotel Chalfonte, on the board walk, is to be headquarters. This hotel has also been selected for headquarters for the New York state grange, the rates being $3.50 and up. American plan. The railroad rates will be one and three-fifths fare round trip, on the certificate plan, and persons purchasing a ticket requesting the rate must secure a certificate of the agent from whom he purchased the ticket.

This session will be one of the most interesting and profitable sessions of the national grange, and Patrons everywhere are urged to attend. The sixth and seventh degrees will be conferred on Thursday and Friday, the 17th and 18th, respectively.

Judge Parker a Granger.

Former Judge Alton B. Parker recently became a member of Ulster Park grange of Ulster Park, N. Y. Three Oaks grange, of Ulster, taken from Saugus, where Judge Parker owns and operates a large farm. The judge's brother, Fred H. Parker, who is the farm manager, was also initiated.

CENTER OF POPULATION.

In the predictions as to the showing which the census figures would make there was one virtually agreed upon—that the center of population would be shifted some distance West, west from the location in 1890, when it was six miles southeast of Columbus, Ind., near Toledo Hinte. But this prediction was not borne out by the showing, strange. The census people have tentatively announced that the center will have to be moved but slightly. The west has flourished tremendously in ten years. It has added not only new railroads, but the old railroads have been renewed. Irrigation has opened new lands to fertilization and new cities and towns to be built up. Both cities in Seattle have profited in wealth and population by the opening of new territory, the development of new industries, the filling in of the once deserted spaces between town and town. But in these same ten years the immense immigration has been distributing itself in the eastern cities—among the coal mines and steel plants of Pennsylvania, in the industrial districts of Lake Erie. It has offset the settlement of the far west.

Unfavorable health regulations against ignorance and prejudice frequently is accompanied by difficulties. Cholera prevails in Hongkong, and the sick fields have taken also precautions against the spread of the disease. And one result has been a rise, seemingly guided by the wrecking of the health office in the city of Seattle. Because the citizens are taking the proper course that opens the way for invasion by the deadly scourge. This is an age of enlightenment, but there are regions where there has been its advancement in ideas since the time when plagues swept away cities. Cities in Europe because there was not sufficient knowledge to ward off the danger.

Those who have been able to hold back their vacations until now are in congestion. October is one of the finest months of the year for vacations, and you who has been for months anxious for the two weeks free at this time will tell you. The country lies before you. There is no better exercise than walking. Nature, in the full beauty of her late summer dress, is at her best, and the cities are of the approaching fall in nationwide meetings. Soon it will be on tap all day. Will you have up your opera? vacation habits all winter?

The world's wheat crop this year is estimated at a little under 3,500,000,000 bushels. It will make it, with one exception the largest ever grathered. The largest wheat crop ever gathered was that of last year, which was approximately 3,500,000,000 bushels more than the estimate of 1910. More than half of the shortage is figured in the crop of the United States. Although here as in Russia the crop is shorter than last year, the reserve of old wheat held over from the previous year is larger in both countries than it was in 1909.

The United States government has ordered another large installment of its "big Bertha," to be built in the Indiana "Gibraltar." Its date is away with. Experiments are also under way with similar advances for cannon. It may yet come to pass that the noise of battle will consist solely of the "shooting and the tumult" that were in order before the days of gunpowder.

"Success is plentiful—and cut extremely painful," said a wisdom, as proved in the case of a twelve-year-old. But rain has received a gift of a rifle from his father and a few minutes later shot and killed his mother. Of course, the boy was accident, and everybody concerned is very sorry, but the moral is that, given every possible condition and turbulent accidents will happen.

BENDER BEATS CUBS

INDIAN PITCHER TOO MUCH FOR CHICAGO IN FIRST CHAMPIONSHIP GAME.

PHILADELPHIA WINS 4 TO 1

Only 30 Men Face Athletic Slabman in Nine Innings. But Three Hits Mean Off His Delivery—Attendance 27,000.

Philadelphia.—Through the masterly pitching of "Chief" Bender the Philadelphia American baseball team defeated the Chicago Nationals by a score of 4 to 1 in the initial game of the world's championship series. The game was witnessed by 26,951 people.

The game was a wonder in its way, and Chief Bender, who pitched for the Athletics, had the Chicagoans at his mercy up to the ninth inning, when he let down a bit and the Cubs got their single tally. It was not earned at that, as Tinker, who started the run, was only enabled to make a single because Tom Jones had previously muffed a foul from his bat.

Only three men faced the Athletic pitcher in the nine innings, and but three hits were made off his delivery, two of them coming in the ninth. The Athletics secured seven hits, six of which were secured off Richie Ward, who succeeded Mordecai Brown in the fourth inning.

Mathewson proved to be effective at once. The Athletics were retired in one, two, three order for the first time during the game.

The Athletics' fielding was without a flaw until the final inning, when Thomas dropped Tinker's foul popper from Strunk here (muffed the same player's grounder in center. The Chicago team also fielded well.

Bender was pitching the game of his life when the ninth inning opened in the eight innings which had been played only twenty-four of the Cubs had flayed his curves, and of these Schulte was the only man who could get to first. He did the trick twice—once with a single and once on four wide pasts.

The Athletics scored two runs in the second inning and the enormous crowd went wild with enthusiasm. The Cubs had gone out one, two, three in their half. Baker, the first man up for the home team, landing the very first ball thrown pitched into the crowd to left field for two bases. The Athletics increased their base in the third inning, when they scored a tally. Making the score 2 to 0 in their favor. The Cubs had gone out one, two, three. Then the home players began to find Overall. Lord led off with a two bagger, took third on Collins' sacrifice and scored on Rossman's single.

In the first half of the fourth inning the Cubs managed to get a man to first base. This was Schulte, who got a base from a pitched ball. It got no further, however, as he was caught stealing for the third out.

In the last half of the eight Cubs got his second change into the crowd after Collins had walked and taken third on Meinitz's wild throw to catch him napping. Collins scored, making the total 4 to 0 in favor of the Athletics.

ROCKEFELLER ADDS TO GIFT

GIVES $3,620,000 TO INSTITUTE OF MEDICAL RESEARCH.

Brings Oil King's Donation to Institution Bearing His Name Up to $8,240,000.

New York—John D. Rockefeller has added $3,620,000 to the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, thereby making his total gifts to this institution $8,240,000 and also increasing his known contributions to philanthropy, education and science to $127,094,682.

This total includes the estimated value of the buildings and land of the institute. The income bearing endowment, with the latest gift added, is $6,240,000.

Announcement of Mr. Rockefeller's latest gift to the institution which bears his name was made at the opening of the institute's new hospital at the foot of East 68th-sixth street. The opening of the new hospital was also chosen as the day for the institute's annual meeting of the new board of trustees of the institute.

They will take over the Rockefeller gift of millions from the Rockefeller general education board which has administered the gift in the past. The new board of trustees is made up of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; Frederick T. Gates, William H. Welch, Starr J. Murphy and Dr. Simon Flexner, medical head of the institute.

The initial gift of the institute was made by Rockefeller in 1901 when he donated a foundation fund of $200,000. In that the donor added it has not to cover the erection of a short story and to provide running expenses for a few years. From the start the institute was a success and the world is discovering a new method of combating infantile paralysis, dysentery and spinal meningitis attracted the attention of scientific investigators all over the world.

Gave Life to Country.

Dr. A. H. McCreight, one of the outstanding physicians, dedicated to Mrs. Rockefeller, who died in Ohio, declaring, however, that the senator was give up his public work.

He himself repeatedly said that he was not seriously ill, declaring that if he were he would "set the wolves loose." Nevertheless, he had had a horror of knowing that the politicians were discussing his successor while he was in, on the theory that he might die.

Talk of Successor.

Nevertheless, within an hour after the senator's death, the question of who his successor would be was the theme of general discussion in political circles. It is predicted that Governor Carroll will not appoint any person to fill the vacancy, for the legislature about to be elected will convene within eight of ten weeks. Governor Carroll is a candidate for reelection, and it is believed by many that he will leave it to the legislature to fill the vacancy.

Dolliver's Life Story.

Jonathan P. Dolliver was born in 1858 near Kingwood, Preston county, W. Va. He was the son of a minister in the mountain district. He had no any any will, but was thought West Virginia university because his circuit was so large, his income was small.

At seventeen, when the boy had won his graduation diploma, he began his study of law and was admitted to the bar on coming of age.

Fame as an Orator.

It was in 1888 that Mr. Dolliver first achieved national fame as an orator. He made a speech at the Republican state convention as temporary chairman. His speech was printed in full in the Chicago papers and all over the country and even in England, where it was cited as a rare specimen of noble glad wit and power and condensed oratory in political speaking.

Wins Leadership in Congress.

Mr. Dolliver was elected to the fifty-first congress from his North Iowa district and was five times reelected. Easily his oratory and strong ability to carry home the bacon gave him a large place in congress. In 1900, on the death of United States Senator J. H. Gear, Governor Shaw found Mr. Dolliver was the logical successor to the seat in the upper house. He was appointed, was elected in 1902, and was re-elected when his term expired.

When the Republican leaders looked about for a possible running mate for McKinley, Mr. Dolliver was presented as Iowa's favorite son. In 1904 also he was urged to accept the vice-presidential nomination and refused.

Kills Wife and Self.

Havana, Ill.—Charles Amo shot and killed his wife Saturday and then committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. Domestic troubles are said to have led to the tragedy.

More Riots in Nicaragua.

New Orleans.—News reached Lerdo, Mexico, Nicaragua, that Leonard had broken out anew in the capital and that frequent rioting has occurred. According to these advices the situation had become very critical.

Aviator Hits and Kills Girl.

Limoges, France.—M. Ballod, a monoplanist, in attempting a flight here Saturday, steered his machine into a crowd, killing a girl and injuring several other persons.

DOLLIVER CALLED BY DEATH IN IOWA HOME

Progressive Republican Senator Passes Away Suddenly of Dilatation of the Heart---His Vitality Was Weakened by Campaign in Wisconsin---Gave Life for His Country---Was Famed as an Orator.

Fort Dodge, Ia.—United States Senator Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver died suddenly Saturday night at his residence while being treated by an osteopathic physician.

The cause of death was dilatation of the heart, due directly to an attack of acute indigestion. It had been believed that he had almost entirely recovered from the attack of indigestion from which he had been suffering for a week, but his exertions in the political campaign had weakened his vitality.

Physician Was Ever Comes.

While working over the senator the physician, Dr. E. M. Van Patten, used an instrument to listen to the heart action. He had counted 14 regular strokes and had informed his patient. Two more strong heartbeats were made by Senator Dolliver in two faint ones. Then the physician heard nothing. He thought for an instant that his senator had gone. He glanced up and discovered that his patient was dead.

It was learned that a consultation of physicians was held a week ago. The physicians then said that the senator might prolong his life by relinquishing his work, but that he never again would speak in the senate or thrill an audience from a political platform.

Gave Life to Country.

Dr. A. H. McCreight, one of the outstanding physicians, dedicated to Mrs. Dolliver that her husband had given his life to his country as much as had any soldier who had been killed on the battlefield.

Mrs. Dolliver said the senator, while in Washington last winter, studied the tariff schedules constantly, for to her the tariff was the issue to be settled than going back to work immediately. Both were called on his physical powers, undermining his naturally ruptured constitution.

Death cut short Mr. Dolliver's plans to help Senator Beveridge in the Indiana campaign and to aid Senator Clapp in Minnesota. At the state convention he declined to allow his name to be placed on the 39 counties in Iowa, whether invited or not, to speak in support of the state ticket. He met Colonel Roosevelt at Omaha on the latter's recent western trip and accompanied the former president to Sioux City. From there he returned to Fort Dodge. It was his last campaign work.

Believed He Would Recover.

During his illness the senator and his wife insisted that there was nothing serious in his ailment, and the physicians expressed the same belief.

GETTING EVEN WITH MAMMA

In This Case Child's Punishment Certainly Failed to Have Salutary Effect.

A little girl had been so very naughty that her mother found it necessary to shut her up in a dark closet—in that family, the direst punishment for the worst offense. For 15 minutes the door had been locked without a sound coming from behind it. Not a whimper, not a sob, not a sigh.

At last the stern but anxious parent unlocked the closet door and peered into the darkness. She could see nothing.

"What are you doing in there?" she cried.

And then a little voice piped from the blackness:

"I'm thrit on your new dress and I thrit on your new hat, and I'm waiting for more thrit to come to thrit on your new parasol!"

HIS HANDS CRACKED OPEN

"I am a man seventy years old. My hands were very sore and cracked open on the ends of the fingers and very sore across. They would crack open and bleed, itch, burn and ache so that I could not sleep and could but little work. They were so bad that I could not dress myself in the morning. They would bleed and the blood dropped on the floor. I called on doctors, but they did me no good. I could get nothing to do any good I tried to cure them. Some one recommended the Cuticura Ointment. About a year ago my daughter got a cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and in one week from the time I began to use them my hands were all healed up and they have kept healed ever since. I would not be in without the Cuticura Remedies."

"They also cured a bad sore on the hand of one of my neighbors children, and they think very highly of the Cuticura Remedies." John W. Healy, So. Egremont, Mass. Jan. 5, and Apr. 11, '09."

Just Guessed.

"Mrs. Wagstaff, I am very glad, indeed, to meet you. But, haven't I had the honor of being introduced to you before? What was your name formerly, if I may ask?"

"My maiden name?"

"No; your name before you were divorced."

"How did you know I had been divorced?"

"Why, hasn't everybody?"

AS SOON BE WITHOUT MATCHES

AS WITHOUT RESINOL IN THE HOUSE.

Realized is the never failing article remarked to be my wife for the many bruises, chafings, cuts, burns and accidents of the children and has been our cure-all for years. I have used it in cases of irritation and inflammation and have invariably been relieved almost instantly. We would as soon think of being without matches in our house as without Resinol Ointment. R. Rush Davenport, Philadelphia, Pa.

"Thank You."

The man who is not thankful for the lessons he learned in adversity didn't learn any.

There must be plenty of thankfulness in the world if those who have loved and lost could know just what they have lost.

"Why are you giving thanks? They took 10,000 from you in Wall street a little while ago, didn't they?"

"Yes; but I got out with $20 they didn't know I had."—Judge.

Popularity of Trials.

"Every other young actress is calling herself Trial," said Hurry E. Lizzy at a dinner at Mauquin's. "Thala Mellinda, Thala Eudicott, Thala Schulitt—the thing is universal.

"Universal and ridiculous; for they who have read Antonio France's story of 'Thala' know that she was a very naughty little girl, indeed. I am quite sure that no real reader of 'Thala' would ever, under any circumstances, consent to be called such a name.

"It makes me think of a man who, taking his infant daughter to be baptized, told the clergyman to call her Thala.

"But I refuse to call her Nevada," said the indignant father, "because I use to the name of a pagan goddess."

"Pagan goddess, indeed! Why, what Diana" said the man."

Men are inclined to boast, yet, according to statistics, three out of four are barbs—at somebody else's expense.

COFFEE WAS IT.

People Slowly Learn the Facts.

"All my life I have been such a slave to coffee that the very aroma of it was enough to set my nerves quivering. I kept gradually losing my health but I used to say 'Nonsense, it don't hurt me.'

"Slowly I was forced to admit the truth and the final result was that my whole nervous force was shattered.

"My heart became weak and uncertain in its action and had frightened me. Finally my physician told me, about a year ago, that I must stop drinking coffee or I could never expect to be well again.

"I was in despair, for the very thought of the medicines I had tried to take was enough to make me long for a cup of Postum but could hardly bring myself to the sacrifice.

"Finally I concluded that I owed it to myself to give Postum a trial. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions, and what a delicious, refreshing drink it was! Do you know I found it very easy to shift from coffee to Postum and not miss the change at all?

"Almost immediately after I made the change I found myself better, and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew sound and steady, I slept well and felt strong and withal balanced all the time.

"Now I am completely cured, with the old nervousness and distress all gone. In every way I am well once more.

"It pays to give up the drink that acts on some like a poison, for health is the greatest fortune one can have.

"Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

The MAN in LOWER TEN

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Washington to take the depositions of the Brownsville negroes. Mrs. Blakeley insists on his taking her with him. Because the lawyer is attended by the three grandfathers, the grandmother, the aunt, the grandfather's cousin and a friend of the family, they occupy the entire "Lower Ten" in the Limited. Blakeley is a very young man, and his family, with the exception of his father, who is a judge, all have the Roman nose, and look like long and short stories. Blakeley's friend, Jack Ward, is a big, good-natured fellow, who is a "Mr. Fix-it." Ward tells Blakeley that the Brownsville affair is a "frame-up." Blakeley's father, the judge, is a "dry-goods" politician, and Ward tells Blakeley that his father is being used as a tool by the Lobby.

A Case of False Economy.

The board of supervisors, on Wednesday, voted to appropriate $600 for Development Bureau work, but supervisors Correll, of Melrose, and Cook, of Charlevoix township, invoked the schools and colleges of the law and hung it up. Notwithstanding the existence of a technical obstacle in the path of the proposition, Charlevoix county is abundantly able to have paid the amount, and it was clearly the expressed wish of the people that it should be paid.

Never in the history of Charlevoix county was there a more representative gathering than that of last Tuesday night at Hilliker's inn. Besides the board of supervisors there were present representatives of the largest business and manufacturing interests of the county. Without doubt that case only represented a large majority of the total tax-roll valuation of the county. It was the emphatically expressed wish of this element that Charlevoix county should do its full share in the work of the Bureau. Instead of being regarded as an experimental contribution it was looked upon as an investment of unquestionable profit. The organization of the Charlevoix County Chamber of Commerce was a pronounced endorsement of this policy, and neither of the supervisors above mentioned had the courage to interpose an objection. Perhaps by ten nickels and pickles temporarily surprised the heart action.

In the economy of public affairs there are two classes who are a hindrance to material progress—the law-breakers and those who are heartily splitting hairs of fine law constructions, or digging archeological statutory specimens to hinder up their claims of superior wisdom or their more acute conception of public interests.

Already the money expended by Charlevoix county in this cause has returned four-fold, and there never was a time when the outcasting side of agricultural progress was more visible than now. Not only have the eyes of thousands of home-seekers been turned toward us, but our own farmers and fruit growers have been more than ever brought to see the possibilities of increased profit. The past two years have been marked by a most decided advance in interest and results. The work of these two years now will not stop the forward movement but it must necessarily check it.

More than thirty years ago Charlevoix county appropriated $1,000 toward the work of opening the channel from Round to Pine Lake. The act was clearly illegal, in fact unconstitutional, but the money was paid, and the people are still reaping the benefit of that flagrant fracture of the law. There were fewer "wise" men here than now. At about the same time the legislature passed an act appropriating sixteen sections of swamp land "for the reclamation and drainage of the territory on Pine Lake." Not an acre was "reclaimed." The appropriation was for harbor improvement, and the legislature knew it when it passed the bill—an act in direct violation of constitution and statute. Who is bold enough to stand up and assert that the expenditure has not returned to the people of Charlevoix county a thousand fold?

Oh, the wisdom of this day and generation!

Local Option Straws.

One of the arguments used against local option one years ago was that taxes would be increased by reason of the loss of the saloon in towns. Not here are two towns it would be a waste in our but for further reference and comparison:

In the settlement with the superintendent of the poor the committee found that the expense for the support of the poor the past year was about $2,000 less than last year. If the abolition of saloons from the county did not accomplish this, what did?

The salary of prosecuting attorney was cut approximately $200. The reason for this was that the work of that office was that much less the past year than the year before. In addition to this should be added a corresponding decrease in justice court expenses, which unquestionably is more than double the amount of the cut in the prosecutor's salary.

Too Much Cob.

A farmer who was taking his first long trip on a railroad train found himself getting hungry. The train boy came through and after some effort sold the farmer three bananas for ten cents. The farmer peeled the bananas, threw away the fruit and ate the skins. Presently the boy came back. "What some more bananas?" he asked. "No, I guess not." "Why, aren't they good?" "Oh, good's enough, I suppose, but they's too darned much cob about them."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Traverse City Eagle: The steamer Lena Knoblock is now in drydock at Charlevoix, where she will be completely rebuilt above the water line, and when the repairers in the bay next spring she will be practically a new boat. All her upper works will be built of the finest oak that can be obtained, and finished in the most durable manner, so that when she emerges from the hands of the shipwrights she will be good for many years to come.

One of the big balloons that sailed in the Gordon Bennett race from St. Louis passed over the village of Omena at 6 o'clock last week Tuesday night. It was sailing low down, apparently, not more than two hundred feet above the earth, but it was impossible to make out the name of the craft on account of the darkness. The balloon was sailing in a northeast direction and crossed Lake Michigan, being first sighted at Good Harbor and then at Maple City, Cedar and other points southeast of here. The balloons were seen at Petoskey, Beaver Island and other Northern Michigan points.

Northern Michigan has received a most favorable report of the Manistee and Northern Michigan railroad to the Interstate Commerce Commission. The figures show conclusively that the future of this section of the state promises greater wealth than that removed by the lumbermen and out of which many millions of dollars have been realized and millions more paid for labor. When the timber was removed it was commonly believed that the light soil of Northern Michigan which had given up its wealth of timber, will be utterly useless and non-productive. This has been conclusively disproven and the report of the Manistee and North Michigan railroad shows that there is great wealth in Northern Michigan's sandy soil.

"There is not much game in the north country this season," said Capt. Holbrig at Grand Rapids, last week, after returning from a month's camping on Lake Superior shore near Marquette." The berries were cut off by the early frosts and this has driven the birds and bears to other districts where food is more abundant. The deer are also scarce. We used to see them very frequently around our camp, but this season I saw scarcely a trace. Pot hunters and game hogs have been working havoc with the beds. The law limits each hunter to two deer, and all you see coming through the express runs is the big bucks. The does and fawns are killed and eaten in camp or left in the woods. If the slaughter continues, in five years there will be only a few deer and they will be found only in the most inaccessible places."

"Miller - Made" Clothes

FIRST, they are quality clothes. Then, they are popular-priced clothes. Then, they are style clothes.

A suit of "Miller-Made" Clothes can be purchased for such a moderate price that a man having a very modest income may wear them. They have all the class and cleverness one could possibly ask for—they were designed with all the cunning and care that a versatile man could contribute. Yet they're proper and right, not "flashy"—original in design, yet not loud or freakish. If cash counts, they are worth considering. In every way "Miller-Made" Clothes are worthy garments—the kind that appeal to level-headed people. $15.00 to $40.00.

MEMORIES OF MARK TWAIN.

Two Letters the Humorist Wrote to Henry Watterson.

"Mark Twain—An Intimate Memory," is the title of Henry Watterson's article about his friends as it appears in the American Magazine. Mr. Watterson recites the following incident as being typical of Mark Twain's whimsical point of view:

"His mind turned ever to the drolls. Once in London I was living with my family at 102 Mount street. Between Bond and 102 there was the unusual spectacle—quite long and imposing building. One evening, upon coming in from an outing, I found a letter he had written on the sitting-room table and left with his wife. He spoke of the shock he had received upon entering the warehouse. He had loved me too and always feared that I would lead to disgracing the family—he had hanged, or something—but the warehouse, that was beyond him; he could not stomach it would come to that. And so on through pages of sorrowful remorse and contrition, ending with a diagram illustrating his mistake, his regret and his remorse. Underneath was a drawing representing a long line of camels, with their noses tied to each other's tails, and the legend underneath was the following:

"'Notice to Camels.

"'Notice is hereby given that the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix will meet on the first day of January, A. D. 1910, for the purpose of opening, discontinuing and abolishing Oak street from the easterly line of Bridge street to the westerly line of Park addition to the City of Charlevoix, also Pine street from the westerly line of Bridge street to the westerly line of said Park addition to the City of Charlevoix. D. 1910, at 7:30 o'clock in the evening be and is hereby appointed the time when the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix will meet and hear objections to the above proposed vacating, discontinuing and abolishing said streets and avenues.

"'Dated this 17th day of October, A. D. 1910.

"'ELSWORTH DUTTON, City Clerk.'

"Underneath the drawing was the following:

"'Notice is hereby given that the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix will meet on Tuesday the 15th day of November, A. Happenings Among Ourselves

Mrs. Mountings and daughter, of Racine, Wis., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Miller.

John O. Plank, the governor general of the Fox Islands, spent several days here the past week.

Owen C. McCauley, keeper of the Squaw Island light, was in the city Saturday after supplies.

Capt. F. B. Pugh, of the life saving stations, was called to Grand Rapids last Thursday by the death of his mother.

Mrs Will Allard gave a Hallowe'en party in honor of Miss Jennie Allard, of Chicago, who is here on a visit.

The Charlevoix Lumber Co. mill, which finished its hardwood cut several weeks ago, started up Monday on its hemlock cut.

Hon. Frank Scott, of Alpena, the next senator from this district, was in the city Tuesday, looking over this part of the field.

Jakes from the porch of a Park Avenue residence on Hallowe'en night, a lawn seat. Present possessor please notify this office.

Another Charlevoix boy wins college honors. J. L. Crane Jr. has been elected vice president of the sophomore engineering class of the University of Michigan.

A 20x22 foot addition is being built on the rear of the Crooks building to accommodate the increasing business of the Bentley hardware store and to provide needed rooms above.

Mrs. Lou Comfort, of Traverse City, joined her husband here over Sunday. Mr. Comfort has finished his Beaver Head log sigmas work, and is now engaged on improvements on Squaw Island light.

Emrey Baldwin, of this city, who is an engineer on a lake carrier, was taken ill on a recent trip up the lake and put ashore at Manitowoc with well developed symptoms of typhoid fever. He is at the Holy Family hospital and doing well.

Mr. Sloan, of the Cement Co., complained of much indiscriminate shooting around where his men are working at the plant, and says that they are in continual danger of being hurt. The company proposes to have it stopped.

Capt. Jas. Rose, of Harbor Springs, was here Saturday with the tug Alice, on his way to Sheboygan, Wis., where the tug has been sold for fishing purposes. Capt. Rose is after a larger and better tug, and hopes to find one on that side of the lake.

Mrs. J. A. Carlstein, of Horton's Bay, was in the city Saturday visiting friends. She left here Monday for Chicago, after a brief visit there she will go to Canada and later to Minnesota, where she will reside. She will return to her home in the spring.

Mr. R. S. Jackson, who has officiated so efficiently the past year or more as assistant cashier of the State Savings Bank, has resigned to return to his former home position in Pontiac. It is conceded by Mr. H. C. Pouch, of Traverse City, a young man of experience is the line of work.

St. Louis special—Harry Dittmar, hastening home from a theater to his bride of a few weeks, was shot down and killed last night by an automobile in which August A. Busch, the millionaire brewer, was a passenger. Mr. Busch's chauffeur, George L. Thorpe, was arrested. Mr. Busch is greatly concerned by the tragedy.

The October bill of Sheriff Harris of Oakland county was Friday allowed by the supervisors at $622.09. This covers the fees of the office for the past nine months. This is the largest bill ever allowed a sheriff of Oakland county. It will be remembered that Oakland county returned to the "wet" column on May 1st, and returns are just coming in.

Miss Winnie Weaver, who was injured last week by being thrown from a horse, resumed work in the post office Monday morning as well as ever. The story printed in several papers about "loss of memory" was pure fabrication. The lapse of memory involved merely the events of that day, and then only for a short time, which was not at all remarkable considering the vigorous thump she received.

Hon. F. B. Wachtel of Petoskey, ex-speaker of the house of representatives, has been selected by the Democratic senatorial committee for the office of senator for the 29th senatorial district. Mr. Wachtel was chosen for this position at the primaries, but owing to misspelling of the name, he resigned and the committee selected him to fill the vacancy. This was the only means by which his name could be placed correctly by on the ballot.

Through a misunderstanding the figures given last week in these columns concerning the Booth Co's freezer, were incorrect. We stated that fifty tons were in the freezer. We more than doubled the actual contents. The error was trifling, considering the fact that by last Tuesday night the fifty ton figures were reached and fish still going in. Fourteen men are now at work on the two floors of the Booth warehouse, to say nothing of the force on the lake that are practically a part of the Booth force.

Mr. Sam Hyman Enthusiastic Over Michigan Visit.

From the New Orleans Picayune.

On his return to New Orleans following a most pleasant stay at Charlevoix, Mich., Mr. Sam Hyman stated that the many people he came in contract with were very heartily in favor of New Orleans as the one "Logical Point" at which to celebrate the 1915 event. "One of our enthusiastic supporters," said Mr. Hyman, "is Mr. Willard A. Smith editor of the Charlevoix Sentinel, who is treating his support to the exposition cause.

"As a matter of fact," further stated Mr. Hyman, "it is to the interest of the people living in that section of the country to favor New Orleans in this matter. An exposition in this section will be of benefit in the section referred to.

"The people at Charlevoix pay close attention to the matter of railroad discriminations and advertising that it has proved very beneficial to the city. Charlevoix is the only place in the Pacific coast are also attracting the attention of the people of Michigan."

Mr. Hyman spoke of the publicity campaign that has been conducted by the World's Panama Exposition Company and the benefits that will accrue at New Orleans as a result.

The Halloween Nonsense

Certain ancient customs which from time immemorial were suffered as licensed evils—licensed by apparent common consent—have long ago killed off by excessive misuse. Notable among these abuses was the charivari, which even within the memory of the writer was considered a necessary part of the marriage festivities.

It has gone, long ago, and this Hallowe'en nonsense should join it as a relic of barbarism. On Monday night last Charlevoix was given over to a reckless, howling mob of boys, who disregarded the rights of citizens.

Two boys of good families were caught in the central school building at a late hour and lodged in jail, where they spent the remainder of the night and part of the next day. A big lot-fire of boxes was built in the rear of the Fagan building and the Milner store, which called out the new companies, at considerable expense to the city.

Boys who perpetrate these acts are not necessarily bad, but they have gradually grown into the notion that law is suspended on Hallowe'en night for their especial benefit. This is not so.

Public sentiment and the law should put a stop to these annual carnivals of folly and trespass, and we believe they will.

Not Altogether Clear.

We are told in the dispatches that a Traverse City game warden recently arrested a man who was passing in the form of the hide of a coon, a skunk and a mink.?

It is not made clear as to whether the coon hide was of the liquid or quintupled sort. If the former, the deputy executed his authority, as the case, seemed to coon it, in Charlevoix at least, confined to the summer season.

But the skunk skin disclosed a degree of culpability, that warrants the fullest penalty of an outraged law. That any man, created in the image of his Maker, should willfully take the life of one of these harmless and beautiful creatures, just for its pelt, is past understanding. We are daily becoming more attached to these charming, little evening ramblers, and are growing more and more fond of the pastime of their nocturnal presence in the back yard. There is no creature more interesting than a skunk, unless it be a Traverse City game warden.

As to the mink, we do not venture an opinion. What should be a mink in the criticism of public officials is, though we question the ability of a Traverse City game warden to intelligently distinguished between a mink skin and the hide of a rhinoceros.

A Business Proposition.

As a rule, when you, as a partisan voter, hear the inevitable "Republican voter" for his vote, he will answer you that with him, it is a business and not a political proposition.

In considering the merits of the two Charlevoix county tickets we feel safe in accepting this pronouncement as logical, and we appeal to the individual voter on the grounds alone that it is plausibly a business proposition, from representative down the corner. We are willing to meet the opposition squarely on that basis of reasoning, and abide the result.

We therefore, as a supporter of the republican county ticket, appeal to the individual voter to give that ticket to support because we believe the best interests of the county lie in that direction. Portraits and platitudes do not win elections. Reason and common sense say what makes votes.

There is a lack of veracity and logic in the so-called labor ticket, because there is no county issue involved. Labor is represented in every party by nomination to the candidates on the republican ticket are known to be in every essential of efficiency, labor's friends. The republican ticket, while a unanimous nomination, was not a mere selection, with not a second chance to sustain it. It is a case of certainty against expectancy.

We point to the record. The republican party has a standard to uphold. It can not make a mistake in filling the vacancy. A majority of the republican candidates are known quantities. It was guilty of legislating so and so, and so and so. It was guilty of appointing so and so, and so and so allows from the effices of the state.

"It was pledged to reformation in the state department, and the secretary of state has continued to misappropriate state property, and the auditor general has compelled to resign his office.

"And to its broken pledges the record of political theft, of public abuse, of scandal and of legislative incompetency, and the picture must be a humiliating one to those who helped put the Democrats of Michigan into power."

It is not at all strange that Mr. Hemans says over these pages of domestic history and gags back 40 years in order to find some reason on which to base a present appeal for the election of another Democratic legislature.

ON HIS FATAL DAY

Death of Henry M. Enos—The Peaceful Close of a Useful and Honorable Life.

Peacefully and painlessly, Henry M. Enos, honored citizen, scholar and Christian gentleman, passed from earth last Sunday morning—the 70th anniversary of his birth.

Mr. Enos has been in steadily failing health the past two years, and for the past year he has been, for the most part, confined to his room. Except for a cheerful trouble that first gave intimation of decline, it cannot be said that disease in any of its dreaded and painful forms was a direct cause of dissolution. It was a gradual dwindling of life's vital forces. It is a source of great satisfaction to his surviving relatives and friends that his mind was clear up to the moment of his death. For several months past he had realized that he was surely approaching the hour of parting, and has watched, with a calmness to ever change, the sickening hand of the destroyer. With the confidence and assurance of the true Christian he easily awaited the end, his only solicitude being for those who tenderly ministered to his welfare. Almost his last utterance was an expression of regret that he was so helpless.

Henry M. Enos was born in Syracuse, N. Y., where he received his early training and where he received the rudiments of his education. As a young man he came to Michigan, and at Hillsdale College he continued the mental training that was but the beginning of his education. After his marriage, he adopted teaching as a profession, and, soon after his marriage, he accepted the superintendency of the public schools at Ovid, Mich., where he remained several years, moving from there to Cadillac, where for several years he was at the head of the public schools. In 1880 he accepted the position of superintendent of the Charlevoix schools and continued most acceptably in that position until 1892, when he resigned to enter business. In the same year he purchased the Rifenburg Shoring mill, now known as the Argo mill, and up to the time of his recent retirement from business, he had built up the business growing into a corporation and extending its operation from Southern and East Jordan. In 1898 his wife died, since which time his daughter has presided over his home.

In no home life this it is difficult to write of the life and achievements of such a man as Henry M. Enos. The story has largely been crystallized into a creed—the creed typified form of his life. It was the creed of a Christian gentleman; what more need be said; He leaves a son and daughter—Ralph C. Enos, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mr. A. A. Swinton, of this city.

The funeral was from the residence Tuesday afternoon, Rev. H. A. Putnam, pastor of the Congregational church, of which deceased was a faithful worker, officiating. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather the attendance was large. All business places were closed during the hours of the funeral and interment.

The Foot Ball Game.

Last Saturday the foot ball team added a fourth victory to its list by defeating Bellaire to the time of 45 to 0. The game was played on the Bellaire school grounds for the intrained Bellaire eleven was no match for Coach Wise's aggregation.

It now looks as if by good consistent work the team will make a clean sweep of the games left on its schedule, and of the northern Michigan championship next Saturday. Next Saturday East Jordan comes here and the team will be put thru a good week of hard practice in preparation. So far the boys by your rooting and quarters.

AN ARMY OFFICER'S WIFE

by DORENCE KEENE

CARIONALLY something happens, and it usually happens in some forlorn outpost of our United States army. In northern Canada, of where civilization is not and murder and adventure and danger are most in evidence. Especially when that happens somebody in Washington sees things and somebody else thinks and behind, there sighing an from marriage, under happily protective military wing, early civilization in their certificate of respect at the point of the bayonet. For, in moment of stress, the thousands of miles of grizzly and barking trees, Polyandry gets a hysterical upstroke. Also, sometimes, a very ground floor, porch, or parlor garlands and ten and whatnots. It depends upon the circumstances—that is the political circumstances.

To the men in the army, the gals back home still mean are accented with childish delight. Somewhere in the bottom of his well drilled and clouded heart there is the remembrance of having done a big thing well, and being most human about it. Somehow, he always car his medal of his fellow citizen. And then, again, garlands are few, while congressional committees are pendlin. The army knows that it is useless to expect to compete in the gentlemen from Long Island or Pennsylvania, so that a little brown brother, hooping in and out of the jungle, fantastically decorate crawling up an American citizen with a polished belt, has little regard for the young gentlemen at home. And, of course, neither has Sammy, Jr., the unsentimental gentleman who has or listed for reasons best known to himself and whose duty it is to catch the aforesaid Moro, and generally clear the path for those that follow after. Private Sammy does his work and he does it according to circumstances, which are sometimes complicated. Therefore it happens on occasions that the aforesaid Moro is sent, yelping into eternity and Sammy Jr. regards himself with a pleasant grin. Also, circumstances force him to other unusual steps. Once there was a famous fort, Mickey by name, who took the town of Longfungaen, "naked as Vapus," and who, prior thereto, helped the department of information of the British empire, with the judicious administration of his cleaning rod. Which goes to show that between Private Sammy and Private Tommy there is a difference, although, in understanding—particularly as regards the treatment of black and brown brethren.

All this is merely preamble, but when the Moro has been carted away and the congressional committee has committed itself on the garland, the romantic Private Sammy goes back to his own life, which consists in a highly incorrect affair, somehow, there remains in his brain an impression that he is allowed the particular happiness and the pleasure in life. It is his own way and to divers places. The particular idea of him as the Prince Charming of the gunwaled knights of Fort Worden, have heard his romantic chorus, the waterwaves patrolling the dominion of Fort Riley know his footprint. Im a Florida sandsoil, in the snows of Alaska, in the heat of the islands, he pursues it, and catches what little there is of it.

The world when praises and blames him knows him not, nor his life. The world's life is entirely different. A ponderous civilian, in the widow of the paying teller of a local bank observed an officer in uniform standing behind him.

"Well, I guess the country is safe," observed the retired one, gazing superciliously at the uniform.

"Thank you, sir," said the officer, saluting.

This officer was a boy lieutenant, and he carried a wife. For within his short space of years he had played with the fangs of death and made smile in the powers of darkness. A short time previously, at Luzon, he was ordered to fill the bodies of two soldiers that had been murdered. The orders were to find the bodies, so of course they went and did. With seven others and a surgeon, he pursued his way through jungle scrub and cholera infected lands, without food, drenched with rain, sleeping in swamps. They found them. One was tied alive over a nested hill, after being stabed with a bolo, and the other had been knifed and gagged with a portion of his own flesh. Presumably the superfilious circumferential gentleman did not know of such things and—this is what officers there seem to be so many citizens of the country who know ideas of the work of the army is equally limited. Presumably, the men who do such things cannot talk about them.

It follows that with the man of the army has to offer, it must be the army woman as she is outside so full known to the civilian world. It seem is her life a succession of society events and realizes not the horrible other side. This is an illustration.

Some years ago, in "the days of the empire," a little army woman went as a bride with her doctor husband to Manila. They were ordered at once to a native village up the valley, where a company of infantry had been stationed to guard the water supply for Manila. The surface was bad, had a habit of throwing the bodies of victims of cholera into the rivers and wells, thereby making life most unpleasant for those whether who had to drink. Such things are not mentioned in the society reports of the press.

Of course the wife could have remained behind, but she did not. She was possessed with the article belief common to the army that her husband came in for dinner and rushed away again. Whereupon little Mrs. Army Woman went to her trunk and for the first time unpacked all the finery of the days that had been.

"I found a dress which I had worn at a dance at the Presidio the last time" she said, "and I cried and I cried."

Before leaving, the husband had pushed a chest against the door, locking her in completely, this being Around the safest place. Therefore on leaving he had to crawl through the window, and as he hung on the window sill she heard him drop with a blasted like. Then she heard him drop with a splash into the disease infested pool below. After another it was so nice a spot for the pursuit of happiness as could be found.

Then she waited for the loneliness and the dark and the centipedes and cried. The wind whipped the human pains against the house, and shaked down, she heard the lizards scuddling around and a big one outside, in a sunny spot called "tuckoo" so that she jumped on in fear and alarm waiting and wondering.

All through the night she lived the horrors, her husband came in for dinner and rushed away again. Whereupon little Mrs. Army Woman went to her trunk and for the first time unpacked all the finery of the days that had been.

All through the night she lived the horrors,

"THEY FOUND THEM"

"ALL WAS THE FAIRY WHITE—PERHAPS IN THE PLACE"

"I FOUND A DRESS WHICH I HAD WORN AT A DANCE AT THE PRESIDIO"

the place of the wife is by her husband So with him she plunged through the jungle to the ocean. She was the first white woman in the valley and the only other one of her kind was 20 miles away. The situation was decidedly unpleasant. The house was like an inverted waste-paper basket, a three-roomed hamock set up in the bamboo poles. The back yard was dubbed the centipedes and scorpions—well, because every time the bride went in it she found centipedes and other things. There were other advantages. There was no stove and the cooking had to be done over bad coals. Also the water had to be boiled and purified, and also the water for drinking purposes, but also for washing.

"Water was no much cholera," she explained.

The meals were served with wire nettings over the dishes and ants and other bugs and ground there was the one thought—cholera. There were other delights. The Moros were out. A century had been boiled. The roads were knee deep in mud and the rain poured down in torrents.

There came a night when the very soul of her was tried to its utermost. The rain had fallen ceaselessly. Pools were under the house and cholera was unusually in the ravingest. The rain came down in such gusts that she had to fasten down the windows therefore making the house too dark for reading purposes. So the day long, while her husband wandered about through mud and rain, the wife sat up in the bamboo palm-trees wiping to and fo before the fury of the storm. At the appointed time she prepared dinner. She produced her row of candles. Then the storm came. There was a thunderbolt like, "What we command can we can." Now as she raged at the coward storm, the sinister letter and the conned words she wondered if she could cut off their ears. Somehow she came to the feeling that the girlhood days made her choke. You see it was the rain and the river and the centipedes and things which got on her nerves.

The storm passed and there followed the silences, which, unusual, of chirping water, of moving wind, unusual. Ultimately she heard the splash of lonely American boots, and before consulting her a wet specimen of Private Sammy, marching philosophically up and down on country go, she called to him, half hysterical, and he answered her with cheering words. Reassured, she waited for her husband's appearance, wrapped in an army blanket, chilled to the heart. Later, when her husband and daylight had come, she learned that she had been sitting opposite a window with a lighted candle by her, offering a splendid mark for the prowling Filipino sharpshooters.

This was an experience and one which the fat gentleman in the bank had never imagined. To the army this incident was typical of the usual greensoldiers. The agony and bloody sweat of killing death had gripped him so often that Private Sam cannot understand why the gentlemen who employ him for the purpose of his life, realize that there are particular horrors connected with the business of making the home too dark to read by.

But he remembers the pursuit of happiness and the day comes when he is ordered to Manila. Then it is that the wives, gathered together, with the wails of Manila fade from their ears. The crowd of gentlemen who employ him are forced their trains, forming themselves into memories, horrible in their sweetness and pilloried by the perfume of the hibiscus blossoms and the fragrance of the ylang-ylang, and the tuberose flourishing while the cocoanut palms wave in the breeze, around the Lamesa—San Francisco Call.

Romance of the Sweet Pea

Without doubt, the most highly regarded and widely grown annual in Canada, and indeed of today, as it was where in this flower-loving country the garden be, or whether it belong to cottager or lord of acres, rolling clerk or cow-driving sunlelpality, the sweet pea first came to us from the Sicilian coast.

Franciscan Cupani, a monk, who was also a botanist, sent the first seeds to England in the year 1699, addressed to a Bedford schoolmaster named Dr. Uvedale. The old Middlesex doubtless was both a botanist and horticulturist, and he grew the first sweet peas ever seen in England.

Cupani called the plant Lathyrus Odoratus—Lathyrus, thereby, sniffs at odorous—an unwieldy name, out of all harmony with the winged grace of the sweet pea. Later Linnaeus cut down the clumsy designation to the present form of Lathyrus odoratus.

Dr. Uvedale found the seeds produced a plant with purple flowers, and so here we have the ancestor of the original sweet pea.

The stock was gradually multiplied, and about forty years later one Robert Parker, a Kensington gardener, was the first to offer seeds for sale.

Progress in the production of new varieties was slow in those remote days, and it was not until the year 1793 (nearly a century later than Cupani's complement of seeds) that any new color became known. In the year mentioned, however, a catalogue was issued, which described black, scarlet and white varieties.

What became of the black and scarlet sorts, if they ever existed in those two colors, is not known. The black must have been a deep purple. The blackest bloom is still the black purple Tom Thumb. In this connection, seeing that the purple sweet pea hybridists have been trying to produce a pure yellow sweet pea, it may be said that the yellowest blooms of all are always known to the cognoscenti as "Black Knights" or "Black Prince" varieties.

Clara Curtis.

A novelty in the form of a striped flower was offered in the year 1837 by Mr. James Carter, and in the year 1860 there appeared the first bicolor, or the chalice variety, which should have to sell three or four of his islands and put a mortgage on the old homestead to see the lady in the chalice. It was a staggering blow to his hopes. His dream had faded and life now stretched before him, bleak and desolate. Daily he hammed remind Kiram II. now has but one forlorn hope—that he can find a girl who will promise to ever sothing his more expensive or elaborate than a mother goose of rather better, or better, a single rose in her hair.

Panama Insect Gives Fever.

Chester, Pa.—Harry G. Fuller of Marcus Hook is suffering with a severe attack of Panama fever, contracted in a peculiar manner. He has not been in Panama, nor has he came into contact with a person who has been at work in the isthmus.

It is believed that his system was inoculated with the fever germ by mosquitoes brought from Panama by some of this year's warships, which touched at Philadelphia.

Fuller is employed at the League Island navy yard, and his physician is of the opinion that while he was working about the dirty parts of the yard he was bitten by other mosquitoes or flies brought by the ships.

Wonderful Kitchen.

The largest restaurant in the world is that of the Bon Marche, the noted department store of Paris. In this kitchen is prepared the food for the whole of the 4,000 employees of that great establishment. The smallest kettle holds 12 quarts, the largest 875 quarts. There are 50 frying pans, each of which is capable of holding 300 omlets at a time, or of frying 250 pounds of potatoes. When there are omlets for breakfast 18,000 eggs are used. The coffee machine, regularly employs 60 cooks and 100 kitchen boys.

SULTAN SEEKS WIFE

Former Ruler of Jolo Wants American Sultana

Dream of His Highness is Blighted When He View Some Freak Fashions of the Present Day.

Washington.—Whatever he visited interest was assumed in his highness, Jamalul Kiram II, Sultan of Sulu, recently visiting the United States for the purpose of making a tour of the world. He is not the high and mighty potentate he was before our collision with Spain in 1898 and the assuming under American authority of the Jolo group of islands. Prior to that the sultan was the ruler of the Jolo archipelago, consisting of 132 islands and inhabited by 85,000 people, all Mohammedans and many of them slaves. But his sovereignty was taken from him by the United States and instead of his usual revenues he was given a pension of $1,000, his slaves also were set free, slavery has long been abolished in the islands and he was given to understand that during good behavior his pension from the United States would be kind and just. Since then the sultan has supported the authority of the United States and has discouraged the making of trouble by his people.

The sultan was accompanied by his brother, Datu Hadi Wasit, and several other persons, and after a brief stay in New York, proceeded to Washington to meet President Taft, with whom he met while the latter was governor of the Philippines. The sultan is a middle man, but keenly bright and closely observant of things about him. He is well versed in the tall buildings of New York, the well-dressed crowds and the busy streets

HEMANS NOT TELLING TRUTH

Democratic Candidate's Statements Disproven by State Records.

UP TO HIM TO RETRACT

Public Acts of 1899 Will Show Two Cent Fare Regulation Was Passed During Mr. Osborn's Term as Railroad Commissioner—Hemans Would Give Credit to Dem. Legislature.

The Democrats candidate for governor is devoting much of his campaign speeches to personal criticism of Mr. Osborn, the Republican candidate. Mr. Hemans is finding his criticism on a, alleged statement of facts which in truth bear no relation to the actual facts.

In every speech made by Mr. Hemans since the beginning of the present campaign he has deliberately sought to describe his knowledge of some real important facts relating to the railroad commissioner's office during Mr. Osborn's term. He is telling the people that no two cent per mile fare scrip ever in circulation in Michigan during Mr. Osborn's term; that such a rate of fare was not provided for in Michigan during Mr. Osborn's office; that such a rate of fare was not provided for in Michigan until four years after Mr. Osborn went out of office, and that the first 2c mileage fare enactment was given by the Democratic legislature of 1891.

The truth is that the two cent fare law was in operation in Michigan during Mr. Osborn's term of office, and that the Grand Trunk railroad was carrying passengers at the 2c mileage rate, and the legislation making this requirement was enacted by the Republican legislature of 1889.

For verification of this statement, Mr. Hemans is respectfully referred to Sec. 9 of Act. No. 202 of the Public Acts of 1889.

Unless Mr. Hemans deliberately wishes to have it known to the people of Michigan that he seeks to gain political profit through falsified and misrepresentation, he should promptly admit that his statements and criticism have been without truth and unjustly directed against Mr. Osborn.

Failure on Mr. Hemans' part to promptly take this course will prove his unworthy of any vote or honor or confidential regard from the people of Michigan.

R. R. COMMISSION SUCCESS

Republican Party May Well Be Proud of Great Work Accomplished In People's Behalf.

In calling attention to some lines of increased expenditures in Michigan, even though recent years, it is noticeable that Mr. Hemans, the Democratic candidate for governor, avoids making any reference to the splendid results accomplished for the state through some of these same items of increased expense.

One of the most important legislative acts of the Republican party was the creation of the Michigan railroad commission. It has proven the people's forum, as many conditions for which complaint need to be so adequate legal remedy except by resorting to long drawn out and expensive litigation has been adjusted by it promptly and with little or no expense to either party as a large portion of effective work was done by correspondence.

Informal complaints relative to blocking street crossings, blackwalls and street crossing protection, sidewalks at railroad street crossings, establishment of farm crossings and crossing passes, drainage, building and repairing of fences, car service, conditions of tracks, safety devices, overhead wires construction, culverts, depot buildings, cars and train service, including baggage and passengers, other subordinate receive attention of the commission.

The commission has been very careful in securing the establishment of reasonable rates and refusals to shippers covering charges made in error or based on rates which were irregular or discriminating and in securing pay from the carrier for goods lost or injured in shipment.

One of the most important duties of the Michigan railroad commission is the supervision of the issuance of stock, bonds, notes and other evidences of indebtedness by public service corporations, and no such securities are permitted to be issued unless the corporation is able to make a reasonable showing of tangible property, to secure the same and that the money received from the sale of such securities is to be expended upon and for the betterment of the properties themselves, and not otherwise.

The safety of travel is being increased through the installation of additional number of safety devices and rules and the lighting of curves the more careful attention to signals and the carrying of a greater rate in the operation of trains.

The Republican party of Michigan can congratulate itself over the work disclosed in the creation of the railroad commission and for giving to such general and specific powers over matters of such importance to the general public.

Anchored.

A little chap four years of age met with the misfortune to have his hat blown into the river. When he reached home his father said to him:

"It's a wonder you didn't blow your board too."

"I couldn't," was the quick response, "it was fastened to my feet."

L. T. HEMANS' OFFICIAL RECORD

Why Nothing Is Being Said of It in This Campaign—Served as State Legislator.

ATTENDED HALF OF SESSIONS

Drew Full Pay, However—Introduced Bill to License Bucketshops in Michigan, and Voted For More Appropriation Bills Than Any Other Member.

It is worthy of note in this campaign that Lewis T. Hemans, the Democratic candidate for governor, is making no reference to his own official record. Not a word has been uttered touching his official performance or attempted accomplishments.

Yet Mr. Hemans was on the senate that through two full terms as a legislator. He was not present at more than half the sessions of the body to which he belonged, but he drew pay for full time.

He introduced a bill to provide for an additional state board. He as a candidate for governor he is now denouncing the existence of so many state boards.

Mr. Hemans introduced a bill to license bucketshops in Michigan. His bill sought to make the proposed sales and transfers through bucketshops "legitimate legal transactions." Was the people of Michigan think of the bucketshop business which would have been licensed and legalized if the Democratic candidate for governor had secured the passage of his bill?

It is shown by the fact that at the same session of the legislature following his effort a bill surely prohibiting the existence of bucketshops in Michigan became a law.

Mr. Hemans is now seemingly distressed over state expenditures, but he voted for more appropriation bills than any other member of the legislature during his term of service, and afterwards made an address in the constitutional convention declaring that it was not true that Michigan legislators had ever made extravagant appropriations.

As a member of the constitutional convention Mr. Hemans opposed the proposition that the legislature of Michigan should be power to enact laws relative to the hours and conditions under which women and children may be employed.

This proposition was especially urged by the labor organizations of Michigan. They petitioned that the constitution should give this power to the legislature. And the justice of the request was recognized by the majority of the members of the constitutional convention. It was submitted by the constitutional convention and later on was approved by the people, and is now a part of our state constitution.

But Lewis T. Hemans made a speech against it and voted against it, essentially referring to it as "a little piece of sentiment." Why is Mr. Hemans not referring to this feature of his official record?

It will be observed that Mr. Hemans has an official record. He was a member of the legislature through four years. Why does he entirely fail to have any claim to favor from the people of Michigan on the work he performed, or attempted to perform, as a supposed representative of the people?

RECORDS COMPARED.

Lawton T. Hemans Did Nothing Himself, Yet Is Finding Fault With Osborn's Accomplishments.

The same excuse used by politicians to expose accounts which are now being made by the Democratic candidate for governor with reference to Chase S. Osborn when he was railroad commissioner have been made in connection with every successful effort to compel the railroad corporations to reduce their railroad rates and passenger fares and to pay the created taxes.

The expenditures about which Mr. Hemans is finding fault have increased the income of the state of Michigan from railroad sources from less than $1,000,000 to more than $5,000,000.

They have resulted in reduction of railroad fares from three cents to two cents per mile.

They have brought to the people of this state advantages and conveniences and safety appliances in connection with railroad movements hardly equalled in value and desirability by those enjoyed in any other state in the union.

As a member of the legislature through two terms Mr. Hemans did nothing and said nothing in the direction of the work successfully accomplished by Mr. Osborn.

Mr. Hemans voted for all appropriation bills. He insisted that Michigan legislatures had never been extravagant and exhibited not the least interest or concern in any direction of state need or state economy.

No stronger appeal could possibly be made in behalf of the Republican candidate for governor as compared with his opponent than a fair comparison of the official accomplishments of Chase S. Osborn with the official record of Lawton T. Hemans.

Quaint Remedies.

Among the remedies of the Greek church in Macedonia the following potions are recorded as highly useful: To greatly sweet enemies write the name "Known in justice," dissolve it in water and give your enemy to drink thereof, and he will be purified. For a fainted and frightened man take three dry chestnuts and one thistle and three leaves of old wine and let him drink thereof early and late. Write also "in the beginning was the word" and let him carry it.

IT WOULD BRING DISASTER.

Business Stagnation Would Follow Democratic Victory at Polls.

An appeal that should receive earnest consideration from every every Michigan voter comes from the State Republican committee, referring to the importance of results involved in the coming election, the State Republican says:

A Republican defeat in November would in all probability precipitate a more serious setback for all the great industries than came in the late months of 1907. A Democratic house of representatives, if elected this year, would destroy all chances for getting the progressive legislation the Republicans promised in their platform of 1906, and would nullify everything that the Republican president and senate could attempt to do in the last half of the Taft administration.

Do the voters remember the panic of 1893, which the Republican defeat of 1892 caused? The panic came short by after the Democratic president entered office and before the Democratic congress had a chance to assemble. Everybody who was old enough to recall the disaster of sixteen years ago will pray that no such calamity will visit the country again. The country at this moment is exceedingly prosperous. It will be still more prosperous by next fall and winter if the Republicans carry the country this year. A Democratic victory, however, would, because of the uncertainty it would bring, unquestionably call a halt on enterprise, would close many mills, would reduce wages in the mills which would continue to run, and would throw back some of the dull days which the country saw a decade and a half ago.

Three years ago, the Democratic preached tariff for revenue and denounced the Republican doctrine of protection to American labor. Some Republicans in number sufficient to make a majority—were convinced and the Democratic tariff for revenue was voted.

Business was demoralized.

Millions of men were thrown out of employment.

The farmers' market was destroyed.

Women and children went hungry because the husbands and fathers could not find work.

Men stood by eight on the floors in the corridors of city halls, or in big starts or lanes, and by day they walked the city streets or the country highways pleading for the privilege of working at any wage, or no wage, or out for something to eat.

That was not very long ago.

The present tariff is not any too perfect, but it is far from a destructive measure. It's revision should be completed by a Republican congress and not by a Democratic congress.

Your vote will count for disaster and industrial stagnation, or for continued advancement and satisfactory progress.

Which shall it be?

STATE EXPENSES VS. STATE EARNINGS

Comparisons That Are Complimentary to Republican State Legislation.

Mr. Hemans, the Democratic candidate for governor, says it cost the state of Michigan $10,141,000 to meet its expenses for a period of sixty years. He then recites the further fact that an equal amount, $10,141,000, has been required to meet the state expenses during the past ten years.

Mr. Hemans makes this statement the leading feature of his campaign speech. He throws about it quite a bit of controlled exhibitment.

Here here is another fact directly relating to these sixty year and ten year periods which Mr. Hemans has failed to take note of.

The total earnings of the state of Michigan applicable to the primary school fund for the sixty years to which Mr. Hemans refers were only $11,057,000, while the revenue from corporation fees and railroad taxes alone applicable to primary school fund during the past ten years have been $40,000,000.

In other words, the earnings of the state of Michigan during the past ten years included in Mr. Hemans' comparison have been almost 100 per cent greater than the income of the state for the entire period of sixty years included in Mr. Hemans' statement.

And there is yet another fact which Mr. Hemans should include in his comparisons.

Two years of Democratic state administration, the only two years of that sort of administration in Michigan within the memory of the present generation, cost the people of the state of Michigan $400,000 more than twenty years of a previous period had cost.

As that rate has full years of Democratic administration would have cost the people of Michigan as much as 125 years under other management.

These comparisons are interesting and valuable, perhaps but they are not valuable to Mr. Hemans for Democratic party purposes if they are given as the records of the state prepared them.

His Other Name.

The candidate for the place of coach man had been weighed and was not wanting, according to his own "credentials." Then the question of his name, which was Patrick, came up. The mistress objected to it in her heart, so she explained that it was her custom always to call her coachmen by her family name. Had he any objections?

"Not the slightest, ma'am."

"What is your last name, Patrick?"

"Fitzpatrick, ma'am."

WORKED LIKE A CHARM.

She Joined a Card Club in Order to Forget Her Work.

An Atchison woman who found the monotony of dishwashing, cooking and laundry work probing too much for family was urged to join a card club. "It will take your mind off your work," she was told, and so she joined. In order to attend she had to get up that morning an hour earlier to get her work done; a neighbor girl was hired to stay with the baby, and when, finally, everyone had left the house she—nine fifteen minutes late she was followed by the screams of her three children. Instead they couldn't be taken along. But she had her mind taken off her work at the card party. Of that there is no doubt, for when she made a mistake her partner, a stranger, called eight over her, then picked her up and shook her, and then chewed us her for fifteen minutes. She became so frightened that the little wife she had under her hat fell, and she made another mighty mistake with another partner, and this woman, as a perfect lady, talked to her in a way the woman should have been ashamed to talk to a dog. It was more than she could endure, and, weeping like a spinkling cart, she got up and went home.

"It did even more than it promised," she told her husband. "Nothing has ever happened to me in all my life that so effectively took my mind off my work. Why, there were times when I even forgot I had you too and all the children."—Atchison Globe.

Athletics and the Unfit.

Those who are unfit should not indulge in athletic games, says a warning by Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Outing. A boy, for instance, is a little weak, after a mild attack of infectious fever, pneumonia, influenza or tonsilitis, and his heart is beating faster and more violently than it should or exertion, but the team wants him or he wants a record, or both, and away he goes into training.

"Suddenly one day the heart can no longer drive as its overtired of blood, and down goes the runner or oarsman in an attack of heart failure," and athletics get all the discredit.

The same danger lies when there is no training, the sport being purely for fun. It lies also where the girl just convalescent persists in taking part in a long antifebrated dance. Only that phase of athletic sports which is benefited in common prudence is necessary to avoid such perils.

Defos and Savings Banks.

Though Disraeli and Gladstone was the founder of one first savings bank, the first suggestion came from Daniel De Foe. When he found Robinson Crusoe to hide from the Indians in a small school fund for the sixty years to days which the country saw a decade and a half ago.

Mr. Hemans introduced a bill to license bucketshops in Michigan. His bill sought to make the proposed sales and transfers through bucketshops "legitimate legal transactions." Was the people of Michigan think of the bucketshop business which would have been licensed and legalized if the Democratic candidate for governor had secured the passage of his bill?

It is shown by the fact that at the same session of the legislature following his effort a bill surely prohibiting the existence of bucketshops in Michigan became a law.

Mr. Hemans is now seemingly distressed over state expenditures, but he voted for more appropriation bills than any other member of the legislature during his term of service, and afterwards made an address in the constitutional convention declaring that it was not true that Michigan legislators had ever made extravagant appropriations.

As a member of the constitutional convention Mr. Hemans opposed the proposition that the legislature of Michigan should be power to enact laws relative to the hours and conditions under which women and children may be employed.

This proposition was especially urged by the labor organizations of Michigan. They petitioned that the constitution should give this power to the legislature. And the justice of the request was recognized by the majority of the members of the constitutional convention. It was submitted by the constitutional convention and later on was approved by the people, and is now a part of our state constitution.

But Lewis T. Hemans made a speech against it and voted against it, essentially referring to it as "a little piece of sentiment." Why is Mr. Hemans not referring to this feature of his official record?

It will be observed that Mr. Hemans has an official record. He was a member of the legislature through four years. Why does he entirely fail to have any claim to favor from the people of Michigan on the work he performed, or attempted to perform, as a supposed representative of the people?

RECORDS COMPARED.

Lawton T. Hemans Did Nothing Himself, Yet Is Finding Fault With Osborn's Accomplishments.

The same excuse used by politicians to expose accounts which are now being made by the Democratic candidate for governor with reference to Chase S. Osborn when he was railroad commissioner have been made in connection with every successful effort to compel the railroad corporations to reduce their railroad rates and passenger fares and to pay the created taxes.

The expenditures about which Mr. Hemans is finding fault have increased the income of the state of Michigan from railroad sources from less than $1,000,000 to more than $5,000,000.

They have resulted in reduction of railroad fares from three cents to two cents per mile.

They have brought to the people of this state advantages and conveniences and safety appliances in connection with railroad movements hardly equalled in value and desirability by those enjoyed in any other state in the union.

As a member of the legislature through two terms Mr. Hemans did nothing and said nothing in the direction of the work successfully accomplished by Mr. Osborn.

Mr. Hemans voted for all appropriation bills. He insisted that Michigan legislatures had never been extravagant and exhibited not the least interest or concern in any direction of state need or state economy.

No stronger appeal could possibly be made in behalf of the Republican candidate for governor as compared with his opponent than a fair comparison of the official accomplishments of Chase S. Osborn with the official record of Lawton T. Hemans.

Quaint Remedies.

Among the remedies of the Greek church in Macedonia the following potions are recorded as highly useful: To greatly sweet enemies write the name "Known in justice," dissolve it in water and give your enemy to drink thereof, and he will be purified. For a fainted and frightened man take three dry chestnuts and one thistle and three leaves of old wine and let him drink thereof early and late. Write also "in the beginning was the word" and let him carry it.

Funerals in England.

At the time of Queen Victoria's funeral a writer in the Undertakers' Journal complained that, while royal burials were still conducted in an impressive manner, a sad lack of ceremonial distinguished the funerals of commoners. Even after from the town abandoned, blue after idea has been dropped, each meaning a distinct loss to our business. An undertaker in the west end, referring to the recent death of a noble lord, contrasts the forty years ago I buried a member of this family, and the funeral did come to £250 ($1,250). Ten years later I buried another. When it came to pass over £100 ($500). Fifteen years ago I buried a third at a cost of £250 ($1,250), but the bill for this one did not reach £75 ($375)."

Origin of a Famous Saying.

Emilio, who is sometimes called the father of undertakers, taught this subject in the famous school at Alexandria. He ordered one day by the king of Egypt (Ptolemy Soter) whether he could not teach him the science in a shorter way. Emilio answered in words that have been memorable ever since, "Sire, there is no royal road to learning." Not many scraps of conversation have lived, as this reply has, for 2,200 years.

CAPITAL FOR FARMING.

Suggestions as to Grange Funds That Might Prove Profitable.

Among the various activities of the grange and in addition to all the good deeds to be credit in past years and do not remember to have ever heard it suggested that the surplus funds of state and national granges be devoted to the part in the financial success of worthy, needy farmers. However, the New England Homestead directs attention to the fact that the different state granges in New England have anywhere from $5,000 to $25,000 in the treasury which is doing no one any particular good. The surplus increases so fast that in at least one state grange the executive committee was in doubt how best to dispose of the funds. The national grange has better ideas disposed had away.

If our granges readers will get close to the real rural problems of New England they will find the task of capital one crying need. Then way not utilize these extra funds to the everlasting credit of the grange, the spirit of agriculture and the encouragement of the industrious and worthy farmer who is struggling along with bold hands tied, dingly through lack of funds to do as well as he knows how? Through such work would the grange find its true mission and it would come more for the principles upon which the grange was founded than a dozen sociables, harvest feasts, dancing parties, etc. Of course this plan should be worked out carefully so there would be no danger of misappropriation or waste of funds. With that guarantee how much better it would be to help the farmers than to hoard away the money.

Aching Voice.

"Brooks," said Divery, "that's the second time I've heard you use the phrase 'aching voice.' I wish you would tell me how a voice can ache."

THE GRANGE FIELD

Activities of Patrons of Husbandry in Various States.

Co-operation a Prominent Feature in All States Whereby Money Is Saved in Buying and Made in Selling. Kansas a Remarkable Exponent of Working Together For Mutual Interest—Dates When State Grange Meetings Occur.

(Special Correspondence.)

The following facts about the work being done in the grange in the various states have been secured through the various state sources. It shows what diversities in aims and purposes the grange has in different communities.

New Hampshire—Among the co-operative enterprises fostered by the Grange Mutual Fire Insurance company, New Hampshire Grange Life insurance association and mixed small or underwritings, all of which are grange co-operative enterprises. Among the specific objects which the grange is trying to accomplish are the further equitable and scientific taxation of the larger support of the State Agricultural college. The next state grange meeting will be held at Concord, Dec. 20-22.

Michigan—Direct buying—that is, without the middleman's services—is being carried on very extensively in this state. The mill insurance is one of the most successful of the grange ventures in the past year for the first time and seems to be meeting with very good results. The question of fair distribution of school moneys, regulating the transportation of farm products, improving the roads and securing special taxes for the same, are prominent in the next meeting of the state grange will be held at Traverse City, Dec. 13-16.

Ohio—There are three inland grange stores in the state doing a large and profitable business. An orchard and nurserymen's exchange, with headquarters at Columbus, Ohio, has been established for selling farmers' products and buying such as fertilizers, fruit trees, etc. Among the grange enterprises the store at Hudson is one of the most successful, and is growing in size and scope. Among the specific objects which the state grange is working for are legislation for better roads, a state system of agriculture and for expending money appropriated for building and maintaining roads, encouragement of school attendance and an amendment to the educational laws in which the rural schools shall have an opportunity to the different towns in proportion to the number of children instead of in proportion to the number of children of the municipalities. Ohio has the largest state grange in the world.

Indiana—The executive committee of the state grange has made arrangements for several years with various manufacturers and jobbers of farm wares to grangers at wholesale prices. Many days have been spent in conferring with many firms whereby mutual loss of the grange not buyer cost reduction than would result on such goods. The state grange has made investigations of the cost of manufacture of fertilizer compounds to facilitate the purchase of fertilizers at lower prices. They also have trade arrangements with many firms whereby members of the grange can buy at a reduction from retail prices on dry goods, groceries, farm implements, sewing machines, etc. In specific objects are to reduce the number of school districts, including no one under the state and homesteading all differences among members of the state grange will meet at Zanesville, Dec. 13-15.

Kansas—The co-operative enterprises of the grange are the Johnson County Co-operative association, at Olathe; Spring Hill Co-operative association, Spring Hill; Linn County Co-operative association, Cadmus; New Lancaster Co-operative association, New Lancaster; Fairmont Co-operative association, Fairmont; Columbus Co-operative association, Columbus. The total sales for the year ending Dec. 31, 1906, increased over $270,000 since Jan. 1 last. The co-operative committee of the state grange reported at the last meeting of the state grange, held at Topeka, Dec. 4-6, that in less than thirty days would grow another crop. STRAUSS WISHES TO RETIRE

AMBASSADOR TO TURKEY ANXIOUS TO LEAVE SERVICE.

United States and Ottoman Governments Are Without Single Diplomatic Hitch.

Washington.—Believing he has accomplished his mission, Oscar S. Straus, the American ambassador to Turkey, is desirous of retiring from the diplomatic field and return to the United States permanently.

Mr. Straus saw the president and reported that all the matters in dispute between Turkey and the United States which he had been delegated to adjust have been satisfactorily disposed of, leaving the two nations for the first time in many years without a single diplomatic bitch between them.

Because of this state of affairs and for the reason that his acceptance of the Turkish ambassadorship was based on the representation that his services were needed to restore harmony between the two governments, Mr. Straus feels that his mission has been accomplished and there is no further reason for him to expatriate himself. He has not resigned his post and if the president insists upon it Mr. Straus will return to Constantinople at the end of his sixty days' leave of absence.

Following the Methodist services at the church eulogies were delivered by Senator Cummins, Gov. Hon. Charles M. Chicago.—The 1910 baseball pennant was won by the Philadelphia American league team, the men from the Quaker city defeating the Chicago Nationals four out of five games.

At the deciding contest on Sunday at the Chicago grounds, which had extended a ball game in Chicago—37,374—was present, and up to the eighth inning one of the greatest exhibitions of "rooting" ever witnessed in this city. When Chicago scored in the second inning the "fans" went wild, and when the Quaker City men took the lead in the fifth the crowd begged and pleaded with their favorite to come back and win out. But, after the fatal eighth, when Philadelphia scored five runs they sat back in their seats and watched silently the end of the football game. Triumph over the veterans whom they had regarded as unbeatable.

Brilliant work on the latter the ten man of the series, fought a great pitchers' battle for seven innings and thrown then blew in the eighth the entire Athletic team seemed to be bad unnerved Brown had. Four hits, two of them doubles, a wild throw by Schulte and a wild pitch by the three-fingered twitter, sent five Athletic players across the plate, and blasted the hopes of the Cub fellow fans.

Collins, the second baseman of the Philadelphia, was the star of the game, he made three doubles and a single, and, when the battle was on, stole third. Baker, Philadelphia's big speed, in fact Collins was a large factor in every contest between the two teams.

DEATH FOR DOCTOR CRIPPEN

FOUND GUILTY OF WIFE MURDER AND SENTENCED TO HANG.

Lord Chief Justice Severely Arraigns Prisoner, Who is Unmoved When Sentence Pronounced.

London.—Dr Harvey Hawley Crippen was Saturday sentenced to death for the killed chief justice of England. He will be hanged on November 15. He required only 23 minutes for the jury to find the American physician guilty of murdering his actress wife, Belle Elmore, whose mutilated body was found under the cellar floor of their house.

Crippen, in reply to the usual questions of Lord Alverstone if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon him, replied in a low voice: "I still protest my innocence."

When the judge pronounced the death sentence Crippen listened unmoved so far as outward appearances showed.

Later the doctor was sentenced the foreman of the jury handed to the lord chief justice a note, after looking at which the justice said: "That shall be forwarded to the proper quarter."

The "proper quarter" might mean the home secretary, who has jurisdiction in such matters. The jurors refused to discuss the incident.

The trial of Ethel Lenove, Crippen's sweetheart, concluded yesterday and the jury retired to consider the case.

Following the finishing services of the church eulogies were delivered by Senator Cummins, Hon. Charles M. Stuart, Chicago; Governor Carroll, on behalf of the people of Iowa; Senator Hughes, as representative of the United States senate; Bishop William Fraser McDowell of Chicago, "A Patriot Leader."

LENEVE NOT GUILTY

CRIPEN'S SWEETHEART IS ACQUITTED BY JURY OF MURDER CHARGE.

TRIAL LASTS THREE HOURS

Crown Prosecutor Fails to Prove Girl Had Knowledge of Dentist's Intention or Crime Itself.

London.—Ethel Clare Leneve was acquitted Friday of the charge of being an accessory after the fact in the murder of Mrs. Belle Elmore Crippen in old Bailey court after a trial that lasted three hours.

It was for love of Miss Leneve that Dr. H. H. Crippen, now under death sentence, murdered his wife. The crown counsel, Richard Muir, failed to show that Miss Leneve had knowledge of either the American's intention or of the crime itself.

No witnesses were called by the defense. Immediately upon the conclusion of the speech of Miss Leneve's attorney, F. E. Smith, Justice Alverstone delivered his charge to the jury and they retired, returning in twenty-two minutes with a verdict of acquittal.

Miss Leneve's slim, girlish figure was the center of interest as she stood before the bar and, in a sweet, low voice, replied to the court's formal question as to how she would plead:

"Not guilty, my lord."

Crippen's former chief assistant as chief counsel for the girl. After Ethel had left the prisoner, which had brought her from Tilston Jail, pellegrom had to see the girl pass and on her through the mob of curious women.

In the court room the spectators seem were filled with brilliantly dressed women.

News Editor Purvis of the London Daily Mail was fined £100 and costs for publishing an alleged confession of Dr. H. H. Crippen shortly after the murder. Purvis, a reporter Tyn in Canada. Purvis was committed to jail pending the payment of the fine.

RUIN WROUGHT BY CYCLONE

Believed 100 Lives Lost in Storm, Tidal Wave and Volcanic Eruption in Southern Italy.

Rome.—The extent of the havoc wrought Monday by the strange elemental combination of cyclone, tidal wave and volcanic eruption on the slopes of Vesuvius and on the island of Ischia, has not yet been definitely determined, owing to the interruption of communications.

One hundred persons are said to have been killed. The number of lives lost will probably be great.

The disaster appears to have come in the form of a cyclone, having three centers, the first over the island of Ischia, the second over the town of Torre del Greco on the east coast of the bay of Naples, and the third sweeping the gulf of Salerno.

Accompanying the cyclone were a violent storm, a tidal wave and violent eruptions from Mount Vesuvius. The storm centered in the island of Ischia, the tidal wave in the town of Torre del Greco.

Many houses collapsed in this city, due to the undermining of the ground by the earth during the recent volcanic eruptions, and thirty feet of the foundations of the roads in the outlying districts.

"Holstlaw later asked me what was in for him in letting the contract," testified Knox. "I asked him if $500 would be satisfactory. He said it was not enough."

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Bickley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburg with the forged notes in the possession of his client, Hamilton Ward, president of the Merchants' National bank. Ward's daughter, Alison West, is his fiancee. Bickley's friend, Jack Allison, is a girl of whom Alison is jealous. Bickley's daughter, Alison West, He sees her for a moment in the station. Ward, Bickley, Allison and Alison West go to the Pittsburg hotel. He gives her flowers and she promises to wear them in a dinning stopper in the dining room. Bickley sees the flowers on the table and thinks she changed her dress and chatting are missing. The man he knows is a stranger in Pittsburg. Bickley is shown to his room by a porter who tells him that the man he saw in the dining room was a stranger. Bickley's room is next to that of Miss Allison, who has confided to a girl in the hotel that she is in love with Bickley. Bickley's valet, Harris, reports that the man he saw was Philip Dodge, who he learned from the porter, by the girl to date. His watch is broken.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

Her voice and my arm were helping me to my feet. "Mr. Bickley, I'm—I'm all up in a second. Are you hurt?"

"No, only bruised. Do you think you can walk?"

I drew up one foot after another, gingerly.

"Your cover to move all right," I remarked dubiously. "Would you mind telling me where the back of my head has gone? I can't help thinking it isn't there."

She made a quick examination. "It's pretty badly bumped," she said. "You must have fallen on it."

I had got up on my unlipped elbow by that time, but the pain drove me back. "Pretty bad, is it?" I groaned, entreated her. "It's no sight for a woman. If—if there's a boy out to the up this arm, I might be able to do something. There might be people under those cars!"

"Then it is too late to help," she repeated sadly. A little shower of feathers, each carrying its fiery lamp, blew over us from some burning pillow. A part of the wreck collapsed with a crash. In a remote cabin I seemed to play a man's part in the tragedy going on all around. I got to my knees. Then I realized what I had not noticed before: The hand and wrist of the broken left arm were jammed through the handle of the portable grip. I gasped now and then sickeningly.

"You must not do that," the girl insisted. I noticed now that she kept her back to the wreck, her eyes steadily on me. "Mr. Bickley, your left arm is broken. The bone is right through the handle of the portable grip. I think you must suddenly.

"You must not do that," the girl insisted. I noticed now that she kept her back to the wreck, her eyes steadily on me. "Mr. Bickley, your left arm is broken. The bone is right through the handle of the portable grip. I think you must suddenly.

"Will it have to be cut off?" I asked as calmly as I could. I felt as were redhot stabs of agony clear to my neck, but we were doing everything we could for the time.

"Yes," she replied, with downcast eyes. "Have you a knife—I could do it myself. You might sit here and hold your arm steady."

Fly that time my returning faculties had realized that the weight of the wreck rested, not the arm. The dizziness was leaving and I was gradually becoming conscious.

"If you pull, it might come," I suggested. "And with that weight on it I think I will cease to be five feet eleven inches of baby."

She tried gently to loosen the handle. But it would not move, and at last, we were a baseball player of a young man with slight priestlighter."

A Logical Landlord.

Many a tenant will sympathize with the lady who lived in Spring Street in the Philadelphia Record. He was renting a cottage. Some weeks the landlord had refused to repair. One day the owner met the lady.

"James," he said, "I shall have to take your rent."

"What for?" asked James, anxiously. "Have taxes gone up?"

"No," the landlord answered, "but I see you've painted the house and put in a new range and bathtub. That, of course, makes it worth more rent."

Now He Knows.

"On what grounds does your father object to me?" he asked.

"On any grounds within a mile of your house," she answered.

We surely owe to men the same duty as we owe to pictures—to try to see them in the best light.—Emerson.

A woman hates her enemies longer than she loves her friends.

"Then It's Too Late to Help," She Replied Relently.

wished to give the minimum of explanation. Across the table I came again the baffling expression of perplexity and trouble I had seen before.

"You were on the way home, I suppose? Hickey—spoke about seeing you." I floundered, finding it necessary to say something. She looked at me with level, direct eyes.

"No," she returned quietly. "I did not intend to go home. I—well, it doesn't matter! I am going home now."

A woman in a calico dress, with two children, each an exact duplicate of the other, had come quietly down the road. She took in the situation at a glance, and was explosively taught aide.

"You poor things," she said. "you'll take the first road to the left over there, and turn in at the second gate, you will find breakfast on the table and a coffee pot on the stove. And there's plenty of soap and water.

"Don't say one word. There isn't a soul there to see you."

We accepted the invitation and she hurried on toward the excitement and we turned to the left, carefully and helped Miss West to her feet.

"At the second gate to the left," I repeated, "we will find the breakfast I promised you across excitation will be ready for the signal?"

We sold very little for the remainder of the walk. I had almost reached the limit of endurance; with every step the yellow ends of the bandage grated together. We found the farmhouse without difficulty and I confess my wondering if I could hold out to the end of the old alcove walk that led from the road to the door.

"Ahhh be pesked," I said with all the voice I could muster. "Hold the coffee pot!" And then I put down the cup and held up like a jack-knife on the porch floor.

When I came around something hot was being poured down my throat and a dangling voice was saying, "Oh, I hope it will be able to pour it into your mouth. Please open your eyes."

"But I don't want to be in your eyes," I replied drowsily. "I haven't any idea what come over me. It was the pain, I think. Don't let me be a redhot torture." I was sitting by that time and looking across into her face.

Never before or since have I faintly felt, but I would do for reality, a direct wish to be of use to a woman. There was a thrill in every time of her voice that morning. Before long my loyalty to McKnight would step between me and the girl in the chair. Life would develop new complexities.

In those early hours after the wreck, full of pain as they were, there was nothing of the suspicion and distrust that came later. Some of that came and troubles, we were primitive man and woman, without the world for all our. hour was the deserted farmhouse, the slope of wheatfield that led to the road, the woodland lot, the pasture.

We breakfasted together across the honeys table. Our companions, at first sheer condition, became less forced as we ate great slices of bread from the granary oven back of the house, and drank hot fluid that smelled like coffee and tasted like nothing that I have ever swallowed. We found cream in some jars, sunk deep in the chill water of the springhouse. And there was cake, great yellow-brown cures—a basket of them.

"No, I Did Not Intend to Go Home."

all we must starve," she said, right. "I can walk to see a doctor as soon as possible."

"Nonsense," I said warmingly. "Don't mention the arm, please; it is asleep now. Do you think I dare—"

"If I only had a hat," she reflected. "It wouldn't need to be a hat, I suppose. She gave a little cry and darted to the corner. "Look," she said triumphantly. "The very thing. With the green streamers tied up in a bow. The little—the one anyone the child would wind!" I can put $5 or so here—that would buy a dozen of them."

It was a queer affair of straw, that hat, with a wide green and red and a fin that flopped dismally. With a single green streamer she had tacked it up at one side and fitted it to her head. Crop tempor by that, when she wore it it was a thing of joy.

Evidently the lack of head covering had circulated in the place was stated at her find. She left me, screaming a dozen of things and ran back with a bit to the tabledcloth, and ran upstairs to the mirror and the presently upon and water.

I did not see her when she came down. I had gone upstairs with the tabledcloth her, for she seated herself at her find. She left me, screaming a dozen of things and ran back with a bit to the tabledcloth, and ran upstairs to the mirror and the presently upon and water.

It seemed a pity to twist it up again, but I felt that it was the proper thing to do, so I gave it a troublesome and got in her eyes when I tried to twist it up. Funny about hair: A man never knows he has it until he begins to lose it, but it's different with a girl. Something of this unconventional situation began to dawn on her as she put in the last hair pin and patted some stray locks into place.

"I have not told you my name," she said abruptly. "I forgot that because I know who you are, you know nothing about me. I am Alison West, and my home is in Richmond."

So that was it! This was the girl of the letter in John Ollmore's bedside table. The girl McKnight expected to come to Pittsburg the next day. Sunday! She was on her way back to Richmond. Of course, I knew she it make, anyhow? We had been thrown together by the wreck for less than an hour or two at the most we would be back in civilization working in the world. We had remembered her at all, as an unshaven and dirty man, and crazed and full of pain with a soiled Pullman sheet tied around my neck. I drew a deep breath.

"Just a twinge," I said, when she stopped to look at me. "I'm very good of you to let me know, Miss West. I've been extremely delight!! Tell me about you for three months."

"From Bickley McKnight!" She was frankly curious.

"Yes. From Bickley McKnight," I assented. "Well, it may wonder McKnight was crazy about her? I dug my heels into the dust.

"I have been visiting near Cresson, in the mountains," she went on, hesitating. "The person you mentioned, Mrs. Curtis, was my hostess. We—we were on our way—Washington together." She spoke slowly, as if she shave, that I looked like some lost hope of yesterday, and that my left arm pinched outrageously. A man does not rise triumphant above such bandages. The girl, for all her disordered hair and the crumpled linen of her waist, in spite of her aching hat pin and the small gold bag that hung forlornly from a broken chain, looked exceedingly lovely.

"Then I won't leave you alone," I said manfully, and we stumbled on to together. Thus for we had seen nobody from the wreck, but well up the line we came across the tall dark woman who had encouraged lower 11. She had just crossing beside the road, her black hair about her shoulders, and an ugly bruise over her eye. She did not seem to know us, and we found to accompany us. We left her there at last, hobbling incoherently and rolling in her hands a dozen pebbles she had gathered in the road.

The girl shuddered as we went on. Once she turned and glanced at my bandage. "Does it hurt very much?" she asked.

"Its growing rather numb. But it might be worse," I answered mendacitously. If anything in this world could be worse, I had never experienced it.

And so we trudged on barefooted under the summer sun, aching and stiffening and very weary, dogged by leaving behind us the pillar of smoke. It seemed to me that I recovered my senses in the direction we were going, or rather, that we could find a horse and trap to take us into Bedlitmore. The girl smiled when I suggested it.

"We will create a scenashun, won't we?" she asked. "Or queer—or perhaps it's my state of mind—but I keep wishing for a pair of gloves, when I haven't even a hat!"

When we reached the main road we sat down for a moment, and her hair, which had been coming loose for some time, fell over her shoulders in little waves that were quite attractive. It seemed a pity to twist it up again, but I felt that it was the proper thing to do, so I gave it a troublesome and got in her eyes when I tried to twist it up. THE REAL QUESTION

OVERSHADOWING ISSUE OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Effect of Democratic Victory at the Polls is Here Made Plain—Something for Republican Voters to Ponder Over.

The arrogance of Democratic leaders in not only assuming that they will control the next house of representatives, but in declaring that they will pass a tariff-for-revenue-only bill at once, is an issue that overshadows every other question of the campaign. Whatever differences of opinion there may be concerning the present tariff there can be none from a Republican standpoint—a united Republican standpoint—regarding a tariff for revenue-only—which means free trade, or worse than free trade.

We must have government revenues annually amounting to over $700,000,000, and of which must come from customs duties—in other words we must so adjust our tariff as to bring in $15,000,000 from duties on imports. We can do so Great Britain does, taxes and collects the revenue duties which we do not produce, or we can do so by imposing specific duties upon articles that immense importations will be necessary to produce the desired revenue.

Suppose the average duty were put at 10 per cent. That would bring in the necessary $150,000,000 revenue, importations amounting in value to $1,500,000,000 and that does not include imports free of duty and with a large increased free list, and it is a big bid or threatened by Champ Clark and his party, that we may expect a flood of imports at $2,000,000,000, a large portion of which will replace or drive out American production. And further here is mind that 50 per cent of this represents Labor.

Unrestricted to one-half or our work-shops are thrown entirely out of work at once, and the wages of those remaining at work must be cut down to competitive rates. That loss of purchasing power hits the farmer with increased force, for not only do he and his sons buying all luxuries and many necessaries. Then the industries are affected, and may must be laid off and wages reduced. Then follows the closing of factories, business failures of merchants and ruin and want to men, women and children. Is it an idle—an awful price—for an experience that shall teach us a lesson?

But the closing of factories and the reduction of wages is not all that follows buying abroad what we can make at home. These goods must be paid for, and in gold. Before we buy dollars' worth we owe $200,000,000 or $400,000,000 abroad for our freight bills, interest and dividends on foreign investments and tourists' exchange. Our adverse balance of trade then becomes a drainage of gold, means a scarcity of money, means the closing of banks and the bankruptcy of corporations, means and individuals. It means 1837, 1857, 1873 and 1893 and worse.

But after a few months, when our foreign competitors have gained our markets and closed our mills, prices will quickly go up, we shall be at the mercy of foreigners. We will not be secure of the foreigner. We will not have income a year, investments people, paying the price of folly, so far Pinning Opponents to Facts.

Mr. Taft's statesmanlike proclamation has extended itself in his positive demand, oft repeated, for a bill of indictment against the evils which certainly afflicted the country when the Democratic party ruled and the power lasted for four years. Stagnation in public business would be natural result. The Republican party—as fact as clear to Theodore Roosevelt as to to William H. Taft.—Cleveland Leader.

New Law a Success.

As a revenue producer the Payne law has so increased the revenue as to meet the national deficit.

By the improvements. The importations exceed anything ever known before in Republican or Democratic times.

While means that the Payne tariff is a success. There can be no general opposition.

Most Look to Republicans.

The best argument for the Republican cause in the coming campaign will be the contrast between Republican deeds and the utter impotence of the Democratic party to accomplish anything if they were given control of the lower house of congress

The Strenuous Osborn.

It would be a delightful innovation to have a real strenuous man in the executive saddle at Lansing.

Osborn is that man.

Osborn is a high pressure fellow who only touches occasionally on the high spots. He may in some ways even outstrenuous the strenuous Teddy the first, himself.

Osborn, in action, is suggestive of a massive locomotive roaring down the line with the throttle wide open.

Osborn is a man who DOES things. When he takes hold of a proposition, there is going to be DOINGS in the very immediate neighborhood of that proposition.

O-s-b-o-r-n spells SUCCESS.

If or when Osborn goes to Lansing the Michigan governmental dynamo will be connected with a live wire. Cause will keep the machinery of state a humming and the sparks a flying and the people will realize that they have acquired a sure-enough governor.

If you want a man on the job who has the business ability, experience, progressiveness, aggressiveness and executiveness to manage Michigan and make her a successful enterprise, vote for Osborn.—Progressian.

Give This Careful Consideration.

If there are any Michigan Republicans who have it now in mind to desert their party candidates and their party principles through voting for democratic candidates at the coming election there are some questions they should seriously consider before carrying out that intention.

Would a democratic victory in 1910 increase the wages of any worker in the county?

Would it start a single wheel in operation which is idle now?

Would it broaden the market for any fabric which any American mill produces?

Would it sell an additional bushel of corn or wheat, bale of cotton, pound of meat or anything else which the farmer or the planter produces?

No sane person among the 90,000,000 people of the country will answer any of these queries in the affirmative.

Complaint is made that the cost of living is too high. Would the election of a democratic congress this year or a democratic president and congress two years hence lower the cost?

Would it reduce the rent of a tenant anywhere?

Would it cut the price of a yard of cloth, a pair of shoes, a barrel of flour or anything whatever which anybody wears or eats?

Any person who answers yes to any of these latter queries will do so upon the assumption that a democratic victory would close factories and shops, throw hundreds of thousands out of employment, and, by reducing the purchasing power of everybody, compel producers to lower their prices in order to be able to sell anything at all.

This result has accompanied democratic victories of other years. Not in the memory of men and women living today has the democratic party given this country conditions which added to work or to the wages or to prosperity in any section of the union or to any single of national development or individual prosperity.

The democratic party in this campaign stands for the very same policies which have always in the past proved so disastrous.

Think it over again, you voter of Michigan, who have had it in mind to to experiment again in a direction that always in the past has brought regret and retribution.

Saves An Iowa Man's Life

The very grave seemed to yawn before Robert Madsen, of West Burlington, Iowa, when, after seven weeks in the hospital, four of the best physicians gave him up. Then was shown the marvelous curative power of Electric Bitters. For, after eight months of frightful suffering from liver trouble and yellow jaundice, getting no help from other remedies or doctors, five bottles of this matchless medicine completely cured him. Its positively guaranteed for Stomach, Liver or Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Only 50c. at F. G. Hines & Co.

Political Briefs.

Don't worry. Politicians will let you know there is an election in November.

Chase Osborn is meeting with hearty reception throughout the state even better than before the primary campaign, which is a healthy sign and shows that the republicans of Michigan are united in the cause and will give their candidate a big majority in November.

The State Central Committee has absolutely refused to accept money from state employes, even going to the extent of sending it back. Most of the state employes are not lamenting over this fact with the increased cost of living and the papers constantly being circulated throughout the capitol for aid for this cause, that and the other thing.

Remember that election day is now but a short time away, and every voter should exercise his right. It is not only a right, but a demand of good government.

With practically full tickets in the field by all political parties, the vote this fall should be a large one. All parties are showing considerable activity this year.

The voters of Michigan are interested in one very important admission made in the campaign book issued by the Democrat State Central Committee, and that is Mr. Hemans will be "utterly helpless" without a legislature to back him. In other words, the election of a Democratic legislature involving the election of a Democratic United States senator is necessary in order for Mr. Hemans to put into operation a single sentence of his many pledges of promised reform. He will be utterly helpless, Mr. Heman admits. Mr. Osborn as governor will not be utterly helpless. He will have a legislature pledged to the same improvement in state affairs which the Republican state platform sincerely promises in behalf of all its nominees. There is not the slightest value in any desirable direction which would attach to votes cast for the man who in advance of this election admits that under circumstances certain to exist he will be "utterly helpless" to affect any state legislative or administrative betterment.

The farmers of Michigan are especially interested in the results of the coming election. Not only will the decision of the voters on the 8th day of November influence the value of the products of the farm, but it will influence also the value of the farm itself. The changes in the tariff that would inevitably be made by a Democratic congress would have for their first purpose the reduction of the price of farm products, and the loss to the factories and the mills of the state would have a further direct and abrupt influence on farm values and farm products. There is not a farmer in Michigan who could not better afford to give a full week's time in behalf of the Republican candidates than to run the risk of loss which always in past years has come through Democratic victories and which would assuredly come to the farmers of Michigan through such an occurrence this year.

Traverse City Record: William Alcock of Mayfield township was in the city this afternoon with some yellow globe onions that he has raised on his farm in the valley of the Boardman in Union township. These onions are extra fine and he reports harvesting 1,000 bushels from a little better than an acre of river bottom land.

"Biggest catch of fish this year," is the claim made by John Peterson, a fisherman operating about twelve miles north of Menominee. The cause of this statement is a haul of 4,500 pounds of fish in one net. Among this big catch was an immense sturgeon weighing 75 pounds. This is generally conceded to be one of the largest catches that has been made on Green bay, and is the largest catch that has been made. The fishing this year has been good for the past few weeks, and the fishermen have been reaping a rich harvest.

Figures compiled show that 5,835 rats have been purchased by the city of Cadillac during the last year at the price of 5 cents per rat. The rat-buying stunt originated with the rule of Mayor Metheany, who was after a cleaner Cadillac. He also originated the idea of giving away flypaper. The largest rat brought in for bounty measured twenty inches from tip to tip. The largest family of rats numbered sixteen. During the last year one store repeatedly sold out its supply of rat traps. There accidents have occurred that are traced to rat hunting, boys being accidentally shot while hunting the rodents.

London's Town Hall.

The guildhall is an important public building in London, which may be regarded as the town hall, and is the place of assembly of several courts, as the court of common council, the court of aldermen, the chamberlain's court and a police court presided over by one of the aldermen. The construction of the building was begun in 1411. It was partially destroyed in the great fire of 1666, but was soon restored, and in 1789 it was altered to its present form. The hall proper is 153 feet in length, 48 in breadth and 55 in height. It has been famous for centuries for the magnificence of its civic feasts. The first time it was used for this purpose was in 1500, when Sir John Shaw, goldsmith, who had been knighted on the field of Bosworth, first gave here the lord mayor's feast.
